The first for being drunk and creating a disturbance in the Paradise Cafe on Tuesday night. The second charge was for having a revolver on his person. The evidence was that he was hopelessly drunk and was staggering around the restaurant swearing and wanting to fight. When the Police arrested him, they searched him and found a revolver on his person. There were five blank cartridges in it. For the first offence he was given ten days in jail with an additional fine of $35 and in default of payment two months in jail. On the second count he was fined $40 and costs or in default of payment two months in jail. The accused did not offer any evidence. An adjourned case against Joseph Gallant for creating a disturbance in the same restaurant on September 7th, by swearing was found guilty and fined $20 or one month in jail. A speeder, who admitted to the Police that he was going at forty miles an hour in the town was fined $25 and costs or thirty day in jail. S.

—DEATH DEEPLY REGRETTED—The potato growers of the east will greatly regret the death of Frank McVarish, of Harmony Junction, which occurred Sunday morning. For the last several seasons Mr. McVarish was the representative of the Potato Growers' Association at Harmony Junction, where large shipments of certified seed stock are made each fall, from the districts of Rockbarra, Big Pond, Hermanville, Souris Line Road, both north and south. These individual shippers in their dealings with Frank McVarish, learned to love and respect the man and place every confidence in him for they found him to be fair and honest, neither favoring the association which employed him, nor the shippers, but equally fair and square to both. His somewhat sudden death was not a great surprise, seeing that he suffered a peculiar disease for the past several years, and which even puzzled the doctors. Two years ago he went under treatment for almost the whole winter in the hospitals in Boston. He returned not cured, but only improved. He wasn't able to do much hard work on the farm, but the work of his duties at the Railway Station, which was within a quarter of a mile of his home, suited him nicely. There are two grown-up boys at home who can carry on, and his wife, nee Josephine McInnis, but the family will miss him and hold for him a tender spot in their hearts.

Silver Fox Industry Makes Fine Progress

(Mail and Empire)

The Canadian Province of Prince Edward Island is the cradle and home of the fox farming industry. Started in 1878, the industry has had a steady growth and has spread to all Provinces of the Dominion. Prince Edward Island, moreover, is now supplying live foxes for the stocking of fur farms in Europe. The silver fox is the "star" of the industry, and the beauty of its fur has made it a favorite in the markets of the world. The earliest authentic record of the raising of foxes in captivity comes from Tignish, in the Northern part of Prince Edward Island. The growth of the industry was slow until 1890, when it was stimulated by a period of rising prices for furs. In 1913, an enumeration by the Commissioner of Agriculture for Prince Edward Island showed 277 fox farms in that Province, with a total of 3,130 foxes. Meanwhile experiments in the raising of foxes in captivity were being made in other Provinces, and the records show that foxes were successfully bred in Quebec in 1898, in Ontario in 1905 and in Nova Scotia in 1906. Fox farming is now carried on in all Provinces of the Dominion, and the number of farms is steadily increasing. The latest statistics available show that 1928 there were 4371 fur farms in the Dominion, of which 3,676 were fox farms.

The development of the industry with relation to the silver fox led to the formation in 1915 of the Prince Edward Island Silver Fox Breeders' Association, and five years later to that of the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association. The last named is the largest breed society in the Dominion, and registers annually a larger number of pedigree animals than is to be found in any other species of live stock. The 70,883 silver fox cubs born in 1929, and registered by this association, are descended from less than a score of silver foxes taken from the wild by the pioneer breeders. The remarkable growth of the silver fox industry is indicated by the figures of the last four years, taken from Canadian live stock records, of silver fox cubs registered by the above association: 1926, 32,355; 1927, 39,767; 51,624; 1929, 70,883.

Production of Pelts
While there has been a larger sale of live silver foxes as breeding stock during the last few years than ever before, these animals represent only about 25 per cent. of the silver foxes produced. The main function of silver fox ranching is the production of pelts, in fact, a large number of the ranchers are no longer interested in the sale of live foxes. As a consequence, there has been a rapid increase in the number of silver fox pelts coming into the market; but, as the number has increased, a wider and more general interest has been shown in silver fox furs by the fur buyers, and by the fur trade as a whole. This has resulted, generally speaking, in a steady increase in the prices obtained for silver fox furs. As was to be expected, conditions last autumn had a marked effect on the prices of all pelts at the December and January fur sales, but silver fox furs were less affected than any other class. In the later decades of the 19th century before foxes were raised in captivity it has been estimated that between 2,000 and 3,000 silver fox pelts were placed upon the market annually. For the past two years over 100,000 silver fox pelts have been absorbed each year by the fur trade, and, as the number of captured wild animals has not increased, it is estimated that wild pelts comprise only about 2,000 of this number. This estimate is confirmed by the fact that at the different fur auctions pelts of wild foxes formed less than 2 per cent of the total offerings.
