—DODGING ISSUE — "During the years since the war, the Liberal Government has refused to deal with this issue other than on a year to year basis. Therefore every year an Agricultural Products Marketing Act was brought in to empower the government for another twelve months to export agricultural products through contracts. Farmers were not satisfied with this year-to-year basis. Sooner or later, there was always the prospect of the contracts expiring and the government refusing to cope with agricultural marketing needs even on the short-term basis of another year; and therefore farm marketing was bedevilled with the uncertainty of what another year might bring.

—WHEAT BOARD ACT — "A moment ago I mentioned the occasion when the farmers of Canada through the Canadian Federation of Agriculture presented their draft marketing act to the government; on that same occasion, they also repeated one of their old demands that coarse grains be taken off the speculative market and handled through the wheat board. The following day, by chance more than design, the C.C.F. brought in an amendment to the Wheat Board Act then before the House, asking that coarse grains be marketed through the wheat board.

—CURIOUS BELIEFS — "Two hundred years ago wallpaper was considered dangerous because of certain chemicals used in its manufacture. If a tooth ached it was yanked out by the family doctor with a pair of mechanic's pliers.

—SUFFERED MUCH with constipation — "I tried several remedies but could not end this old trouble. One day I was told I should try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. I began to eat this cereal regularly. And without exaggeration, it turned out to be perfect for me!" H. Mason, 5727 9th Avenue, Rosemount, Montreal.

GOLDWELL SCORES

"For many years the farmers of Canada, through the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, have sought marketing legislation which could prevent the twin tragedy of collapsing farm prices and collapsing farm markets." Mr. Goldwell said. "Every C. C. F. member who is elected to parliament will be committed to the passage of the national marketing legislation proposed by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in its brief to the Cabinet in February of this year, and for several years past.

Dodging Issue

"During the years since the war, the Liberal Government has refused to deal with this issue other than on a year to year basis. Therefore every year an Agricultural Products Marketing Act was brought in to empower the government for another twelve months to export agricultural products through contracts. Farmers were not satisfied with this year-to-year basis. Sooner or later, there was always the prospect of the contracts expiring and the government refusing to cope with agricultural marketing needs even on the short-term basis of another year; and therefore farm marketing was bedevilled with the uncertainty of what another year might bring.

Leaves Today

Mr. Goldwell leaves the Province by plane at noon today for Moncton where he is scheduled to speak this evening.

After arriving at Summerside yesterday evening he was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Olympia Restaurant attended by members of the C.C.F. Party. Mr. Roscoe Walker of Kensington, Provincial party president, presided and introduced Mr. Goldwell who expressed his pleasure at being present at such a pleasant gathering. He spoke of the beauty of the Island when seen from the air and said it reminded him of his native County Devon in England. He expressed his pleasure that such a fine candidate had been chosen to represent the party in Prince and he said he felt sure that he would roll up a considerable vote and perhaps win the constituency. He said he looked forward to the day when Canada, like many other democratic countries, will elect a government of the C.C.F. He told the members of the party who were present that it would take organization and effort and that in many places in Canada the C.C.F. is only laying the groundwork.

"The amazing fact of modern technological progress, Dr. Dudley said, "is in its relative infancy. This progress has become geometric in nature, and it is conceivable that an untimely end unless we get back to a moral and spiritual centre. The substitution of the use of gadgets for belief in God bodes no good for the future.

"We cannot wisely proclaim a moratorium on science, or hold back man's restless spirit, nevertheless, it will be the better part of wisdom to pause in our mechanical haste lest we lose our souls and perish. We have arrived at that point of history when we possess the means for complete destruction.

"It was but yesterday that the human race lived in a most primitive way. In the days of the early pioneers of this western continent life was rugged and arduous. Three hundred to one hundred years ago people lived in a rough and tumble way. In the time of the Puritans and Pilgrims milk sold for one cent a quart. The chief working animal on the farm was the ox. The common dinner fork was unknown. Men were gentlemen in proportion to their ability to eat with their knives. Experts balanced their peas with their knives, and sneered at peas with honey that they would stick better to the knife on their way from the wooden platter to the mouth.

"The houses of the Pilgrims were unheated, as were the homes of the early settlers of Canada. The churches of the day were kept in a similar condition lest religion be made too easy. Congregations partook of the sacrament with bread frozen on the Lord's table. The sermons were from two to three hours long, and frequently the prayers lasted from thirty to sixty minutes. Any prayer under thirty minutes raised a suspicion regarding the minister's spiritual condition.

"Two hundred years ago wallpaper was considered dangerous because of certain chemicals used in its manufacture. If a tooth ached it was yanked out by the family doctor with a pair of mechanic's pliers.

"One hundred and forty five years ago tomatoes were called love apples, and were considered poisonous. Little girls of eight and ten wore long skirts like their mothers. Small boys were dressed up to look like their grandfathers.

"One hundred and ten years ago it was believed that iron plows would poison the soil. This belief about the poisonous nature of iron in the ground lasted for over twenty years. Sixty-two years ago pullman cars were scorned because they were supposed to promote indecency, and business men regarded the pullman car as a snobby device to be shunned by real red-blooded men.

"In 1867 the modern typewriter was invented by Christopher Latham Sholes in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He regarded it as a mere toy but later sold it to the Remington Arms Company for twelve thousand dollars. Sixty five years ago the bicycle of the high front wheel type prepared the way for modern transportation both for work and pleasure. Factories ran from seven-thirty in the morning to seven-thirty in the evening. People got up at five o'clock and went to bed at nine.

"In contrast to all these astounding customs and institutions of a relatively recent past man has come into days of science and mechanical ingenuity. This modern world has come suddenly and almost without warning. Unheard of conveniences have multiplied, a thousandfold from the telephone, automobile, radio, radar, plastics to television.

"Now it is almost a contradiction to state that even though we do not want the past restored the present is pushing us into a future fraught with no end of difficulty and danger. Certainly it is necessary to appraise man's progress over the face of the earth. If the swift transition from new to old does not make healthier, happier and more secure people then the question may be legitimately asked as to whether material progress is worth preserving. For what does it avail if we live faster, eat faster, produce faster, travel faster, if in the end we die faster. The speed of the age is encroaching upon life's fundamental decencies, and life's fundamental solidarities.

She is survived by two sisters, Dorothy, nurse in Kenilworth Sanatorium, N.S., Grace, Mrs. Brewer Clarke, Linkletter, and two brothers Clair and Everett of Central Bedque, three nieces and one nephew besides a large circle of friends. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon from the Central Bedque Baptist Church and was largely attended. Her pastor, Rev. C.A. Britten conducted the service and took as his text, 13th Chapter Matthew 28 verse, "Come Unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest" and gave a very appropriate address. Hymns sung were "Lead Kindly Light", "The Old Rugged Cross" and "Abide With Me". Pallbearers, Ralph Calbeck, Ivan Dawson, Harry Green, Harold Bagnall, Emmet Smith and Leith Schurman.
