Railwaymen Will Not Shoulder Loss

TORONTO, Mar. 21.—James Murdoch, Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and former member of the Canadian Board of Commerce in an interview here Saturday said the railwaymen of this country would not submit to have the burden of the Canadian National Railway "deficit" of almost $70,000,000, saddled on them." Mr. Murdoch declared, "If Dr. Reid or Hon. Frank Carvell or D'Arcy Scott are figuring on this as a solution to their problem they are making the mistake of their lives."

THE ERA MAKER AT 74.

It falls to the lot of few human beings, indeed, to have it said of them that their achievements constituted an era in the world's history. Few are they, indeed; Hammurabi, the earliest recorded law-giver, Moses, Alexander the Great the inventor of gunpowder, the inventor of glass lenses, the inventor of the steam engine, Pasteur in Bacteriology—how many more can you name? There is another one, at any rate, and he is still with us, namely, Thomas A. Edison, though Alexander Graham Bell, no doubt, should be named. Mr. Edison, although somewhat advanced in years, is still in the best of health, and his eye is yet undimmed and his natural forces unabated. His activities are indeed still wonderful when we consider that only the other day he celebrated his seventy fourth birthday, by working in his factory from 8.30 a. m. to the middle of the afternoon when in the presence of a circle of his friends he read a very large number of congratulations written him by friends from every quarter of the compass. The number of his inventions great and small is so great that many pages would be filled with the mere name of them. The two outstanding products of his marvelous brain however are the Electric light and the Phonograph. While others preceded him perhaps in the principle of electrical illumination, yet he was the first to make the light a genuinely practical and valuable agent for human benefit. From the rushlight and the burning pine knot of our forefathers to the tremendous electric flashlight darting its beam of blinding illumination through the night almost to the very stars is a far cry indeed. For convenience and ease of working, for power and ease of operation, only the beams of the solar orb itself can compare with it. Indeed without it the mighty cities of the present day could not be made safe, habitable for human beings, and ten thousand priceless valuable inventions utterly depend upon its illumination for their existence and utility. Not only has this contemporaneous wizard made it possible to carry beams of light from a motor centre for hundreds of miles to where they are needed, but he has been the chief devising agency by which the mysterious current can be generated in one place and be utilized for a thousand human purposes, the turning of magic wheels across half a continent. But why attempt to enlarge upon the aspect of one of his inventions? In the Phonograph, which at first was looked upon and really was only a plaything, he has devised means whereby the human voice, the very accents of the departed great and our own loved ones may be preserved to the living and to future generations. The artist can preserve the features and the expression of the dead for those who come after. Edison has enabled the voice with all its beloved tones for the ears of those surviving to be preserved, so universal and so vastly useful to the race have Mr. Edison's accomplishments in the realm of electricity become that it would be difficult even to imagine what the world would now be like without them. The world without Edison! Draw the picture if you can, and the Wizard still lives, moves and has his being amongst us—so that we can look upon him in the flesh, shake his hand and talk with him, things to be always held in mind by the living generation. Browning thought it a marvelous thing to know one who had known the poet Shelley personally, and was moved with disgust to find the friend smile at his enthusiasm.

And did you once see Shelley? And did he stop and speak to you? And did you speak to him again? How strange it seems and new! And you were living before that? And also you are living after! The memory I started at— My starting moor your laughter!

I crossed a moor with a name of its own. And a certain use in the world no doubt, And there I picked up from the lone A blank miles roundabout, A moulted feather, an eagle feather."

The meeting of Shelley was the only incident of importance in the man's life, yet he had no approach of it, which inspired the poets intense disgust. The Electric Wizard is still with the living generation though advanced in years and it should be a matter of pride to have lived contemporaneously with this wonderful genius, who has by his inventions marked an era in human progress. May he live long with his mentality untouched by time!—Ex.

INVALID SOLDIERS AT KENTVILLE.

"Of the 673 patients treated at the Provincial Sanatorium in Kentville during the year which ended on September 30th last, 505 were former Canadian soldiers. It is a national service," says the Sydney Record, "which the Nova Scotia Government has rendered by its work for invalid soldiers at Kentville and a much greater service than has been accomplished by other undertakings which have been given much more publicity."

COMPULSORY SCHOOLING.

In addressing the Kiwanis Club Dr. L. G. Gill, Ottawa, director of vocational education for the Federal Government, predicted that before many years, school attendance all over Canada would be made compulsory up to the age of 16 years, and this would be followed by legislation making the school age 18 years. Ontario, said the doctor, in September of this year, would increase the compulsory school attendance age to 14 years.

FOR generations, no breakfast in all the year has ranked as an "occasion" like that of Easter morning. For years, nothing on the Easter breakfast menu has ranked in national esteem with
