

THE FARMERS TELEPHONE A PAYING INVESTMENT

The successful farmer of to-day is a successful business man. Farming, to be successful, must be conducted along the same lines as manufacturing.

The same problems of time and labor confront the farmer and the manufacturer. The farmer gives every new labor saving device which can be used in his business the most careful consideration.

There are certain things which are essential to the successful conducting of the farming business. If the farmer is to carry his task through to completion—to the end of the furrow—he must use the most rigid economy in the use of time and labor.

We want you to give your careful consideration to a few facts in regard to the saving in time, labor and money which can be made by the use of a Farmer's Telephone.

Farm products, more than almost any other commodities, are subject to rapidly changing and widely varying prices. Grain, hay, vegetables, cattle, hogs, poultry, eggs and butter, are up to-day and down to-morrow.

service of the weather bureau. The weather forecasts are essential to your business as to no other. A call to your exchange will always bring the latest report to you.

Machinery Broken Down. In the busy season, when your machinery breaks down—and it always breaks—your horses and men are overworked, but they must make a trip to town and lose valuable hours.

Sickness. In sickness—an emergency when you made a long hard ride only to find as is often the case, that the doctor had just gone—an hour perhaps would have saved a life.

In Case of Fire. Do you ever think of fire? Your house and barn might burn to the ground while you were on a bare-back ride. A telephone would save precious moments and the services of a messenger when every pair of hands count.

Neighbors. You have been snowbound. You have been snowbound. You have been snowbound. You have been snowbound. You have been snowbound.

Success. If you are going to follow your task to the end of the furrow and ultimately reach success, compete with the world on equal terms by providing yourself with a telephone.

STOCK MARKET UNSETTLED BY LABOR TROUBLES

NEW YORK, March 7.—The wavering price movement in today's stock market reflected the lack of conviction over the speculative outlook.

The news from Philadelphia was partly responsible for this. The extent of the response to the call for a general strike therein itself threatened an amount of disturbance of profitable activities sufficient to command the attention of those interested in company shares. The hearing of the situation, moreover, on the general subject of labor adjustment, as presented by the numerous demands upon the railroads, now under consideration was deemed important and calculated to arouse anxiety.

There was a stable absence of the attempts which were made at the end of last week to arouse apprehension over a possible decision to be handed down on Monday by the supreme court in the American Tobacco case. The rise in American Tobacco shares in the outside market this week has impressed speculative sentiment on this subject more than the more direct contemplation of the government's suit against the company. The movement in the tobacco shares, in fact, was made an important consideration in the support of the general stock market.

The support accorded stocks associated with the name of J. P. Morgan & Company stood out rather prominently in the rise at the end of the session. The large participation of that firm in the bond issues which are coming upon the market is a feature of the situation. The desire of those engaged in bond notations to keep the stock market in a good absorptive state for the sympathetic benefit of the bond market is a usual system of periods of trading bond offerings. The manner in which the market shall take the bonds now coming out is a subject of principal interest. Information bearing on the matter was not given out today.

The Market did not have to digest the bank statement since it was, of course, not published until after the close. The loss of $10,597,000 in the actual cash holdings of the banks compared with preliminary estimates of a gain of several millions. As loans expanded at the same time the effect on the surplus was intensified, bringing the decrease in that item up to $9,070,875. Discounts continued to rise in London and New York bankers are still discussing the likelihood of an outflow of gold from New York. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $11,512,000. United States threes have declined 3 per cent in the bid price on call this week.
