RELAX BEFORE BRIGHTENS PARTY

You'll do a better job of wowing 'em at that holiday party, if you'll take time out for rest before you dress for it.

Take out 30 minutes for resting—more time if you can swing it—on your back on a bed in a dark, quiet room. Spending time that way pays off in beauty dividends, even if it means less time for dressing.

Before you lie down, strip off make-up and put cream on your face. Take advantage of this opportunity to soothe and relax your eyes by covering them with cotton pads, moistened with witch hazel. When they come out from under the pads, eyes will shine with gratitude for this thoughtful gesture.

While you're resting your body, rest your mind. What you should shut out of your mind, if you want complete relaxation, are thoughts about how you are going to look in your party dress or how the stag line is going to react. A stern determination to take what the evening offers will put you in finer mental and physical fettle to cope with situations when they occur.

In Memoriam

In memory of my loving husband J. Bradley Dickieson, who passed from this life January 11th, 1947.

Oh! how I would love to hear your voice
And see you smile once more.
Or hear that familiar footstep
As I did in days of yore.

It is so lonely here without you
And sad the weary way
For life can never be the same
Since you were called away.

They tell me time is a healer
And helps us to forget
But time so far, has only proved
How much I miss you yet.

Inserted by His Wife, Hattie.

In Memoriam

In memory of my dear sister,

MRS. WARREN SIMMONS

who passed away January 10, 1946.

Mrs. Percy Dawson.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of J. Richard Stewart, Mt. Albion, who passed away January 16th, 1942.

The world may change from year to year
And friends from day to day
But never will the one we loved
From memory pass away.

Lovingly Remembered by Wife and Family.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear brother, Pte. Alexander Stewart, who lost his life in Action January 10th, 1943.

He had a heart you could not help loving,
And a heart that was purer than gold,
And to those who knew him and loved him
His memory shall never grow old.

Sadly Missed by His Sister Catherine.

Smart Girl

By

"What you're saying," Barney answered, doesn't deceive me for a minute. You have decided to stand by that pompous old fourflusher because you're a smart girl. I don't need you, but it's up to you to take the consequences. It's my story against yours. You can lie and say you weren't with me last night, but it won't help you. I'll have witnesses who saw you go up and who saw you come out. No, by God I don't need you, you dirty double-crossing little liar."

"Don't say that again," Sally said.

"Okay. I'll put it in the form of a question. Are you going to be sensible and decent and go back in there and stand by me, or are you going to be a rotten little traitor?"

"I'm going to be a rotten little traitor."

"I'll get out of it," Barney said angrily. "Don't worry about me. But I won't forget the way you've let me down. I should have been ready for it. You've been on the make for Eric Larsen ever since you met him."

Headlights in the drive glowed momentarily on the hedge beside the porch. But Sally paid no attention to them. Nor did Barney. Sally was looking up into his face without the sensation of hurt. She suddenly, for the first time, clearly saw Barney for what he was and the last trace of her fondness for him flowed out of her, but not her anger.

"You needed my leadership," she said.

"I did. You're an awfully clever girl and you've made me realize what a sap I've been. Now I know that you're nothing but a cold-blooded chiseler."

Sally said, "If I were a man I'd knock you down."

Eric's voice out of the darkness behind her said, "That out to simplify everything." He came across the lawn and pushed her aside. He said, "Barney, you've said all you're going to say." And Barney said, "Really? Is something stopping me?"

He swung his fist as he said it. Eric stepped aside and drew his head back so that the swing went wild. He dropped the large flat package he was carrying and hit Barney with his right fist somewhere in the lower part of the face. Barney fell down. When he got up he looked for a moment as if he intended to carry on the fight, then said, "Save it, Larsen. You may need your strength."

CHAPTER XXIX

Another pair of headlights glowed on the hedge and a car made a grinding noise in the gravel.

Sally said, "Eric, Zorane is dead They say you killed him. They say you and your father killed him."

"Who says so?"

"I say so," Barney said.

"It's Van Arden," Sally said. "Barney claims he saw you and the senator leaving Zorane's apartment last night. Lolita Monterey says that she was having an affair with the senator and that the senator killed Zorane because he was jealous."

Eric uttered a single hard bark of laughter. "Isn't that just dandy! So the senator and I killed him. With what? Kindness?"

The soft whispery voice of Pop Kresco said: "What's this about Senator Larsen killing Zorane?"

Eric picked up the package he had dropped. The contractor and the sunburned man in the black hat walked up and said to Eric. "Remember me, pal?"

Eric looked at him. "Aren't you the old pal who chased Miss Porter up the stairs and into my kitchen?"

"Yeah! And I'm the guy who saw her and this guy on the sidewalk outside the apartment right after Zorane was killed last night. Are they framing you, Mr. Larsen? Ask this guy pal, what he was doing coming outside of Zorane's apartment around half-past two with a bruise under one eye and a lot of bloody knuckles."

"Sally," Eric said' "were you there last night?"

"Sure, she was there," the sunburned man answered. "She went up there a little after two. This guy Teel followed her in and when they came out his knuckles were bleeding."

Eric said: "Barney, wait a minute. Did Van Arden accuse you of killing Zorane? Is that it? Is that why you've all ganged up on the senator?"

Barney said, "What the hell do you mean?"

"Van Arden scared you into thinking—" Eric began. "I want to see that master mind."

He crossed the lawn to the porch at a run, sprinted up the steps and went into the senator's study. Guy Van Arden was standing beside the desk looking somewhat grim. Coral was huddled in a corner of the settee, haggard and worried.

The senator was sitting in a chair with his arms hanging down, his head bent. He glanced up as Eric came in. He said in a trembling voice, "Eric, they've ruined me."

"No, they haven't" Eric said. "What's it all about, Van Arden?"

Van Arden answered gravely, "Eric, a very shocking thing has occurred. Zorane was murdered last night."

Barney came into the room with an air of bounding.

"This young man," Van Arden went on, "claims he heard you and your father quarreling with Zorane and saw you leave his apartment. Zorane was never seen alive again."

Eric glanced at Harry Seifert, who was standing in the hall doorway, then at Van Arden.

"Van Arden, you're careful, you're thorough, you don't overlook anything. And there's probably only one thing wrong with your idea. It doesn't match the pictures."

He tossed the flat pacakage on the desk. "Probably the best pictures ever taken of a murder." Three swell pictures. Van Arden, of you swinging that chair on Zorane's head."

In Memoriam

MRS. MAJOR McDONALD

The sudden passing of Mrs. Major McDonald, Sherbrooke at the Prince County Hospital, Dec. 1, at the age of 55 years came as a great shock to her family and numerous friends. Apparently she had been in her usual good health until a few hours before her death.

The late Mrs. McDonald, the former Edith Laughlin, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Laughlin, Sherbrooke. She possessed a very charitable disposition. Her devotion to her family was untiring and her passing will be keenly felt in the home. She was a regular attendant at St. Paul's Church, Summerside, of which she was a devout member. The last rites of the Church were administered to her by Rev. H. S. Wight before her death.

There are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother, a sorrowing husband, one daughter (Muriel) Mrs. C. J. Pitcairn, Summerside and one son, Bernard at home, also three sisters and three brothers, Mrs. Thomas Noonan and Mrs. James Condon, Richmond, Mrs. Percy Weeks, St. Eleanors, Walter, Edward and Ray, Sherbrooke.

The very largely attended funeral took place to St. Paul's Church where Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. S. Wight while Rt. Rev. Msgr. G. J. McLellan conducted the services at the grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. Frank Waite, John Thompson, Frank Townsend, Arras Arsenault, Fred McDonald and Ronald McDonald.

Her faint last wish we should like to have heard,
And breathed in her ear one last parting word,
Only those who have lost are able to tell
The pain of the heart in not saying farewell.

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Syrup at Home

This well known recipe is used by many thousands of housewives, because they have found that it gives them an effective, dependable medicine for distressing winter coughs. It's so easy to mix—anyone can do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for effect on throat irritations.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all and takes but a moment. No cooking needed. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey instead of sugar syrup.)

Put the Pinex into a 16 ounce bottle and fill up with your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of cough syrup, unusually quick-acting and dependable, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving quick, satisfying relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

Pinex Saves You Money. Fast Relief. Easily Mixed.
