company. The bravest and best in our wide empire have not deemed it derogatory to their dignity to join the colors but have come forward in such numbers as to be the marvel of the entire world.

We appreciate you for the noble cause you espouse, that of retaining for us our blood-bought liberties, both civil and religious. This is the noblest and most sacred cause that can be entrusted to any people.

Now we say farewell. Under any circumstances it is hard to say goodbye, but tonight that duty is doubly hard. To each and every man in khaki we say fare-thee-well and command you one and all to the grace of God which is able to fortify you in the Supreme hour of testing and grant you a safe and speedy return to home and loved ones.
