New varieties of apples developed at the Experimental Farm were shown by W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, and these secured a gold medal diploma at Brussels, where only one

The horticultural division has in previous years been awarded seven silver medals for valuable varieties of apples shown at exhibitions on the North American Continent, and officials here expressed gratification at the new honors achieved in Europe.

Hunter of Moose Is Justly Punished

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 9.—The open season on moose in Maine this fall resulted in the killing of at least 78 bulls and 11 cows, according to Willis E. Parsons, commissioner of inland fisheries and game. As a result of the shooting of the cows there have been at least nine convictions and others who killed the giant females are expected to be punished. Mr. Parsons said that "it will be many years before the state recovers from this moose slaughter and many claim that the moose is worth more to the state alive than dead. A bull moose is a great attraction to campers and sportsmen and it is quite a feat among sportsmen and vacationists to photograph big game, and staying here all summer for that purpose.

"Bruin has come in for his share or sport furnished the hunters and many have been killed this season on the ridge and higher land to which they were driven by the high water in the swamps and lowlands."

Many sections of Maine reported more deer killed this year than for many years past. There was also a noticeable increase in ruffed grouse throughout the woods of the state with promises for a good season later.

In Memoriam

MRS. JOHN GILLAN

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Francis Handrahan, Pisquid, the death occurred of Mrs. John Gillan, at the age of 76 years.

On Friday evening she was seized with a slight illness, which gradually became worse. The doctor was immediately summoned, but before he arrived she lapsed into unconsciousness, from which she did not recover and her gentle spirit passed away on Sunday, Dec. 11th.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Annie Sinnot, was a daughter of the late Daniel Sinnot of Morell, and during her early life taught school most successfully at Morell, Rear, Cable Head and Peakes Road.

She married John Gillan of Saint Patrick's Road who predeceased her thirty one years ago leaving her with two small children, Gertrude and Peter, the latter being killed a few years later by accident.

Through these most painful losses she exemplified to the highest degree the virtues of Christian Patience and Fortitude.

To those whose privilege it was to know her was to fully appreciate her stately worth. She was an exemplary Christian lady, virtuous and kind, whose word was her bond, will be greatly missed by her large number of friends, who shall always cherish her sweet memory. She leaves to mourn besides her sorrowing daughter Mrs. F. Hancock, two sisters, Mrs. T. McCarthy, Boston, Mass., and Mrs. John Dougan, Peaks Station. Also two brothers, Peter and John D. Sinnot, Morell.

ST. PETERS HARBOR SCHOOL CONCERT

A very enjoyable concert was given in St. Peter's Harbour school on the evening of Dec. 22nd by the pupils of the school, under the direction of their teacher Miss Irene Warren.

The school room, which was filled to its utmost capacity was pleasantly decorated for the occasion. The happy expectant faces of the children presented a lively scene, while in one corner stood a beautiful Christmas tree. Mr. Theodore Anderson acted as chairman. Good order prevailed and the evening was one of gaiety and enjoyment from start to finish. The children acquitted themselves royally, every number on the program being carried out most admirably. At the conclusion of the program Santa Claus appeared and unloaded the richly laden tree, showering gifts upon all the children. Remarks were made by Messrs. J. W. McEwen and Harry McEwen, expressing their appreciation of the good work done by Miss Warren and congratulating her and the pupils on the splendid performance so cleverly carried out.

During the evening Mrs. Earle Drake delighted the audience with fancy dancing. Mr. R. McDonald, furnishing music on the violin. Following is the program:

scattered to the ball room to set her heart aflutter when, as pretty Mercy Coles and daughter of the Governor, she waltzed with him to the strains of some sweet song.

The three pieces of old furniture seemed forlornly out of place in a dealer's shop after more than three score years of loving care.

The furnishings that came and went from Old Government House have been scattered far and wide. An effort has recently been made to trace some of it and retrieve it. To-day the official Government House is the private residence of Lieutenant-Governor Heertz, and there he has found in places for numerous pieces of historic interest. But the walls of the Heertz home are not elastic and much had to be stored away in the capacious attic. Some day, all lovers of old things upon the island hope it will be possible to rehabilitate the old mansion and install once more its scattered treasures and house the island's Governor in his right and proper setting.

However, the bulk of the old furniture came in the days when the island seamen sailed around the world, trading and adventuring. From the descendants of the Selkirk Settlers there came no less than three hundred deep sea captains. Sailor fashion, these men brought their families fine bits from far-away ports, and so you come upon furniture from Old and New England and treasures from the Orient as well.

I spent one night in a country house in a region celebrated for its seamen. I mounted to a room under the gables with an old-fashioned oil lamp in my hand. I sat it down and surveyed the quaint room. There was a little old spool-turned bed, covered with a tufted quilt, in one corner. Beside it stood a rocker, swathed in a "tidy" with cushions on seat and back. There was an intriguing line to that old chair and in a twinkling I had it stripped of its disguise, and there was revealed as pretty a painted New England rocker as you might wish. It was black with a flower design across the top, had a cunningly cut seat and slender spindles. Its owner knew nothing of its origin, but I could have told her it came in a sailing ship, probably from Boston, when the vogue for painted furniture flourished there, a century ago.

Charming little old spool-turned beds have now fallen to the estate of garden seats, or even to garden fences! One very good example of this old colonial bedstead fell in the hands of a furniture lover for a dollar and a half, and now, restored, is one of her chief treasures.

Empire furniture, both English and American productions, is plentiful on the island, and Hepplewhite and Sheraton style card tables and work tables are by no means rare. There are also many genuine pieces of Duncan Phyfe's furniture which travelled up the coast in the days when the famous American cabinet-maker kept a hundred men at work in his shops. You will see slender fluted legs and brass-tipped feet in many an island drawing-room. Occasionally the mistress of some old Colonial home will show you with native pride some piece from the workshops of the island's most distinguished cabinet-maker, Mark Butcher. He worked in the oppressive age of Victorian fashions, but he managed to restrain the influences of the day and had an honest regard for both comfort and elegance. His carved frames are very attractive, and his chairs and sofas are worth possessing for their own sakes as well as for their associations.

Unfortunately the island was combed from end to end by enterprising dealers from across the line before the islands woke to the value of their possessions and enormous stocks of furniture were shipped out. Moreover, the island still lacks a historical society which might help in preserving its genuine relics, or a museum in which its historic pieces could, with safety, be deposited by descendants of colonial celebrities or present-day owners.
