Mr. McLean was formerly principal of the MacDonald Consolidated School at Hillsboro, is now on a visit to his native province. In his address he gave a very interesting description of the activities of the Kiwanis Club in Vancouver, and made a most favourable impression, his remarks being received with prolonged applause. The chairman, Mr. J. M. Murray, stated that it was one of the best addresses ever given before the Club.

HOWARD—WRIGHT—Lorette, Man., June 7.—A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Lorette, Man., on June 7th, when Mildred Evelyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wright became the bride of Mr. Sydney Howard, Newdale, Man. Miss Wright entered the sitting room with her father, who gave her in marriage, and took her place beneath the floral arch. The bride was attired in pale blue georgette and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses, and was attended by her sister Thelma. The groom was attended by his brother, John. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Leach, of Elmwood, in the presence of about fifty guests. The numbers and quality of the gifts received by the happy couple, did more than testify to their popularity. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful engraved wrist watch, and to the bridesmaid a lovely purse, and to the groomsmen, gold cuff links. After the wedding supper, the happy couple left for a trip through the States, and on their return will reside in Winnipeg.

FIVE MINUTE CAKE

The following recipe for a five-minute cake is also called the "lazy wife cup cake." It is a cup cake put together in the easiest possible manner, and we can use the regulation recipe or lessen some of the ingredients somewhat. Jocosely, it has been said that this is a cake batter which it is a hour when Yorkshire folks assemble for the family tea. During the journey, hiding moodily behind a book, of which he did not read a word, he tried to picture Poppy's reception of his farewell letter.

There were three brother officers in the compartment glibly discussing the war. Bradford gathered from their outlook and pronouncements on strategy and other matters connected with the fighting fronts that they had never been out of England. One of the young lieutenants, nettled by his silence, tapped his own forehead to indicate to the others that shell shock or some other form of mental delusion might account for it.

Bradford did not observe the significant gesture nor attempt to take any part in the conversation after bidding them a civil good day when he joined their company. The short, business-like epistle which had just then been born in travail in a London bedroom, and posted at midnight at the nearest pillar. It had been the last of many futile attempts. In those he had torn up he had run the whole gamut of emotions provoked by the occasion, and had somewhat eased his own overburdened and raging soul.

Now he was the prey of a steady, impenetrable gloom which deepened as he reached the place he called home, from which he had been torn by force born of war. Unit he had met the last and greatest force, however, he had dearly loved his home and had no fault to find with it.

Miss Katherine McIntyre, who lives with her nephew, Mr. Peter McIntyre, at his farm in New Annan, attained the great age of 104 yesterday. She is as far as is known the oldest resident of P. E. Island. Miss McIntyre celebrated her birthday quietly in bed, and received a number of callers who extended to her their felicitations. This charming old lady has enjoyed wonderful health right up to the present time. She had a mild attack of influenza in March, and although now quite recovered spends most of her time in her bed, but gets up each day and sits in her room for a short time. She still takes quite an intelligent interest in the affairs of the community, and the world at large, and is a constant reader of the Charlottetown Guardian of which she has been a subscriber for many years.

A representative of the Guardian had the pleasure of calling to see her again this year and found her not very much altered. Just a little more frail perhaps than on June 24th, 1929.

Miss McIntyre is very interesting to talk to, and can relate many stories of the life of the early settlers. The chief event which stands out in her memory is the Great Fire of Miramichi, which occurred when Miss McIntyre was about ten years of age. This wonderful old lady was born quite near her present home. Her father emigrated from Scotland when a young man and later married a young lady living in that vicinity.

When Miss McIntyre celebrated her one hundredth birthday, she said she was beginning to feel old, but she does not feel very much older now after another four years of life. If the old lady is spared until next year she intends to have a big celebration. Her recipe for attaining a great age is moderation in all things and an active interest in things in general. Plenty of work and some recreation.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Davis and others, how they worked for the up-building of Canada, establishing hundreds of large and small factories, employing thousands of skilled laborers, and their families. Where are they now today? Many factories closed down, and thousands of our skilled laborers gone to the United States to work there manufacturing goods which should be made in Canada and which we must buy from the Americans. If we had those thousands of families whom the American farmers now supply, what a market for our farmers have now to sell!

Now Sir, political matters are living up here, and we are continually meeting Liberals making mis-statements and denying much which Conservatives well know. Still there are much we cannot confirm, that is in numbers of factories closed since Mackenzie King became Premier, and about how many families moved from our factories to the U. This cake can be baked in individual portions in muffin tins and loaf either on the top of the little cake or on the bottom and be as dainty as a bonbon. We can use these proportions: One cup sugar, one-fourth cup butter or other fat, one and one-half cups well-sifted pastry flour, one teaspoon baking powder, two eggs, one teaspoon vanilla, two-thirds cup milk.

It is easy to see that this may be a rather thin batter; therefore, it must be put together as expertly as possible, even in this lazy wife way. The beating must be excellent. Put the flour, sugar and butter into a mixing bowl, break the eggs into a measuring cup, fill up the cup with milk—it will be about two-thirds of a cup of milk—add the vanilla, pour this wet in with the dry ingredients and beat well for five minutes. If the batter for this cake is not vigorously beaten it will have funnel-like holes. It is easy to beat because the batter is thinner than that for regulation cup cake.

Of course, it is a delusion and a snare to say or think that any cake can be made in five minutes, even through the combinding of ingredients can be done in that time. The oven must be lighted, the utensils got out the ingredients collected, and then there is the baking and icing of the cake. Finally, there is the cleaning up, which is simple if left until the batter dries.

Record Of Failure And Incompetency

1927 PROMISES

What was the Premier's attitude with respect to taxation reduction when he was in Opposition? I have here a report of the Premier's remarks during the debate on the Draft Address in 1927, as published in the Patriot of March 8th of that year. They are headed: "Mr. Saunders Scores the Stewart Government"; and this is what he says:

"With the knowledge that we have received our $40,000 and with every reasonable assurance that we are going to get $125,000 additional subsidy, altogether conditions are going to be improved $165,000 annually. You would naturally expect that in this document, the speech which has been placed before you, you would have some reference to the fact that we hope at least to be able to relieve the burdens we have been suffering under for the past few years. But oh no!... since you got into power the only thing is wipe out that tax catcher (the poll tax) and substitute another tax (the gasoline tax) that operate seriously against the people of this country. Talk about taking everything valuable and intangible. You have taxed the living to death and since they have died what have you done? You have increased the succession duties on the dead... I am satisfied and I am convinced that you will recognize that the people of this country are not prepared to stand for their estates having to pay large succession duties. You will say our Succession Duty Act is no more serious in this Province than in any other Province. I will admit that. But the Government has been increasing taxation and while you were in opposition you were objecting to this but now you have been adding taxation on taxation until the people are now expecting some relief from that. But oh no! Not a word of that kind!"

And mark this, Mr. Speaker: "As leader of the party I want to say that one of the planks of the Liberal party, if returned to power, will be at least a reduction in the auto tax and a downward revision of taxation generally."

That is the statement of policy by the then leader of the Opposition who Premier Saunders.

"I make that statement," he says further, "and I repeat it so that there will be no mistake about it. We know that we are going to be in a position to get $165,000 more, and we believe that in view of these facts, with proper economy, as we were doing for four or five years while in power from 1919 to 1923; I repeat that we were able then with reduced revenue to make revenue and expenditure meet and have a modest surplus of $2,000 to $5,000 every year. With this increased amount I am satisfied that the people of this country are now expecting some reduction in taxes. My hon. friends are as mute as oysters!"

PREMIER'S MEMORY JOGGED

Do you remember it, Mr. Premier? Do you remember your statement, made on the floor of this Chamber in the Draft Address debate of 1927?

PREMIER SAUNDERS: Didn't we reduce the auto taxes?

DR. McMILLAN: Do you remember your words, that you were going to do the very same things that we did? You said you would do them; you declared most positively that it would be a part of your policy if you were returned to power. If that is so, why blame us for taking the very same course? Now you turn around and say that we are the people who took off those taxes and deprived the country of so much revenue. Yet you put it in your own platform in going to the country in 1927: "On obtaining an increased subsidy a downward revision of taxation." The great point is, of course, that you were unable to get an increase in subsidy. We put that promise in our platform four years before you did; we obtained an increased subsidy, and we kept our promise and reduced the taxes. You put it in your platform in 1927; you haven't received your increased subsidy yet, and you blame us for carrying out what you said yourself you would do. (Applause.)

Now I have said about enough. I am afraid there are one or two gentlemen whom I am keeping out of this House. I don't know whether you missed them, Mr. Speaker, but you may have noticed that my hon. friend from Morell (Mr. H. H. Cox), the colleague of the Minister of Public Works, has not been seen in this House, except for a few minutes, for some days past. Is he afraid to come back because he thinks that the "Yankee Doodle" will say something to him? If that is the case I shall reserve my remarks about the hon. gentleman for a more opportune occasion. They will keep; they will multiply and likely produce something for him to remember.

There was one thing we witnessed on the floor of this House today that I cannot refrain from commenting on. There was a very nice scrap going on when the House was in committee; and the members on this side of the House were sitting "as mute as oysters." A bill was being put through regarding the importation of mink. I wish the Minister of Agriculture was in his seat, because I would like to say this to him: If he thinks that he is ever going to be Premier of this Province, and that, I believe, is his idea just as soon as the Premier sees another Judgement coming, I can tell him that he didn't put his stock up very much today. When this bill came before committee some days ago there was some objection to it; and it was not very long before the telephone rang and Summerside was called up and notified that the Opposition were objecting to the Mink Bill. There was nothing in that; the Opposition were not objecting to the bill but they were trying to point out some discrepancies in it. So the bill was held over. This morning it went into committee for the second time, sponsored by the Minister of Agriculture, and a very fine scrap developed. My hon. colleague, the leader of the Opposition, was silent, and, strange to say, I was silent too. We were all silent on this side of the House; and what was the result? That bill has now gone through and it will become an Act of this Legislature. And, Mr. Speaker, it contains an outrageous principle. The fact that it was ultra vires was properly drawn attention to by my hon. friend from Springfield, supported by the Premier himself who, I believe, gave the correct interpretation of the law on this point. Do you suppose the Minister of Agriculture would listen to it? Not at all! He ignored his leader. He knows more law than the Premier! That is just the trouble with him. He has moderated a good deal in the years that we have been trying to teach him, but he has not moderated enough to take law from his leader. I would be prepared myself to accept the statement of the Premier on a question of law, but not so the Minister of Agriculture. He says: "No; we will put this through, and if any harm is done it can be remedied at the next session." That is a very poor policy, Mr. Speaker.

It was tried last year, and it resulted in trouble. I am afraid my hon. friend from New Haven is right, that the Minister of Agriculture likes to be a little too much in the limelight. He is just a little too arrogant, and if he thinks that he is going to succeed to the Premiership by those tactics, I want to say that we would be a rather dangerous man in that position. Supposing there should be a Judgeship vacant in the next year or two and
