Tourists Wipe Out Surplus Of Canadian Dollars In The U. S.

By R.K. CARNEGIE
OTTAWA, Aug. 12 — (CP) — Reports from Buffalo, N.Y., of a heavy demand for Canadian dollars by American tourists planning to visit Canada confirm forecasts made earlier by banking officials here that the tourist season would tend to wipe out any surplus of Canadian currency in the United States.

Buffalo dispatches say the demands upon banks there for Canadian dollars has been so great that one bank which often held as much as $60,000 in Canadian bank notes has less than $1,000 one day last week.

Tourists can buy Canadian dollars in United States at the discount fixed in the open market in New York, which today was 7 7-8 per cent, whereas if they paid their United States funds here they would receive par, the official rate of Canada's Exchange Control Board.

The board does not allow Canadian dollars bought at a discount in the open market for United States to be used to pay for Canadian imports into that country, but does permit a tourist to use Canadian currency to pay his expenses while visiting Canada.

Exchange experts here say there is no great amount of Canadian currency in United States because the board is strict in allowing Canadian dollars to be exported. In the off-season for tourists, however, the dollars are quite equal to the open market demand.
