Empire Sea Cadets Converge On Ottawa

MONTREAL, July 18 — There will be plenty of "yo-ho-hos" but not a single bottle of rum — not even "a dead man's chest" — at Camp Ewing, Que., July 26.

Until Aug. 5, Camp Ewing, operated like a warship, will be a youth forum of some of the Empire's outstanding teenage boys.

Organization plans by the Navy League and R. C. N. Sea Cadet Liaison officers got under way more than a year ago, and the first Empire Sea Cadet camp...

to his wife. He wants her to look up to him and admire him, and when she begins pointing out his defects to him it humiliates him so that he can't stand it.

Take your man "as is" or leave him in peace. DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX: I am an old maid, 59, tired of teaching and living alone. I am sure there is some one somewhere that I could make very happy, but I have no opportunity to meet people.

ANSWER: I am afraid not. Most of us have to see our visions of what we would like to do in the thin air and content ourselves with what we never meet. There are so many men who need good wives and so many women who could make them so happy, and there is no way to bring them together.

Certainly you are not too old to be a travelling companion, but I am afraid there would be very little chance of getting such a job. DOROTHY DIX MARITIME CROP NOTES — According to the Bank of Montreal Crop Reports — "Warm weather, with generally ample moisture, has produced good growing conditions and all crops are flourishing. Light rains would be beneficial in some sections. The season continues about ten days ahead of average. Grains are showing satisfactory progress and prospects are good in most districts. The hay crop is good, though in parts, due to dry weather, will be less than average; hay-making is well under way and weather has been good for curing. Grass pastures generally are in very good condition. Apples are doing well and give promise of a good crop. The harvesting of strawberries is almost completed; except for a few areas, affected by an unusually dry spell, the crop is excellent. Raspberries and blueberries show good promise. Potatoes are developing satisfactorily under growing conditions; no serious blight is reported and early varieties are expected to be on the market shortly.

TOURIST MONEY TRAVELS WIDELY — EDMONTON, July 18 — (CP) — What happens to that bill you just spent? Where does it go and who handles it before it gets laid away in a bank or an old sock? These questions have been puzzling the experts for some time and the Pacific Northwest Travel Association thinks it has some of the answers.

The association tagged 30 United States $5 bills here on June 4, instructing anyone who handled them to write the organization and say what happened to the money.

The object of the experiment is just where tourist dollars travel and their effect on the west's economy.

Alfred Blyth, Alberta president of the P.N.T.A., says letters have come in telling of the bills' travels as far east as Mendham, Sask.

Within a few weeks we expect to get hundreds of letters from holders of the 30 bills, and it will give a good idea of just what each United States dollar means to a Canadian economy.

One letter from a lunch counter operator in DeBolt, Alta., said "I have a lunch counter here and today received bill No. 22. I passed the bill on to our postmaster, in payment for a money order." The bill has been traced through several other transactions in DeBolt.

Bill No. 7 took a long trip to Vancouver after being picked up in Macleod, Alta. Only one of the 30 bills still is known to be in Edmonton.

AFRICA FLIGHT

Val Glagud

In fact Sir George had to admit—and would in fact have cheerfully admitted—that in publicity the expedition's failure had achieved more than could have been secured by the most spectacular and blinding of successes in the shape of record-breaking flights.

And yet he walked to and fro in his office, frowning, muttering to himself, and conscious only of a sense of the most profound disquiet.

He told himself that it was ridiculous. He reminded himself of what might have happened: that Carol, his brother, and Janet Manson might all have perished. He reminded himself that he had never cared for young Sothens in life, and that he had actually been disquieted by his friendship with Carol. He assured himself that his indignity had sensibly diminished, and his devotion to Carol was obvious.

Sir George came reluctantly to the conclusion that it was his sister-in-law who was the nigger in the woodpile. Yet Janet Manson had done nothing—at least nothing that a man could get hold of, thought George Manson irritably, rolling an unlighted cigar between his fingers, so that at last he broke the outer leaf and swore.

He turned as he did so, and saw Cynthia Wright in the doorway. That she must have overheard him did not improve George Manson's temper.

"Why didn't you knock?" he exploded. "I did," replied Miss Wright coldly.

"Well?" "You won't forget your dinner-party tonight, Sir George? You'd better call at your manicurist's—and it's full dress."

"And," continue Cynthia Wright remorselessly, "it's ten minutes to six already."

Sir George stared at her. At that moment, with his pouched eyes bulging, and his thick neck reddening, he presented an ineffectual comparison with a goaded bull.

"Why have you bullied me so disgracefully about this wretched dinner-party ever since I decided to give it?" he demanded of Cynthia Wright's eyebrows shot up. But she said nothing.

"You have, Cynthia, you know you have. You've disapproved of me from the beginning, haven't you?" The secretary shrugged her shoulders.

"I thought it was too soon after the U.K. tragedy, and I told you so. I still think so. But that's just a personal opinion."

Sir George moved away irritably. "I considered all that aspect of it," he said with the false emphasis of a man seeking to justify a bad case. "It's really no more than a family party. It's not as if I were giving it in a restaurant. The engagement has been announced for over a week. It's not fair to Carol not to celebrate it in some way."

"It's true," murmured Cynthia Wright, "that the news value of the story is beginning to get cold."

Sir George bridled. "That had never entered my head!" he snapped. "At least it wasn't the deciding factor at all!"

"Quite so, Sir George," soothingly. "Besides, Cynthia, I'm worried about Carol. The girl hasn't been herself since she came back. She seems to be brooding over poor Sothens' tragedy—and should never have allowed her to go on the trip!"

"It's natural that she should be upset, surely? She had a bad time, and young Sothens was a great friend of hers."

"Of course," agreed Sir George a little absently. "Gallant fellow." Miss Wright took her courage in both hands. "That's why I think this party is a mistake," she said hurriedly. "Don't you think his absence will be a little—emphasized?"

"The dead must bury their dead sometime!" said George Manson decisively. "She must face up to a new life and the sooner the better."

To that sort of platitude Cynthia Wright had nothing to say. And Sir George, deprived of his back wall, found himself unable to continue the game. "You'll be there in plenty of time, of course," he said, putting on his hat. And without waiting for answer, he departed for his manicurist.

Cynthia Wright—who had to get back to South Kensington, dress, and return to Buckingham Gate—signed once, and retired to look her desk and powder her nose. There were occasions and this was one of them—when she felt that she more than earned the generous salary paid to her by Sir George Manson.

Canada Could Supply Half U.K. Food Needs

OTTAWA, July 17 — (CP) — Canada could supply the United Kingdom with more than half her annual food requirements — with the exception of bacon — if the U.K. had the ability to pay. That's the view of Canadian trade experts.

Generally, Britain's dollar scarcity was responsible for a recent dip in the amount of food stuffs moving across the Atlantic from Canadian shores, said a Trade Department spokesman.

It also was responsible for British buying more foodstuffs from non-Canadian and other countries on a barter basis.

However, notwithstanding the dollar shortage, the U.K. still is making large-scale food purchases in the Dominion, and the Dominion government is striving to keep open that market.

Currently, Canada is supplying the U.K. with about $600,000,000 worth of food a year. This amount is far below war-year purchases when Canada produced and sold to the U.K. more than 50 per cent of that country's food requirements.

Shipments of Canadian salmon and apples will not be as great as they were in previous years, but for different reasons.

The U.K. started cutting salmon purchases in Canada in 1947, took no salmon in 1948 and just lately has agreed to buy a shipment of 410,000 cases to be paid through Marshall-aid allotments.

In the same way she started cutting purchases of apples in the early post-war period. In 1938 Canada supplied the U.K. with 300,000,000 pounds of apples, in 1947 this shrunk to 86,000,000

Resident Honoured

Mr. T. A. Brothers who has been a resident of Central Royalty for 25 years, was honoured by the community recently with a presentation and gift.

Mr. T. A. Brothers, Central Royalty, P.E.I. Dear Mr. Brothers:

It is with sincere regret that we learn of your intention of leaving the district and making your home elsewhere.

Having been a resident for the past 25 years, you and the late Mrs. Brothers have shown us a sample of true Christian stewardship and neighbourliness. During that period you never failed to give great assistance and timely advice when called upon. Your home was always open to us and many can recall the hours spent in friendly chat and no one ever left that home without feeling assured they had been a welcome guest.

Many changes have taken place in the district in the time mentioned, many people have come and gone, but no one having had your acquaintance, left without a good word for your generosity and sociability, two factors which go to make community spirit felt.

We hope you will always claim Central Royalty as your home and we wish you to feel assured of a friendly welcome at any time.

We also hope the little gift which accompanies this address may remind you of your many friends in Central Royalty.

Signed on behalf of the residents of Central Royalty, Central Royalty, P.E.I. July 14, 1949.
