—DEATH OF MRS. FRANK GALLANT—There passed away on Thursday at her home in Summerside, Mrs. Frank Gallant at the early age of 27 years. The deceased had not been well for some time and pneumonia set in a few days ago from which she did not recover. The funeral, which is in charge of Mr. Keith Compton, takes place at ten o'clock this morning from her late residence to St. Paul's Church and Cemetery.—S.

—CELEBRATED 89TH BIRTHDAY—On Thursday, April 20th, Mr. Alexander Affleck of Bedouque celebrated his 89th birthday. Mr. Affleck was born in Bedouque and has many friends there, called during the day to wish him many happy returns. Mr. George Bowness of Summerside, who lived in Bedouque some years ago and who was well acquainted with Mr. Affleck, sang for him, over the radio, his favourite songs, "Annie Laurie," "Highlandman's Toast" and "Auld Lang Syne" as a surprise while members of the family were at a family dinner party. Needless to say the old gentleman was very much pleased. The Guardian joins his many friends in wishing him many more birthdays.—S.

—DELIGHTFUL CONCERT—The pupils of St. Mary's Academy staged a very delightful concert in St. Paul's hall, Summerside, on Thursday evening. The children, trained by the Sisters of St. Mary's Convent, looked very charming in their little crepe paper dresses in pastel shades, representing spring. The orchestra numbers were worthy of special mention. The comedy "Camouflage," was well acted, particularly the part of Sally, the maid, taken by Bertha Richard, who represented a statue. Georgie Perry as the little French cook was also very good. The operetta "Florinda" was very pretty. The little fairies and witches looking very sweet as they sang and danced in a pretty woodland scene. Miss Helen McPhee gave a charming little speech thanking the audience for their attendance. At the close of the concert the number was drawn for the lottery on an Afghan and was won by Dr. Ralph Noonan. The program is as follows: Orchestra, "Triumphal March," Oesten, Frances Gallant; Class Reading, by Minims; Comedy, "Camouflage," Scene I, Breakfast room in the McGerald home. Mrs. Important's startling news; Duet, "Moon Rocket," W. Rolfe, Frances Gallant, Mary Silliphant; Scene II, the living room in the McGerald home. "The best laid schemes," Gung at a-gley. Characters: Uncle Jacob, rich but eccentric, Georgie Perry; Mrs. McGerald, scheming relative, Loraine Arsenault; daughters, Helen Clow, Elizabeth Dalton, Winnie Arsenault, Catherine Driscoll; Sally, unsatisfactory maid, Bertha Richard; Dina, Mabel, Francois, answer advertisement, Mary Arsenault, Bella Blaquiere, Georgie Perry; Orchestra, "Spring's Approach," Kroeger, Frances Gallant; Operetta, "Florinda," Marzo; Scene I, a fairy revel and a fairy queen; Scene II, Vala the Witch and her black art; Scene

Answer:

I should have told my daughter that just because I had thrust the gift of life upon her was the reason why I felt morally bound to do everything within my power to help her make it worth while and to prevent her from making a mistake that would bring misery upon her.

Then I think I should call the girl's bluff and ask her if she regretted being born; if she wanted to die and pass out of life; if she wanted to be done with this interesting old world and all it has of pleasure and amusements? Children are always reproaching their parents with having committed the crime against them of giving them life, but I have never seen one yet who wasn't having a sufficiently good time to want to keep on with it. None of them really wish they had never been born.

Of course, it is the most arrant nonsense for youngsters to declare, as they are in the habit of doing, that their lives are their own and that they have a right to lead them as they please. Nobody lives to himself alone. All our lives interlock and every one about us has to pay the penalty for what we do.

Especially are boys and girls fond of asserting their right to marry when they please and whom they please because, as they boastfully put it, they have to endure the consequences of their marriage. But in reality it is father and mother who have to pay for their willful children's unwise marriages.

If John marries before he can support a family, it is father and mother who have to work harder and scrimp more to feed John's wife and children. If Mary marries the handsome drunkard or the good-looking roue, it is to father and mother she runs back to be supported when she gets her divorce.

If John and Mary could really suffer alone for their mistakes in marriage, they might have the right to be the sole judge of whom they married, but as long as father and mother have to pay the price of their children's blunders they certainly should have a right to some say-so in the matter of whom they marry. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I know a man in his mid-30s who has a weakness for girls in their early teens. Is this a sign of mental inferiority? This man never goes with girls suited to his age. He prefers the very young. He does not seem to like brains in a woman. According to a noted psychoanalyst, a child who takes to another child much younger than itself is mentally deficient and does not choose children of his own age because he feels he is mentally inferior. Is this true in the case of a grown male? BETTY.

Answer:

Possibly. But probably it is more just part of the queer taste for insipid things, such as baby chicks and milk-fed veal and undeveloped peas—all tasteless as compared with the mature things, which so many people affect.

Many men of intelligence seem to prefer very young flappers to sophisticated women. Why, nobody knows, unless there is something fresh and dewy about their youth that appeals to them and they have the same kind of pleasure taking them about and showing them the world as we have in taking a child to the circus. DOROTHY DIX.

III, Yoringal and Vala's little nightingale; Scene IV, Finale, "The Rose and Pearl;" Fortunia, Fairy Queen, Mary McPhee; First attendant, Pearl McNeill; Florinda, a little village maid, Rita Gallant; Yoringal, her brother, Isabel Gallant; Vala, Queen of the Witches, Edna Arsenault; First witch, M. Alice Gallant; Second witch, Edyth Kelly; Little Fairies, Mary Cummskey, Marjorie Kelly; Chorus of Witches; Chorus of Fairies; "Thank you," Miss Helen McPhee. "God Save the King."

PRAIRIE GARDEN DEFENCE

One of the prime essentials in successful gardening on the prairies is shelter from the wind. The wind might well be placed as the first enemy, and its obstruction as the first step to success, says the Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man. Shelter from the wind will be most effective if two distinct forms are employed; first, high three, not too closely set, to check the general force of the wind over the whole vicinity and to stop the drift of snow at a little distance from the buildings; and second, low, dense shrubs or hedges around the garden, or at least on exposed sides, to stop any sweep of wind along the ground that may get past the more distant general wind-break. Large trees close to the vegetable garden are objectionable as their tops shade the vegetables while their roots rob the plants of food and moisture. Furthermore, high trees are often quite open at the bottom so that the wind sweeps along the ground. Shrubs or hedges do not cast shade or spread roots so far and, being dense at the bottom, are most suitable as immediate neighbors of the vegetables though even they should be ten or twelve feet away. Hence the combination of the high trees in the background with a dense hedge around the garden makes the most effective shelter.
