CHAPTER XVIII

"Tweet—twe-et—ewe-e-t," chirped a sparrow on the window sill of Duke's room the next morning.

He opened his eyes and glared at the bird. He could hear a clock striking five. He wanted more sleep. But the sparrow had other ideas.

"Same to you," said Duke. 'And perhaps you're right in making yourself an alarm clock. This is the biggest day in my life—so far—I shouldn't lose one moment of it."

He jumped out of bed. Then he noticed the other bed had not been slept in.

"Doubly right," said Duke to the sparrow. "Tip'll be coming in soon and he'd wake me up, anyway. Your method is pleasanter."

He lit a cigar and switched on the radio. He was so happy in the knowledge that Madison was staying, that he wanted music to accompany his thoughts. But all he heard was:

"To the left now, bend. And to the right—bend."

"Give me that phone," whispered Carol frantically.

"Oh all right," laughed Duke. you are lucky with Madison leaving. I don't see."

"What gave you that idea? I told you last night—"

"Yes, you told me. But if he's staying, why is his luggage stacked on the sidewalk?"

"You don't look drunk," said Duke, but, Tip my—"

"I tell you I saw his bags. Say did he pay you that ten grand he lost yesterday? Because—"

Duke reached the phone in one leap.

You say Mr. Madison is not in his room? That he—very well then, will you please give me Miss Clayton's room—Miss Carol Clayton."

He banged down the receiver and turned to Tip.

Strict orders not to be disturbed until her breakfast tray is taken to her at eleven o'clock. And they Anything goes on this glorious day. A little exercise will be good for me.

The door behind him opened. Tip was coming in.

"Next time we have to share a room, we don't," said Duke. "Even if this place is full up, you could—"

"Cut the growling," said Tip. "You've got real troubles and you—"

"Mistaken, Tip. I haven't a trouble in the world. And today the law of averages is going to work overtime for me—something tells me so."

"You always were screwy," grumbled Tip, "but how you figure out added they never give out numbers of rooms. So it's me to pound on every door in—"

She's in 218—a few doors down," said Tip. I saw her when she came in last night. But what if she is? Where—"

Duke did not answer. He stopped only to put his feet into bedroom slippers before running from the room. He rapped on the door of 218. When there was no answer, he rapped louder.

Just a minute please, came a sleepy voice.

He heard her come to the door, unlock it, open it. She had taken time only to put on her slippers, and to throw a negligee over her shoulders.

Duke! she gasped. I thought it was my breakfast."

Let me in! he demanded.

You can't come in.

Says who? he answered, pushing the door open and coming in.

You couldn't come in at any hour—but, her eyes seeking her little traveling clock—at five in the morning! In pajamas!

I'm here and here I stay. Now then, get that airport on the phone.

Get out of my room.

All right! If you won't do it, I will."

Why do you want the airport? she asked, but she was wondering how at this hour, Duke had discovered Madison was leaving.

You're going to get Madison and ask him to come back. That's why. I'll get—"

Wait! she said. You can't phone from my room. Do you want to get me into a scandal?"

He held the receiver out to her. She was doing some quick thinking.

They don't take off for almost an hour. He won't be there yest."

He realized she was right and placed the receiver on the hook. He, too, was doing some quick thinking. He took the receiver off the hook again. Carol made a rush for it but he pushed her roughly away.

You can't talk from—Carol protested But he was already talking.

She would have laughed if she had not been angry and so frightened. For Duke was talking to the operator in a falsetto voice which he may have thought sounded like Carol's, but which was humorous rather than realistic.

In the coffee-shop, you say? Please have him called to the phone. Tell him it is Miss Clayton."

Cut it out, cried Carol, beating at him with her hands. He covered the mouthpiece with one hand and held off easily with the other. He had a smile of triumph on his face.

I won't talk to him. I won't, she aid.

Oh yes, you will."

We said goodbye last night."

That was your error. Don't worry about what you are to say. I'll tell you and you'll say it, word for word."

They had lowered their voices to whispers. Suddenly Duke heard Madison's voice. He must be answered immediately. There was no choice for Duke.

Hello, darling, he said in high, mincing tones. Didn't they tell you I wanted to speak to you? Why, dear, it is Carol."

Give it to me, whispered Carol frantically, taking the phone.

You don't recognize my voice? Well it is I, all right. I'm only about one-quarter awake. But I did so want to hear your voice once more. It seems such a long time since last night.

She was silent for a moment, while Duke wondered what Madison could be saying.

Tell him to stay, he whispered in her free ear.

Oh that's all right, she was saying in as loud a tone as she could, to cover Duke's whispers, I am going back to sleep. But this has been worth losing a whole night's rest."

Another silence while she listened to Madison with one ear and heard in the other:

"Don't waste so much time. Tell him to stay."

"Nothing else, dear," she said. I just tracked you down to say goodbye again and to wish you a happy landing."

Madison was speaking again. Then she said:

What an idea! Of course there's no one here with me. Who would be at this hour?" She had pushed Duke from her, but now she saw him coming toward her with a look on his face she had never seen before. She went on: I'm afraid I'm detaining you dear. You'll be late for your plane. Good-bye, darling."

She turned around to face Duke whose eyes were blazing with fury.

You dirty, double-crossing little this-and-that," he cried.

She drew in her breath. She didn't like being spoken to like that, but he looked so handsome in his anger, there was such emotion in his voice, that she thrilled to it. It was incredible—but she knew she would rather be with Duke even when he reviled her than to be with anyone else. She knew he had no idea what was in her mind. He mustn't know. In the effort to recover her poise, she became distantly polite.

If it's all the same to you, Mr. Bradley, I wish to be alone now."

You've hooked that man for life," he groaned. And you won't even let me have him for just a week."

He turned away, laid the cigar which he had been holding on a dainty crystal ashtray on the table and strode up and down the room.

If only I could have had decent accommodations," she went on serenely, I would not be so inhospitable. But I couldn't get a suite, so I had to take this room, the last one left. But even if I had a room in which to receive a caller, don't you think the hour and our rather conspicuous lack of clothing would justify me in asking you to go?"

Duke continued his frenzied pacing, as if she had not spoken.

Just one week—one short week, he moaned, is all I wanted. It wouldn't have mattered to him nor to you. And to me!"

Now I must be actually rude, Carol said, as you have paid no attention to my rather broad hints. Will you please go at once?"

Suddenly Duke stopped, eyes wide open, a questioning look on his face. Carol turned in alarm to the door. There was certainly a light tapping on it. Chilled with fright, Carol and Duke looked at each other. Had some one heard them? Had some one in the next room complained of noise? What could they do?

There was only one thing to do and Carol did it. Her heart was beating with fear, she felt her throat contracting, but she did force herself to speak.

What is it? Who's there?"

It's I, dear, said Madison. Will you open the door a minute?"

Carol certainly is in a spot—and once again it's Duke's fault! How will she find an out? Don't miss tomorrow's exciting installment.

A Friend to the Aged As the Years Creep On

MILBURN'S HEALTH AND NERVE PILLS

In the later years of life we start to lose that snap and vigor of our younger days. The blood does not circulate as it once did, the vitality is on the wane, and the nerves not just as steady as they used to be.

Little sicknesses and ailments seem harder to shake off; and evidences of a breakdown begin to appear.

Those who wish to maintain their health and vigor and retain their energy should use Milburn's H. & Nerve Pills at this time of life

COULD NOT LIFT ARMS ABOVE HEAD

Owing to Painful Rheumatism

This woman suffered from rheumatism in her back, arms and legs. For two months, she edured this painful condition, then, like many another sufferer she decided to try Kruschen Salts. Read her letter:—

"About fifteen months ago I had rheumatism in my arms, back and legs. The pains in my arms and legs after getting warm in bed were almost unbearable. I was like that for two months, and could not reach above my head. I read so much about Kruschen Salts that I though I would try them. I am so glad to say that for more than a year I have not had the slightest return of my rheumatism."— (Mrs.) H. E.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to get rid of this excess uric acid.

Temperance Education

The Provincial Government's program of education along the lines of Temperance and Law Observance will begin with a series of public meetings to be addressed by

MRS. ELIZABETH NEWCOMBE

and other speakers, on the subject of

"CANADIANS AND LAW OBSERVANCE."

Mrs. Newcombe is a Temperance Lecturer and Social Worker of international repute, and has just returned from the World Conference of the W.C.T.U. at Washington, being Honorary President of the W.C.T.U. of Nova Scotia. The dates and places of meetings are as follows:

Tignish — Friday, July 2nd at 8 p. m.
Alberton — Saturday, July 3rd at 3 p. m.
O'Leary — Monday, July 5th at 8 p. m.
Wellington — Tuesday, July 6th at 8 p. m.
Rustico — Wednesday, July 7th at 8 p. m.

The co-operation of Churches and Temperance Organizations is solicited.
