STRANGLER'S CONFESSION FIVE DEATHS TRACED

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Boston's and New England's interest in the case of Frank Hickey assumed renewed activity today on account of the local features of Hickey's confession at Buffalo to being the boy strangler.

Hickey confessed to killing a Lowell man named Ed Morey in 1892 by putting laudanum in Morey's whiskey.

The Lowell police today found the death record of Morey.

Superintendent Redmond Welch of the Lowell police will send an inspector to aid in identifying Hickey in Buffalo if the Buffalo authorities desire.

Superintendent Welch also suspects Hickey may have had something to do with the disappearance of five-year-old Arthur G. Dent of Lowell in March 1900.

Hickey confesses that the post-card message he sent from Boston to the Buffalo and Lackawanna police, notifying them of the murders of the Kruek and Joseph boys, were written in Boston in the general delivery room in the main postoffice building.

There is no general delivery room at the central postoffice in Boston. The general delivery window is on the main corridor, and a person writing a postcard there would use one of the public writing desks in the corridor.

After Hearing the 549th Witness Discharged 4 of 45 Defendants

(Canadian Press) INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 2.—The government rested its case in the dynamite conspiracy trial to-day and after hearing the 549th witness voluntarily discharged the four of the 45 defendants there being no evidence to hold them.

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Structural Iron Workers, announced the resignation of Herbert S. Hockin as secretary of the organization.

He denounced Hockin as spy, who helped McNamara's organized dynamite crew and then gave information to the government following the quarrels with the confessed dynamiters.

gambling with four other Chinese and heard them concocting scheme to run Hum Foo by forging notes witness said in addition to gambling in Hop Lee's there were Chinese about the place smoking opium and that was a common practice.

It is possible that some of the Chinese may be criminally proceeded against. There is great excitement among laundrymen here and it is feared that serious results may develop out of the case.

200,000 TURKS LOST DURING THE WAR

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 1.—Foreign observers here daily are aroused either to condemnation or admiration of the Turks by reason of some peculiar display of characteristics, which are different from those of the peoples of the west.

The Hamidieh's captain brought his ship back to Constantinople in a manner few European commanders would have adopted. He took a course across the deep sea and arrived at the Golden Horn with the deck of the cruiser eighteen inches above water.

The ship was practically sunk at the entrance of the dock, and the engineers apparently are now unable to move her in or out.

Asked by the foreign naval officers why he failed to save the ship after his ship was torpedoed, the captain replied that his crew was under good discipline and he feared they might mutiny if they saw the shore nearby.

Consequently he took a chance of sinking.

These incidents are difficult to understand by westerners with their present day fashion of conserving human life. Foreigners are unable to understand how the Turks stand and listen unaffected by the groans and agonies of the wounded or the cholera sufferers, often not attempting to alleviate them. They do not realize that the sufferers, were condition reversed, would lend no aid to their brethren in distress.

This stoicism, while in sense it is admirable, is costing the nation a terrible price in soldiers. One cannot walk the streets without encountering long lines of broken men. Some times they number thousands.

They are lame, halt, and enfeebled, and dressed in all manners of ragged uniforms and reeking in filth. Part of the religion of the Turks is to be clean, but that same religion, by fatalism or indifference, creates conditions which make cleanliness impossible. These men are wrecks of the Turkish army.

It is impossible to reckon accurately the number of Turks lost by their own disorganization and indifference to human life, but it seems safe to say that 200,000 have become ineffective since the war began.
