John Agnew and Mrs. Agnew of Alberton and Charlottetown.

HABEAS CORPUS GRANTED — The adjourned hearing of an application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of James McNeill of Summerside was heard by Mr. Justice A. E. Arsenault yesterday morning. The application was granted and the prisoner ordered discharged. Costs of $60 were ordered to be paid by the Crown. McNeill was convicted and sentenced on a charge of theft in Summerside on May 1, 1945, by Judge Lloyd G. Lewis. Subsequently the Attorney General issued an order for the removal of the prisoner from Prince County jail to Queen's County jail. His Lordship held that the order of the Attorney General was null and void as it was ultra vires his powers to make such an order. Attorney General Large, assisted by G. R. Holmes, appeared for the Crown and Lester O'Donnell for the prisoner.

MISS THOMAS BECOMES BRIDE. — Miss Laura Sophie Thomas, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Thomas of Southport, who has been in New York City for the past year and a half, was married on Sunday August 5th, to Mr. John O'Brien of New York City. The ceremony took place in the beautiful Parish Church of Our Holy Redeemer at Freeport, Long Island, New York, and was performed by the Reverend John J. Mahon Pastor of the Parish, assisted by Father Daly. The attendants were Mrs. Adele Durlacher and Mr. Edward Durlacher at whose residence in Freeport following the ceremony an afternoon reception and dinner were given for the bride and groom and guests. Father Mahon will be remembered by many of the religious community of Prince Edward Island as having visited various of the Parishes on several occasions in recent years. Two sisters of the bride, Miss Blanche Thomas and Miss Rachel Thomas are serving with the Canadian Women's Army Corps in Europe. Mr. and Mrs. O'brien will reside in New York City.

Cornwall Notes

(By F. H. MacArthur)

If Robert Burns had been the victim of Asthma he should never have written his famous Address to the Toothache. No. Sir! A bad toothache can cause one much distress, but Asthma in its worst form is indeed "the hill of all diseases."

I know because I am just getting over a three weeks' attack which leaves me dejected, discouraged and almost a physical wreck.

Today, however, certain events came about which helped to offset the darker skies of life. The first, a delicious parcel of fruit, the gift of the Meadowbank W. I. made me realize that others were thinking about me in my hours of agony. And to those good people I offer my humble thanks.

And this morning's mail brought three letters—very wonderful letters too. The first one contained the three greatest words in the English language — enclosed find cheek.

The second was from an old, old friend who has made of correspondence an "art." She writes in such a pleasant, happy vein that one simply cannot remain long in the valley of despondency.

And the third letter bore a Cuban post-mark and reached me via air mail. It was from an old schoolmate whom I had not seen or heard from in over 25 years. As a rule, I do not permit others to read my mail, but I am making an exception in this case and so here's her letter with but one or two paragraphs missing.

Havana, Cuba
Aug. 2, 1945

Dear Frank—

You will surely be surprised to hear from me I know. I have been enjoying your news items so much in The Guardian from time to time, also occasional poems. Why do you not write and publish a volume of them? I would say from the samples that you had talent.

Have been thinking of old school days and friends. How we have scattered and so many have gone beyond our vale. We all seemed to have been a wandering generation so very few of us have settled at home.

After a varied nursing career of almost 30 years I decided to retire, so came to Cuba in 1943 and married an old friend of some years standing. He is a Scotchman and a Canadian (no better breed, don't you agree?) He is a veteran of World War I so we did not have to worry about his being taken in this one although he would have enlisted had he had better health.

Cuba as you know is also an island. There are quite a number of transient Canadians here, bankers, diplomats and businessmen. The new Canadian minister here Valincourt, seems to be quite popular. I think Cuba is trying to sponsor more trade with Canada in the future. I see many canned Canadian products on the store shelves recently. Among them canned clams and herring from Charlottetown, P.E.I. I was as excited as a child the first time I saw the clams and we ate a whole can of them.

There is a large Anglo-American colony here consisting mostly of high ranking army officials, diplomats, bankers, merchants and business czars. They live mostly in a beautiful section called The Country Club (original eh?). There is a large negro population. The original habitants before the Spaniards being negro. They have intermarried with Chinese, Japanese and poor whites so one sees many strange combinations on the streets. The remaining population is of Spanish decent. They have intermarried among Americans. A great number of the better class young people go to school and college in U. S. A. The real Cuban is very proud, arrogant and independent. I might add to that insolent and indolent. Now draw your own conclusions!

The climate although tropical is very moderate. The sun of course is burning. Especially at midday. If one stays in the shade there is always a breeze. I have really minded the heat of summer in Boston much more than here. They have dry and rainy seasons. We literally had not a drop of rain from last December until well into May. Everything was brown and dry. The cattle died by hundreds from lack of feed and water. The rainy season is not as I pictured it from our school geographies. During the summer months (June to October) it rains and thunders every day about the same time (usually early evening). The skies literally open and the rain spills down. The streets are a rushing river in no time. It rains about an hour then the sun is out clear and brilliant as usual. The streets steam and dry in no time. There is very little cloudy weather in Cuba. I have acquired more wrinkles than a prune, since coming here, with the brilliant sunshine. (I attribute it to that anyway) and pass over age as a possible contributing factor. Why grow old?

There are very beautiful and gay flowers here. Things really grow up over night during the rainy season. Sugar is the principal crop grown here as you probably know from reading the controversies in the papers between U.S.A. and Cuba, over their future price of sugar and how many crops they will be able to sell to U.S.A., etc.

Tobacco and pineapples are also grown extensively. Havana cigars as you know being world famous. I have had many interesting trips into the country. My husband, being chief inspector of construction on the reconstruction of some 900 miles of highroad, is on the road about 3 weeks out of every month so if I wish to enjoy his company I have to go along. It has been very interesting and not at all a hardship. It has been most educational to see the sugar, tobacco and pineapple farms, etc. The country houses are mostly one room huts. Thatched with the palm leaves. Children, animals, flies and insects wander in and out at will. The poor people are very poor and seem very shiftless and do not care to better themselves. There is lots of land and very fertile but they seem to be too indolent to have gardens, etc. The Chinese grow most of the vegetables outside the city limits on small farms (fincas).

The wealthy people are very rich with many servants, labor being very cheap, although wages have gone up 25 and 50 per cent in some cases the past year. The wealthy homes are very large and luxurious with big rooms and high ceilings for air circulation. The floors are tile and in the older houses, of lovely old Spanish architecture, they are of marble. The doors and woodwork are of beautifully carved mahogany. It being a native wood. The new and modern homes and apartments are modernistic in design, and furnishings and to my mind not nearly so beautiful though I must confess more convenient and comfortable in a great many cases.

When we came to Cuba, two years ago December, one could live luxuriously very cheaply. Not any more. The black market has a firm hold and prices have soared as much as 300 and 400 per cent in some cases. Some articles are unobtainable even at black market prices. Butter is $1.10 per pound and scarce. Eggs 80 cents a dozen, milk 30 cents a quart, cream $4.00 a quart, tea $3.60 a lb., apples (which by the way will not grow here) are anywhere from 10 cents to 30 cents each. Potatoes have been 8 cents a lb. but recently disappeared. Suppose they will come back soon at an impossible price, and so it goes.

The women here are supposed to be very handsome. I do not think they can compare with our healthy, wholesome Canadian and American girls. So many of them here (even the best classes) have a little colored blood in them and it shows up in skin and hair.

Now I have babbled on and on like a brook so must not bore you longer.

Would love to hear all the news if you have the time and inclination to write an old school friend.

Kindest Regards,

Mrs. Charles M. Grant,
(Josephine Heartz)

CANDY STRIPES AND PLASTRONS

PARIS — Jacques Fath uses candy stripes all through his collection and features the "plastron" worn either with a striped dress of contrasting color or a self-colored dress; or over a white linen blouse with minute tucks on sleeves and bodice, and a navy blue pleated skirt. This plastron is of red striped linen, buttoned at the back, and has the wearer's initials embroidered across the front.

Another amusing Fath model is of purple and white striped linen with short sleeves, a high rounded neckline with small crocheted collar, and back button fastening. The full skirt has a shaped waistband. When the skirt is detached, it shows a slim tunicline playsuit: this in turn, as taken off discloses an abbreviated two-piece swim suit, such as Parisiennes wear — more often to sun bathe than to swim.

Why dealers are short of Coke today

Coca-Cola is short because of the world-wide sugar shortage brought on by the disorder and confusion of war. And of course the less sugar we get, the less Coke you get—for Coca-Cola never compromises with quality.

Yes, come what may, there's one fact you can always count on—the Coke you DO get is the real thing!

MacINNIS — McINTEE

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. James Church, Summerfield, at 8 A. M. August 1st, when Rev. Father Eugene Murray united in marriage Catherine Iris McIntee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McIntee, Emerald, and Henry Joseph MacInnis of New Glasgow, N. S., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacInnis of Seven Mile Bay Parish.

The winsome bride, who was given in marriage by her father, chose a two piece street length dress of aquamarine crepe with white accessories and carried a white prayer book. Her only adornment was a gold cross and chain, a gift of the bridegroom.

The bride was attended by her sister, Marion McIntee, a recent graduate nurse of City Hospital, Charlottetown. She was very charming in a one piece dress of rose silk jersey with matching hat and white accessories.

The groom was attended by the bride's brother, Aeneas McIntee of Emerald.

Soloists at the wedding were Mrs. Emmett Duffy of Providence, R. I., U. S. A., and Mr. Roy Goodman, brother-in-law of the bride of New Glasgow, N. S. Organist, Mrs. James Croken.

The groom's gift to the bridea maid was gold earrings and to th groomsman, a leather bill fold.

After the ceremony, a weddin breakfast was served at the hom of the bride's parents to the im mediate members of the family an Rev. Father Murray.

After a short wedding trip t Dalvay and Charlottetown the brid and groom left to take up residenc at New Glasgow, N. S.

Out of town guests included Mr and Mrs. Roy Goodman of Nev Glasgow, N. S.

Prior to her marriage the brid was given a shower by her friend and neighbours of the community and she was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

RHUBARB ORANGE MARMALADE

2 pounds rhubarb
2 cups sliced oranges
7 cups sugar
¾ cup lemon juice

Method: Wash the rhubarb, then cut slice it into about ½-inch lengths. Cut oranges into quarters eighths, remove the seeds and slice through pulp and skin in paper thin slices. Measure 2 cups of this—you will need about 3 medium-sized oranges to give you the required amount.

Mix together the prepared rhubarb and sliced oranges, then add the sugar and stir the mixture to partially dissolve the sugar. Do not add any water. Place the mixture over a low flame and stir until the sugar is completely dissolved. Then heat to the boiling point and keep cooking at this temperature until the juice will test for jelly, stirring frequently. You can test for jelly by placing a small amount of the juice on a cold saucer and [illegible]. If it stiffens on cooling then it has reached the right stage. Another way to test for jelly is to dip a spoon into the mixture and lift out some of the juice. Let this run off the edge of the spoon, and when two or three drops run together and fall off in a single sheet, then the mixture is done. The jelly stage should be reached in about 10 to 20 minutes.

Add the lemon juice at this point and boil for just 2 minutes longer or until the jelly stage is reached again. Turn into hot sterilized jars and seal with melted paraffin. When the first coat has hardened, add a second coat, rotating the jars so that the wax will come up well around the inside of the jars. Cover the jars with lids or with paper that is tied on, and store in a cool dry place.

The next is called a conserve and contains orange, lemon juice and pineapple, along with the rhubarb. If you wish to make this a dish for special occasions, you may add the almonds, as suggested. However, it is nice even without these.
