British Somaliland is being redeemed after seven months under Italian rule. Berbera, the capital has been retaken. The possession of Berbera, which has fair harbor facilities, will greatly simplify the task of supplying the Kenya forces advancing on the Djibouti railway and Addis Ababa. The map illustrates the military situation in East Africa at the week-end. The shaded areas represent territory gained by the British offensive. Although much desert territory in Somaliland has not been occupied, in effect the battlefield shortly will extend from Webbe-Shibeli through Jijiga to the French city of Djibouti. The Italians will make a stand at Diredda if they can. At nearly every point the British are crowding over the western frontier of Ethiopia. They are attacking on the Keren-Asmara front with renewed energy and have captured key positions at Keren. The collapse of Italy's East African empire may be complete at an early date.

 Young people in such a condition are generally of an anemic nature and require a preparation containing iron to improve the blood content.

Many Kinds Insects Feed On Spruce Trees

Approximately 37 per cent of the total timber resources of Canada is composed of the five species of spruce, namely, white, red, black, balsam, Sitka and white spruce. Intermediate forms include twenty per cent of all the spruce in the world is to be found in Canada, and represents a large part of the international pulpwood supply. Since softwoods are easily killed by leaf-eating insects, states the Ontario Department of Agriculture bulletin "Foliage Insects of Spruce in Canada", a knowledge of the various insects feeding on spruce over the vast extent of Canada is of considerable importance. This information is made possible through the work of the Canadian Forest Insect survey, a co-operative enterprise launched by the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture in 1936, together with the Provincial protection services. Forest entomologists and the various industries identified with forest products.

There are in many respects the most important group destructive to spruce although only six species of these insects have been recognized. Although there are more than 100 known species of various insects preying on spruce, and although outbreaks of leaf-eating insects often occur in Canada, there are only five species of outstanding importance at the present time, namely, the spruce sawfly, a native insect, and the European spruce sawfly, introduced in 1930. Probably eight other species are more or less harmful, the most common of these being the yellow-bellied spruce sawfly and the balsam fir sawfly. It should be remembered, however, says A. W. A. Brown, Division of Entomology, that the species which are usually unimportant in the forest may at times cause considerable damage in orchards and ornamental plantations and that under circumstances favourable to their multiplication, certain species may become very destructive.

The bulletin "Foliage Insects of Spruce in Canada" can be obtained from the Provincial Department of Agriculture and Extension, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The remains were forwarded to Mr. Davison's Funeral Home in Malpeque, where they will rest until the arrival of her sister, Mrs. Peter Walsh of Worcester, Mass. The funeral service will be held from the United Church at Malpeque. Much sympathy is felt for all the friends in their sad bereavement.

It is pleasing to learn that Mrs. Edward McKay is recovering from her recent illness.

The semi-annual examination of Sea View School which had to be postponed owing to an epidemic of measles among the pupils was held on Friday afternoon. There were a good number of visitors present who all listened with great attention to the answers of the different grades as the work was reviewed by their teacher Mrs. Vera Brander and their ready answers spoke of careful and painstaking work on her part. At the conclusion of the classes some pleasing remarks were made after which all present enjoyed a generous treat. A pleasant afternoon was brought to a close by all joining in singing God Save the King.

United States And The War

Excerpts from an address delivered by Hon. Frank Knox, U. S. Secretary of the Navy, at the United States Conference of Mayors held recently in St. Louis.

In this fight now in progress, characterized by ruthless force employed on a scale never known before, Britain occupies the firing line. This firing line is no longer a narrow strip of territory held by a thin line of armed men, but it is now made up of the whole of the British Isles.

The women and children of Britain share, with the British soldiers, the dangers of battlefield. This type of war, carried on with a brutal ruthless indifference to every dictate of humanity, has reduced life in Great Britain for all men women and children, rich and poor alike, to an existence like that of wild beasts who live in holes in the ground, and yet, living thus, they support with gallantry and a resolute courage that counts no cost too great, every possible aid to their own whole system of free government is based. We, on the other hand, in this critical contest, play the minor part of munition-makers, who provide the weapons and the munitions and the tanks and the planes with which this most critical battle in world history is being fought.

Under such circumstances, we can afford as a nation to be generous to a fault. We cannot retain our self-respect and haggle over the terms with which we will lend our help to the British, to the Greeks and to the Chinese, when the latter are bearing their breasts to the storm of battle. Selfishly, who would not admit the wisdom of freely supplying the arms to any free nation actively engaged in war in which we are vitally concerned, while we prepare ourselves for defence in case we should be attacked. Our sole hope of avoiding involvement in the world-wide war now in progress lies in the hope that we may become so strong on land, on sea, and in the air, that the aggressive nations will be afraid to attack us. While we are thus making ourselves strong, for the sake of our own security, shall we not lend every possible aid to those who are gallantly holding the lines while we prepare?

In this war thus far, England has resorted to us for munitions and supplies. For these, she has paid us in full—cash on the barrel head. Nay, she has done more. She has paid to American Manufacturers a total of $550,000,000 in excess of the cost of the material which she has delivered to her. This half billion has been expended by the British to pay for lands, buildings and equipment in this country in which to manufacture war materials. Again let me emphasize that Britain has paid for every gun, every plane, every item that she has bought in America to carry on the war, and she has paid some half billion dollars in excess of their actual cost. She now tells us that when she has paid for the remaining orders not fulfilled, placed with American manufacturers, she will have exhausted her dollar credits necessary for the purchase of American equipment. To pay for American-made goods requires dollars. There is nowhere in the world where England can go to buy dollars except to the United States. Since the balance of trade between Britain and ourselves is heavily in our favor, we have no need to buy pounds with dollars and, therefore, the only source of dollar exchange is cut off. This does not mean in any way that the British Empire is bankrupt. It does mean that British sources for the only medium of exchange which can be used in the American market have dried up.

Cork table mats are wonderfully useful but they do get dingy in time. Rub the dirty ones with fine sandpaper and they will come up like new. Make yourself a silver-cleaning cloth like this: Mix one teaspoon plate powder or jeweller's rouge on tablespoon cloudy ammonia, and a small teaspoon of water together. Cut a yard of fluffy flannel into six squares, dip each in the mixture, and hang dripping wet to dry. Use the cloth to rub up your silver and cutlery and you'll save several cleaning days.

GOOD CARE—LONG LIFE
 Carpets and rugs need frequent cleaning—particularly worsted types. Get it done soon work down in to rug backing, and cut threads. Vacuum cleaners or carpet sweepers are best. If you must use a broom use it with a light stroke—always in the direction of the pile.
 Don't beat rugs, and don't use a stiff brush on them.
 Pile shedding is usually a temporary condition; don't worry about it, but sweep surfaces gently for a few weeks, until the wool's regained its natural moisture. Warehousing usually leaves fibres dry and brittle.
 The artificial heating of winter months is very hard on rugs; a proper moisture content is essential to their well-being.
 Turn rugs now and then, so wear will be evenly distributed.
 For cleaning dirt and grease spots, use carbon tetrachloride. Soak spots and wipe away with

SALVATION ARMY WAR SERVICES

The Salvation Army placed at the disposal of the Canadian Government, even before the actual outbreak of hostilities, all the resources at its command for the spiritual, moral, and physical well-being of the men of the armed forces, and has striven to be worthy of the confidence shown in us by both the Government and the men, as well as the 'folks back home' in every enterprise we have undertaken.
 The Salvation Army is happy to be one of the co-operating services Auxiliaries in the United Drive for funds with which to carry on the magnificent work which all are doing for the betterment of the welfare of our boys over there and at Canadian Training Centres.
 At the Military Training Centre at Beaulieu, the Army has a complete set-up for the advantage of these training, as well as for the permanent staff, having supplied uniforms for the sergeants, mess room and lounge, included in our service here are recreational facilities to meet desires of all men, boys, and girls, tennis and croqueters; library, completely furnished; Canadian fully equipped, as well as writing room, with all stationery provided free entertainment is arranged for; three moving pictures shown a week, concert parties from Charlottetown, as well as amateur nights among the boys.
 A Salvation Army Officer is stationed permanently at the Camp to give personal service to the men, as well as conduct sing-song, on Sunday evenings, and supervise the recreational Centre.
 Besides this main charge we are glad to report that through the Salvation Army War Service Department we have been able to supply recreational facilities to the Veterans' Guard, stationed in Charlottetown, also to the Army Service Corps Supply Depot. The Army has been pleased at the opportunity of supplying the Navy ratings with gift packages on their leaving the Naval Headquarters here for Halifax, as well as supplying some recreational facilities. The Army has also been requested by the Government to provide over-night lodging for Royal Canadian Air Force recruits enlisting here, and this has been gladly done.
 So, by the blessing of God and the goodwill of the people to the aid, we go, and will continue with greater effort to do all in our power to make a home away from home for our Sailors, Soldiers, and Airmen.
 In Peace as in war our aim is the alleviation of the suffering, whether in soul or body and our great part-time organization is still functioning in all its branches, which include our Evangelical, Social, Prison, Rescue and many other agencies for the uplift of humanity.
