MORE MEN AND STILL MORE MEN NEEDED FROM BRITAIN AND CANADA

Lord Kitchener's Appeal to the Manhood of the Empire to Come Forward and Help Save the Country: The Shirkers and Pink Tea Men Should Search Their Conscience

LONDON, July 10.—Following is the address delivered by Earl Kitchener at the Guild Hall in inaugurating a special recruiting campaign:

"Hitherto the remarks I have found necessary to make on recruiting have been mainly addressed to the house of lords, but I have felt that the time now has come when I may with advantage make another and larger demand on the resources of English manhood.

"Enjoying as I do the privilege of a freeman of this great city I am sure my words, uttered in the heart of London, will spread broadcast throughout the nation."

The secretary of war referred to the bravery of the Indian forces and the Canadians, fighting alongside their British and French comrades in Flanders and presenting a solid and impetuous front.

"In the Dardanelles," Lord Kitchener continued, "the Austrian and New Zealanders combined already have accomplished a feat of arms most unexampled in brilliancy and audacity. The campaign to a successful conclusion."

"In each of the great dominions new and large contingents are being prepared while South Africa, not content with the successful conclusion of an arduous campaign in South-West Africa, is now offering large forces to engage the enemy in the main theatre of war.

"Strengthened by the unflinching support of our fellow citizens across the seas, we seek to develop our own military resources to the utmost limits and it is the purpose which brings us together today."

Specifying three things necessary to conduct a modern war successfully, he said, "material and money are the essential factors. The Government with its new loan was supplying money with a final marked success and that the ministry of munitions was handling its work in a highly satisfactory manner. He continued:

"There still remains a vital need for men to fill the ranks of our armies and it is to emphasize this point and to bring it home to the people of this country that I have come here. When I look up the office I hold I did so as a soldier and not as a politician and I warned my fellow countrymen that the war would not be only arduous but long. In one of the beginning of the war I said, 'I should require more men and still more until the enemy is crushed.' I repeat that statement today with even greater insistence.

"All the reasons which led me to think in August 1914 that this war would be a prolonged one, hold good at the present time. It is true that we are in an immeasurably better situation than we were ten months ago, but our position today is at least as serious as it was then. Through preparedness Germany, due to her strenuous efforts sustained at high pressure, for some forty years has issued in a military organization, as complex in character as it is perfect in machinery.

"It is true that Germany's long preparation enabled her to utilize her whole resources from the very commencement of the war, while our policy is one of gradually increasing in our efforts. It might be said with truth that we must decrease, while we increase."

The speaker here dwelt on the question of raising new armies, "some of which have already made their presence felt at the front," and continued:

"From the first there has been a constant and satisfactory flow of recruits and the falling off in numbers recently apparent in the recruiting ranks has been due, I believe in great degree to conditions of a temporary character.

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the value of the response that has been made to my previous appeal, but I am here today to make another demand on the manhood of the country to come forward to its defence. I was from the first unwilling to ask for a supply of men in excess of the equipment available for them.

"I hold it to be most undesirable that soldiers should be thus checked and possibly discouraged or that the completion of this training should be hampered owing to the lack of arms.

"We now happily have reached a period when it can be said that this drawback has been surmounted and that the troops in training can be supplied with sufficient arms and material, to turn them out as efficient soldiers. Now we are able to clothe and equip all recruits as they come in and thus the call for men no longer is restricted by any limitations.

"It is an axiom that the larger an army is the greater is its need of an ever swelling number of men of reliable age to maintain its full strength yet at the same time the supply of those very men is automatically decreasing.

"The time has now come when when something more is required to meet the demand of our forces over the seas being fully men and enable the large reserve of men required for the proper conduct of the war to be formed and trained. The dimensions of the new army already have reached a figure which only a short time ago would have been considered utterly unthinkable, but there is a tendency perhaps, to overlook the fact that these large armies require still larger reserves to make good the wastage at the front.

"And one cannot ignore the certainty that our requirements in this respect will be large, continuous and persistent, for one feels that our gallant soldiers in the fighting line are beckoning with an urgency at once imperious and pathetic to those who remain at home to come out and play their part, too.

"The recruiting meetings, the marches and unwearying labors of the recruiting officers, committee and individuals, have borne good fruits, but we must go a step further to attract and attach individuals who from shyness or other causes have not yet yielded to their own patriotic impulses.

"When the registration is completed shall anyone be able to note the men between the ages of 19 and 40 who are not required for munition or other necessary industrial work and therefore, available, if physically fit, for the fighting line.

"Steps will be taken to approach, with a view to enlistment, all possible candidates for the army, unmarried men as far as possible, the married men as far as possible.

"The work of completing the registration will extend over some weeks. Meanwhile it is of vital and paramount importance that as large a number of men as possible should press forward to enlist. I would urge all employers to help by releasing all men qualified for the service, replacing them by men not recruited, as the result of age, or by women, as already has been found feasible, in so many cases.

"What the numbers required are likely to be, it is clearly inexpedient to shout abroad. Our constant refusal to publish either these or any other figures likely to prove useful to the enemy needs neither explanation nor apology.

"It has often been urged that if more information were given as to the work and whereabouts of the various units, recruiting would be strongly stimulated, but this is the precise information which would be of the greatest value to the enemy, and it is regrettable to note that a German prince in high command recently recorded recently his complete ignorance of our new army.

"But one set of figures is available for everybody. This is supplied by the casualty lists. In regard to these lists, however, serious and sad, as they necessarily are, let two points be borne in mind.

"First, that a very large percentage of the casualties represent comparatively slight hurts, and the sufferers from which, in time, return to the front; and second, that if the figures seem to run very high the magnitude of the operation is thereby suggested.

"Indeed, these casualty lists, whose great length may now and again induce an undue impression, are an instructive indication of the huge extent of the operations undertaken and now reached by the British forces in the field.

"There are two classes of men to whom my appeal must be addressed. Those for whom it is claimed they are indispensable, whether for work directly associated with our military operations or for other purposes, public or private; and second, those to whom has been applied the ugly name of Shirkers.

"As regards the former the question must searchingly be driven home to their consciences, however responsible, however technical, and not in this time of stress be adequately carried out by men unfit for active military service, or by women.

"And here, I cannot refrain from paying a tribute of grateful recognition to the large number of Women of every class and phase of life who have come forward, and have placed their services unreservedly at their country's disposal.

"The harvest of grateful recognition to the large number of Women of every class and phase of life who have come forward, and have placed their services unreservedly at their country's disposal.

"The field marshal said there had been much talk about slackers—that is persons doing literally nothing to help the country—but that this should not be exaggerated, for he believed the residuum of absolute 'do-nothings' was relatively small.

Lord Kitchener particularly addressed himself to persons now engaged in patriotic or other useful work who found in this work an excuse for not joining the army. For instance, there are many special con-

THROUGH THE GUARDIAN'S SIEVE

By The Sieve Man.

The grounds surrounding the new St. Dunstan's Cathedral have been nicely graded and are being made ready for grass. If the people can only be kept from walking on it the Cathedral lawn will soon be one of the beauty spots of the city.

The kiltie band which came over from Pictou for the Orange celebration was not large numerically, but its performances made up for what was lacking in this respect. The pipes had an unusually sweet tone, and the man who beat the bass drum delighted the small boys with his gymnastics.

There were a good many flags flying here on Monday, the "Glorious Twelfth." It is a good idea to display flags on holidays and when there are public gatherings, but why not have more of them flying on other days? In these days of war the sight of the good old Union Jack or the Canadian flag is an inspiration.

Motor-boating has become a great sport here. The fleet of boats is large and includes all kinds and sizes. The engine power runs all the way from three to twenty, the latter being for large craft and racers. The Sieve Man is not the owner of a motor boat, but thanks to the generosity of a friend who has one he has enjoyed several sails up East and West rivers as well as outside the harbor. The sail up West river to Bonshaw is especially charming with its narrow winding channel and scenery that must delight any one with an eye for the beautiful.

After the long-drawn-out spring and all the wet weather we have had, the island is rapidly taking on its summer loveliness and in a short time it will be looking its best. And when the island is looking its best there is no place like it. It is well named "The Garden of America."

Isn't it about time that some of our merchants improved their store fronts by putting up new signs? Some signs have been in use so long that they must be old enough to have voted at several elections.

Labor Day is the next public holiday. It is also one of the days on which no one works but the newspaper men who have to chronicle the good times the other fellow has enjoyed.

The dry dock the Government is building at Southport will supply a want that has long been felt. But we had to wait for it until the Conservatives got into power, just as we have had to wait for other things that we needed.

WHY THEY DON'T ENLIST

"It might kill father."
"Mother said I wasn't."
"Khaiki doesn't suit my complexion."
"Flanders is too far away from street."
"I haven't been in a fight since I was a kid and then I was licked."
"They won't miss me; let the other fellow join."
"I am a charitable soul. Charity begins at home. I'll wait until the fighting does, too."
"I wouldn't join anything except a Scotch regiment, and my legs are too skinny for kilts."
"A dollar a day? Why, I'm getting twenty a week!"
"I'm so fond of the chickens, I've grown chicken hearted."
"I hate the Germans so much I might be guilty of an atrocity if I got over there."
"I got no use for the guys that put the form in uniform."
"My best girl threw me down for a soldier. Since then, nothing doing."
"My girl told me if I enlisted she would be through with me. Her father gave a thousand dollars to the Patriotic Fund and she thought that was enough."
"Well, it's all three thousand miles away, ain't it?"
"If I help pay for the show, that's good enough for me."
"When they've got into Germany what are they gonna do with it? Cut it up into building lots, eh?"
"They don't fight fair. Poisonous gases, dum fums, bayonetting wounded, firing on hospitals."
"Say, if we all went, who'd cheer the brave fellows marching along the streets?"
"Will I sign my name to these sound and sufficient reasons why my friends and I don't enlist? This is it."
I. M. F. RAID.

stables of military age. All such he urged, to search their conscience and to ask themselves if they really had a valid excuse for not joining the army.

"It is not for men to tell you your duty; that is a matter for your conscience," the secretary of war said. "But make up your minds and do so quickly, and be certain your so-called reason is not a selfish excuse. It has been well said that in every man's life there is one supreme hour to which all his earlier experiences moves and from which all future reckoned.

"For every individual Briton, as well as for our national existence that solemn hour is now striking. Let us take heed as the great opportunity offers, and which most assuredly we must grasp now and at once, or never."

"Let each man of us see that we spare nothing, shirk nothing and shrink from nothing, if only we may lend our full weight to the impetus which shall carry to victory the cause of our honor and of our freedom."

"On moving a vote of thanks to Earl Kitchener and pledging the city of London to support him Sir Edward Carson the attorney-general, answered a section of the British press which recently has been attacking the war minister.

He said:—

"It is enough to say of him that he possesses the absolute confidence of every colleague in the cabinet, and what is more, the absolute confidence and unflinching devotion of a grateful nation. I do not know a poorer service any one could give his country than to attempt to shake the confidence of the nation in Lord Kitchener."

Sir Edward concluded: "Voluntary recruiting is now on its trial. Does any one doubt if it fails that we shall hesitate to apply compulsory service?"

Kabul. The men, who are Pathans, formed part of the Indian army fighting in Flanders. They were captured by Germans and sent to Constantinople in the hope, the letter said, that being Mohammedans they might be induced to join the Turks. With unwavering loyalty, however, the Pathans finally succeeded in eluding their guard and in reaching Persia. They travelled along the Northern route through Sunnite country and ultimately arrived at the Afghanistan capital. They are now on their way to join their regimental depot in India.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, CANADA

An Acrostic written by J. F. Mellick,
Elmira, P. E. I.

Pride of the rolling sea,
River and field and tree
Inspire our song.
Nestled amongst the waves—
Consistent the billows have
Evening, noon and morn.

Every babbling brook,
Delightful shady nook,
Wondrously fair,
And its many flowers—
Rich in fruit and flowers;
Delicious, fragrant air.

I love its rocks and drills
Seashore and white sand hills;
Lakes broad and grand,
And 'neath the maple tree,
Now and ever more to be,
Dear, native land.

Come then and share its charms,
Away from all that harms—
Noise, dust and heat.
And you will find with me,
Down here beside the sea
A land hard to beat.

Kabul. The men, who are Pathans, formed part of the Indian army fighting in Flanders. They were captured by Germans and sent to Constantinople in the hope, the letter said, that being Mohammedans they might be induced to join the Turks. With unwavering loyalty, however, the Pathans finally succeeded in eluding their guard and in reaching Persia. They travelled along the Northern route through Sunnite country and ultimately arrived at the Afghanistan capital. They are now on their way to join their regimental depot in India.
