"Seven Sweethearts"

Tender Love Story Of Dutch Town In America

Seven of the screen's prettiest and most promising starlets are featured in the engaging "Seven Sweethearts," which opens today at the Prince Edward Theatre.

Kathryn Grayson, who operates a hotel for their eccentric Dutch father, is appealing. Her dramatic voice is heard in two numbers written especially for the picture: "Little Tingle-Tangle Toes" and "You and the Waltz and I."

Van Heflin in the role of Henry, brash newspaperman covering a tulip festival in the quaint Dutch village of Little Delft, Michigan, brings another of his vigorous characterizations to the screen. In contrast to his part in "Johnny Eager," Heflin plays Henry with gaiety and charm and his love scenes with Kathryn Grayson are remarkably tender.

Marsha Hunt, portraying the eldest daughter Regina, a spoiled stage-struck beauty who tricks Henry into a false elopement, handles her role convincingly.

Piquant Story

Cecilia Parker, Frances Racburn, Dorothy Morris, Frances Rafferty and Peggy Moran, the five remaining sisters, bring freshness and vitality to a piquant story.

New Canadian History By Leacock

In Choice Edition

There have been many histories of Canada, but few published in such magnificent style as that which the Gazette Printing Company, Ltd., Montreal, has just turned out for the House of Seagram under the title "Canada: The Foundations of Its Future".

The author is the distinguished Canadian writer and educationist, Prof. Stephen Leacock, who does full justice to his opportunities in this choice, limited edition.

In a foreword, Prof. Leacock says the aim of his narrative is "to show the foundations of our present national life. The large canvas of our Canadian history carries a wonderful wealth of light and colour, in the romance of exploration and adventure. In its foreground are the waving banners that mark the alternating fortunes of war. But set within all this is the real picture, the deeper col-

Dutch Traitor Shot To Death

LONDON, Feb. 8 — (CP) — The lone traitor among Holland's Generals, Hendrik Alexander, died Saturday after being shot before his home in the Hague, and tonight the Netherlands News Agency Aneta said the Germans were planning "drastic reprisals" against the population.

Both Aneta and the Berlin radio announced the death of Lt.-Gen. Seyffardt, chief of the Netherlands army staff for five years before his retirement in 1934. Berlin said there was no doubt the traitor was the assassin or his arrest. "The 70-year-old General had been appointed Feb. 1 by the Dutch Nazi Leader, Anton A. Mussert, to raise a Netherlands army for service on the Russian front.

Dorothy Dix Says—

a family is the one who is oftenest offered up as a sacrifice to the green-eyed monster. Her parents don't admit to themselves that their attitude towards her is prompted by sheer jealousy, but it is. They can't bear the thought of her being grown up and going to parties and having beaux and good times away from them, so they deprive her of every vestige of personal liberty and make her a prisoner of love.

Especially does father see red when he thinks of his precious little pet ewe lamb stepping out and going places with some lad whom he pictures as a wolf in sheep's clothing, and who may be falling in love with him and marrying him. So father does the best he can to stave off this catastrophe by keeping his darling under lock and key and never letting her have any of the pleasures that belong to her time of life.

To this column come thousands of letters every year from girls who are in their twenties whose fathers have never permitted them to have boys come to see them at their houses, or to go on dates, or to go to any place of amusement livelier than the weekly prayer meeting with him or their mother along to watch them and see that they get no fun out of it.

Father's alibi for his conduct is that he is trying to protect his daughters and keep them unspotted from the world, but the real lowdown on it is that he is just jealous. He wants no rival near his throne.

TEEN AGE TECHNIQUE LEADS TO MARRIAGE

Keep a girl isolated from masculine society until she is 22 or 23 years old and you have practically doomed her to spinsterhood. For it is when they are in their teens that they make the contacts and develop the friendships with boys that later on lower into white tulle and orange blossoms. Also, it is then that they acquire a technique in handling men that the girl who is kept segregated in the family circle never learns. She is always too standoffish or too eager. She takes men too seriously. It is only the girl who has played with boys and who knows how to run after a chap, while making him think she is running away from him.

It is parental jealousy that makes old maids by a mother and father picking on every young man who came a-courting their daughter until their disillusion with him. Many an advantageous marriage has been nipped in the bud by father making ribald remarks about her suitor's clothes, or the way his hair was cut, or the kind of an automobile he drove, or by mother criticizing the way he walked, and always harping on the fact that his great-grandfather was born on the wrong side of the tracks. Nothing was really wrong with the lad. It was only that mother and father couldn't stand for Mary to admire anyone more than she did them.

Parental jealousy wrecks many a marriage. John has picked out for a wife a girl who just suited him, and he would never have found out that she wasn't a model of perfection if mother hadn't kept calling his attention to her every defect. Maybe mother didn't deliberately start out to break up John's home and half-orphan his little children when she began pointing out his wife's faults to him. She just couldn't endure seeing him happy with another woman, and for another woman to be first with him, and so her jealousy drove her on to wrecking his life.

The jealousy of men and women for each other is dynamite. Parental jealousy is TNT. Handle it with care.

St. camlined for service and saving—the new uniform of the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) As uniforms now in use were over-stuffed will be issued. Outstanding change is the new cap, fitting the head at the back, flaring high above the visor. The tunic has false upper pockets, patch pockets below, and the skirt is tailored in six-gore style.

To make gaeatcoats warmer and more comfortable, an inverted pleat and half-beat at the back ensure easier fit. Lapels flare higher, and the diagonally-slanted pockets have a soothing effect. Color, materials and insignia of the uniform are unchanged. The only "extra" is a smart, comfy shoulder bag of blue leatherette, to be carried on the left side.
