Living & Leisure THE WOMAN'S REALM

O years, gone down into the past. What pleasant memories come to me of your untroubled days of peace. And hours almost of ecstasy.

Prince Control Questions and Answers

Questions and Answers on Price Control will appear in The Guardian as a regular feature each day. The questions are those which have reached the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from housewives in this region. The answers are provided by the Board's Readers.

I bought a number of books recently and find the price very much higher than in previous years. Is there no ceiling on such things?

The books you mentioned in your letter are printed in the United States. We have no control over the price... there is, however, a ceiling price on books printed in Canada.

Is a military store allowed to sell a hat for a price lower than the one marked on the tag?

Yes, if the ceiling price set for any item does not necessarily mean that the article must be sold at that price... the supply with the price charged by many retailers sell at prices below the ceiling... perhaps this hat had been in stock some time and the price was reduced in order to make a quick sale.

MORNING SMILE

During a duststorm at one of the army camps a recruit sought shelter in the cook's tent. After a moment he remarked to the cook: "If you wouldn't get so much dust in the soup."

"See here, my lad," said the cook. "Your duty is to serve your country. Yes, but not to eat it," said the recruit.

A little bird sat on a telegraph wire. And said to his mate, "I declare, if wireless telegraphy comes into vogue, we'll all have to sit on the air."

Dorothy Dix Says—

SOME BOY FRIENDS UNWORTHY Army Training Is Best Means Of Making Real Men Out Of Cads

DEAR MISS DIX: My 16-year-old daughter has a boy friend who takes possession of our home by pounding on the piano and turning on the radio to a station he likes, regardless of the likes of anyone else in the household. He criticizes her dress, calls her dumb, tells her she doesn't have to obey me and tries to get her to skip classes as he does. He tells her he doesn't have any money to take her out, yet spends $15 on himself trying to get a second sinatra.

My daughter tries to laugh off his lack of manners and his laziness, but I can't see anything amusing in his rudeness. Am I not justified in asking her to find a civilized boy friend who is a gentleman? Or have all the nice, well-bred boys gone to war? Just what are the chances in life for a boy of this character or for the girl who falls in love with him?

ANSWER: The chances for blumpious, conceited young asses, such as the one you describe, used to be absolutely nil, for nobody would put up with their arrogance and their lack of manners. They never could keep a job or make friends. Everybody avoided them as the pests they were. They were doomed to become parasites on their parents and hangers-on of pool rooms and casinos of drinks.

But the brightest spot in the war is that it takes these young cads and turns them into men. A drill sergeant gives them the discipline that their fond and foolish mothers didn't. They are being made to consider others instead of themselves, to do the things they don't want to do and to show respect for authority. It is working such a reformation on the insulting parents that this ill-bred young man offers her. If your daughter certainly has little pride if she puts up with the insult that that dates are at a premium, girls feel that they must take what they can get and not be too choosy.

The only solution that I can see of your problem is for this lad to be drafted into the army. But his type is pretty likely to find some way to wiggle out and be a home-sitter instead of a fighter.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Can you please tell us what we can do when our mother who is ruining our home and making us all nervous wrecks with her constant complaining and nagging? In particular, she has never heard of doing her own housework. He doesn't drink or go out anywhere, but works hard all day and at night to get more money to buy us kids nice things. Yet she never lets him have a minute's peace at home. How would be very happy if she would only stop saying nasty things to Father.

EDNA AND ALICE. ANSWER: Evidently your mother is one of the neurotic women who get their pleasure in life out of torturing other people, and as their families are the most available victims, they concentrate on pouring all of their venom on them.

The only way to deal with these domestic fiends is by brighten-up their lives. Your mother does not want to lose her good home and comfortable living by having to go out and support herself, so if your father would tell her that he was going to take you children and go off to establish a home where you could live in peace, it would make her behave herself, if anything would.

DEAR MISS DIX: My fiancé and I quarrel continually over every single thing, although we love each other. Do you think if we got married we would be able to live together in peace?

H. M. ANSWER: No. You would find far more things to quarrel over if you were married and were thrown in continual contact with each other than now while you are temporarily antagonistic, and you will be wise to part and seek mates who are more congenial to you.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Like our Christmas-day, we at Alderlea began this New Year's day, very early. My cold, which had kept me—most altogether unwillingly—in bed on Saturday, and again yesterday was showing definite signs of improvement.

In fact, or so I told myself, my condition last evening was such that while below stairs would be in the nature of a benefit to my illness. Bed is a tiresome-place. Besides Judy had already commenced this notion of mine. For supper, she had brought me a fresh-egg-fried. Very good. When I coughed an eye-row questioning and asked: "Which diet am I taking now?"

Without a moment's hesitation Judy answered: "A convalescent!" James had gone in the road to Rob's, to see Jabat before he goes to bed," he said. I dressed slowly and came to the kitchen, now in the possession of Judy, who read beside the lamp at the round-table. I think now perhaps the impulse that prompted my rising was that never before.

Such a peculiar happening occurred out-doors. There's a roar from the water tumbling through the waste-rates below the front field. James has come indoors from cutting a drain to clear water from the window. Judy's wished for that has been content to sit by the window. Until tomorrow — Diary—Good-night.

Children of working mothers must take their lunch to school and what goes into the lunch box they carry can make a real difference in their health and in the marks on their report card. Three essentials in every lunch box, according to the Nutrition Division, Ottawa, are milk, a protein food such as eggs, cheese or meat, which may be in sandwich form, and a fruit or vegetable. When possible one food should be hot. In this school where many of the children stay for lunch, each child brings, in a glass jar, food to be heated. At recess the jars are placed in a pan of water on the stove and when the twelve o'clock bell rings the food is piping hot. Cocoa, cream soup, scalloped potatoes and creamed vegetables are favourites with the children.
