The Waterfowl Crisis

An Address by W. C. HENDERSON, Associate Chief, Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture, at the Meeting of the INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GAME, FISH, AND CONSERVATION COMMISSIONERS, Montreal, Canada, September 10 and 11, 1934.

The waterfowl of North America are confronted with disaster. At the last annual meeting of this organization I referred to the constantly diminishing numbers of our migratory wild fowl and concluded that if the situation in 1934 should be less favorable than in 1933, or even if it should be no better, we would be forced to adopt further restrictions or the sport of wildfowling would be doomed. Since then conditions have gone from bad to worse. More birds were killed last year than were produced. Moreover, the drought of 1934 has spread in the history of the United States Weather Bureau, and its worst effects have been felt in the areas that formerly constituted very important breeding grounds for many of the highly prized species of waterfowl. When the reduced numbers of the waterfowl make their way southward this fall they will find thousands of ponds and lakes dried up where formerly they found rest and feed. We may therefore expect greater concentrations than ever on the remaining water areas, and there will be real danger of over-shooting even with the shortened season, the lowered bag limit on certain species, and the other restrictions that have been added for the protection of the birds this year.

VISITING FROM MAINE.—Visiting here after an absence of 30 years is Dr. George Alexander, of Gardiner, Maine, who with his wife and daughter arrived in the city on Tuesday evening and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas McLeod, Prince Street. Dr. Alexander visited Halifax and Charlottetown, P. E. I., where his son entered St. Dunstan's University at the latter city. Dr. Alexander is an uncle of Mrs. McLeod and Miss Marie Alexander. Mr. and Mrs. Light and Power company and is receiving a warm welcome from his old friends and associates here.—Sydney Post-Record.

The drought area covered a territory about 100,000 square miles, which this year was practically eliminated for waterfowl breeding. Because the drought came on early, many ducks concentrated on a comparatively narrow belt on the northern periphery of this drought zone, and on some of these areas they were breeding abundantly. In an area near Lake Winnipeg, Lake Manitoba, and Lake Winnipegosis, our representatives found a rather heavy breeding population. Almost everywhere, however, they found the desirable breeding territory greatly underpopulated.

Berry, Lower Economy, at 10.30 o'clock on Tuesday morning, Sept. 18th, when their eldest daughter, Ethel Mina was united in marriage to Mr. Fulford A. Darrach of Clyde River, P. E. I. The wedding party stood under an arch of ferns and golden glow. Just over their heads hung a trio of white bells, and from the arch to the door of entrance, streamers of white and yellow were artistically arranged. The bride, who was crowned in most transparent tulle, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair fern, was given away by her father. The wedding march from Lohengrin was rendered by Miss Leona Berry, sister of the bride. The young couple were unattended. The ceremony, which was the double ring service, was performed by Rev. R. Hensley Staver, M.A., B.D., of Hunter River, P. E. I., in the presence of the immediate relatives. After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served. Many beautiful gifts were received, including china, linen, silvers and cheques. The bride's gift to the groom was an amethyst pendant. In the early afternoon, the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti for their home in Clyde River, followed by the good wishes of their many friends. A reception was held there in the evening. The bride's going-away suit was of brown broadcloth, with sable fur and other matching accessories. Miss Berry was a successful school teacher, having taught not only in N. S., but also in western Canada, and in Meriden, Connecticut. Mr. Darrach, who for a number of years held a responsible position in the U.S.A., about eight years ago returned to his native province, where he became one of its successful farmers.—Amherst News.

WOMAN PREFERS HOME BUILDING MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—(C.P.)—Women have a strong sense of family responsibility, states Madame de la Marre, of Paris, general secretary of L'Union Nationale pour le Vote des Femmes, speaking informally to members of the League for Women's Rights here. Since 1907, continued Mme. de la Marre, when a law was passed in France giving a married woman the right to handle her own earnings providing a certain proportion was contributed to the support of the home, there has been no record of action against her wife for falling to contribute her share. On the other hand, there have been many complaints from wives whose husbands were the only support of the family. Women work outside the home only because of necessity, Mme. de la Marre declared. A survey showed that a large majority of the employed married women worked only to supplement the insufficient earnings of their husbands. Madame de la Marre quoted Premier Gaston Dumeurgue as being in favor, not only of votes for women, but at least in municipal elections, that also of having a certain proportion of women on municipal councils.

MISS MARY BERRIGAN The Misses Agnes Duffy and Mary Moreside have returned to their homes from an enjoyable visit to West River, the guests of Miss Mary Berrigan. Mr. and Mrs. Dean McEwen left Tuesday morning for their future home in Vancouver, B. C. Messrs Bill Gillespie, Louis Doyle and Melvin Hyde were recent visitors to the City.

CENTRAL GUARDIAN BREAK SEEN IN UNITED STATES TEXTILE STRIKE

Labor Board To Be Created to End Disputes Between Manufacturer and Employee. (By Richard L. Turner, Associated Press Staff Writer) (A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Quick termination of the United States textile strike was a bright possibility tonight as labor leaders from all sections of the industry assembled here to act upon a plan of settlement advanced by President Roosevelt's mediation board. A favorable decision was strongly indicated, provided the employers, too, agree to the findings and recommendations of the board. Mill owners studied the lengthy report involved but made no immediate expression of their attitude.

WILL OPEN PLANTS In individual instances, however, and without saying yes or no to the board's plan, they announced an intention of opening their plants on Monday. They counted upon an appeal, issued today by President Roosevelt, to bring the workers back to their machines. "I want to express the very sincere hope that all employees now out of strike will return to work," Mr. Roosevelt said in formally approving the board's report, "and that all textile manufacturers will take back employees without discrimination."

Special Board The board's recommendations were: That a special textile labor board be named to adjust disputes over union recognition and collective bargaining; that the Labor Department and Federal Trade Commission study and report on wages and hours before any change is made; and that a second board be created to regulate the "stretch-out" of the employers, it was pointed out that all the changes proposed can be made effective by the President on his own initiative, regardless of the attitude of either the mill owners or the unions.

With such important developments in the offing, the day saw an unbroken continuation of picketing and of troops patrolling mill property in a half-dozen states. There were several minor eruptions of violence. A few small mills were reopened in the south.
