Aetna Losses Paid in Canada in 100 Years Over $7,000,000

The Canadian Spirit
 GREW STRONG BY ENDURING, BY STRIVING, BY CONTINUING

AETNA (FIRE) INSURANCE CO.
 wrote its first Canadian Agent on December 22, 1821:
"It is known indeed a whole city may be conflagrated but such a contingency is too remote to be calculated upon."

Sublime theory! Since then such great fires as Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and New Westminster have occurred and wiped out the profits of years. The Aetna has paid freely, promptly, fully. With the Pioneers we cast in our lot and have endured and continued—with them.

The owner of the cat, who saw the accident, expressed such indignation in a letter to the driver that when her parents discovered the fact, there was considerable hustling around to intercept the missive before it would reach the proper hands. He got the letter, however, and for a while there was a decided coolness in the immediate vicinity, which is gradually being overcome by the summer weather and the usual dispositions of the parties concerned.

Dear Friends.—The officers and members of Boyne L. O. L. No. 614 desire to convey to you their heartfelt sympathy in the loss you have sustained through the death of your father. We felt that anything we can do or say is insufficient to afford the consolation the wounded heart craves, but we commend you to the Great Physician and pray that he may comfort, console and bless you. We beseech His grace upon you in such measure as will enable you to say "He doeth all things well."

Again tendering you our sincere sympathy personally and on behalf of Boyne L. O. L. No. 614. We are,

A MAN WHO KNEW IT ALL

(R. R. is New York Sun)

In the loose and lawless age when oppression holds the stage and the weak are being crowded to the wall,

'Tis a pleasant thing to find that a man has at last produced a man who knows it all.

Not a man who holds aloof, letting others bring the proof, but when a man who just admits he knows it all;

And more than that, he knows what this, while knowing what's amiss, he guarantees to dissipate our cares

And to cure all public ills with a box of magic pills

Compounded by two famous doctrinaires.

So, of course, we'll all rest easy, play checkers and parchesi, while the country's growing tall, For we know that naught can harm us.

Not even much alarm us, While we cuddle up with one who knows it all.

Still, by Heaven and by Hector,

Do not suffer another day with aching, bleeding, protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve benefit, soothe and afford lasting relief. 50c a box. Ed. J. Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. This paper and enclose 2¢ stamp postage.

THE NUMBERING OF HOUSES

Numbering the houses or shops in a street as a means of identifying them seems a very simple device, but nobody thought of it until well on in the eighteenth century. Until then they got on as well as they could with signs, and in London streets, like Cheapside, every shopkeeper tried to outdo his rivals in the size and grandeur of his signboard. They projected over the street, and every now and then they crashed and killed somebody. They created a wind-blew, and it shows what a nuisance they were that, within a year of house-numbers being introduced, sign boards were prohibited on the walls of streets. The first London street to be numbered in March, 1764, was New Burlington Street, and the next Lincoln's Inn Fields.

FOREST FIRES UNKNOWN IN SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 29.—Devastating forest fires, common in Canada, are unknown in Sweden. There are no vast stretches of burnt-over lands such as offend the eyes of the traveller along the north shores of Lake Superior and that represents the complete waste of untold millions of potential wealth. It was not always so. There are evidences that most of Sweden's forest areas have been burned over at some time in their history, and most of what has not been burned has been logged. Few virgin forests remain. Those that do are highly prized and well cared for. A visit to one of the best of these, under the guidance of Mr. Holgren, a chief forest master of the Government service, near Fagelsjö in the Norrlands district, disclosed a fine stand of spruce and pine about three hundred years old, which was said to be one of the oldest and best in the country. Swedish forests are not entirely immune to fire, but fire hazards and losses have been reduced to a minimum. A Swedish forest authority estimates that the wood lost by fire does not exceed one-half of one per cent of the standing timber in any one year. In the whole of Sweden, and in acreage to thousands of acres in the public forests and at probably from thirty to forty thousand acres in their own private property. In Canada the districts annually burnt over are usually calculated by the hundred square miles.

Most of the forest fires which occur in Sweden are attributed to sparks from locomotives, although, considering the way in which the railways abut on the forests, fires from this cause are surprisingly few in number. "Dry lightning" is frequently a cause of forest fires, it is unknown here. Climatic conditions also contribute to keeping down the number of fires. Promiscuous invasion of the woods by hunting, fishing and camping parties is not allowed and danger from the carelessly dropped match and the abandoned camp fire is eliminated. The laws for the protection of the forests against fires are very strict and strictly enforced. There are no "Warning" signs tack-
