CONCERNING THE PROPOSED DAYLIGHT BILL.

Hens Must Lay

If you feed them Pratt's Egg Poultry Powder. This may be taking a mean advantage of the hen, but it is a profitable one, for it works Pratt's Poultry Powder contains all the needed elements for egg production and it is just as effective as a general poultry remedy. What is called the Daylight Bill has passed its second reading in the British House of Commons. The motion on which the bill is based was first advocated in a pamphlet published by one William Willett, London in August 1907. In the following year William Pearce, the Liberal member for the Tower Hamlets introduced a bill which was referred to a committee and favorably reported upon. The bill was reintroduced at the present session and provides that on a certain day all clocks shall be set forward eighty minutes. Great things are claimed for the proposed measure, and it has attracted world-wide attention. Among the alleged advantages are that it would promote early rising, give an hour and twenty minutes more daylight for business, benefit the physique of the nation and so on. At this distance it is a little difficult to realize how all these advantages would be likely to result from so simple an expedient as setting the clocks ahead of solar time.

As it is now noon is approximately at the middle of the day and midnight at the middle of the period of darkness. On January 1st the sun rises at 7.52 a. m. and sets at 4.52 p. m., the afternoon being 48 minutes longer than the forenoon. On 1st July the sun rises at 4.39 a. m. and sets at 8.03 p. m. giving an afternoon 42 minutes longer than the forenoon. Now let us see what effect the setting of all the clocks forward 30 minutes would have. The sun would not change its real time of rising or setting but by the clocks would on January 1 appear to rise at 9.12 a. m. and set at 6.12 p. m. On July 1 the clock time for sunrise would be 5.59 and of sunset 9.23. In January the afternoon would have three hours and twenty-four minutes longer daylight than the forenoon, and in July the difference of length would be three hours and twenty-four minutes. What would be the advantage of increasing the length of the afternoon at the expense of the forenoon, the afternoon being already the longer half of the day? Or, take the case of the working man and his ten hour day. He naturally requires his midday meal when his day's work is half completed. With the clocks set ahead eighty minutes he must begin work that much earlier in the real day or change his dinner hour to a later period than he has been accustomed to by clock time.

The common sense of the situation would seem to be to leave the clocks as they are, keeping the same time as the sun as near as may be. The hours for rising, going to work and taking meals might be made to fit in with the daylight season, without changing the clocks at all. In these days, however, every new fad will have its advocates and there are many who would make changes in our manners and customs, times and seasons, merely for the sake of change.

THE INSIDE HISTORY OF THE PORT PRINCE RUPERT.

A writer in Toronto Saturday Night tells something of the inner history of the Grand Trunk's Pacific terminus, of which the following is a condensation. Port Simpson was the company's first prospective site but land speculators got in ahead and the company disappointed them by selecting Prince Rupert. But here again the speculators had to be reckoned with. In the name of Mrs. Anderson, Kaein Island was bought from the British Columbia Government for $10,000. The island was necessary for the carrying out of the company's plans, and they acquired Mrs. Anderson's rights by paying $20,000.

This way only the beginning however, for the sale of crown lands is governed by a clause which provides that if any of the land is subsequently divided into town lots one quarter of the lots must revert to the crown. To get free from the embarrassing provision and secure full control of the town lots, the company negotiated with the Dominion Government for an adjoining Indian reserve, thinking, as appears that this was not provincial land. But the provincial Government claimed reversionary rights to the land after the Indian title was extinguished, so the company found themselves in the same position with regard to this land after buying out the Indians. And then at the psychological moment one John Houston staked out some mineral claims on the land, had them properly recorded, and thus according to law, acquired first right to the ground, "in effect, stealing it under the nose of the company." And he had to be reckoned with in big figures. But the end was not yet. The company had offered handsome prizes for a well-sounding name for their Pacific terminus and had selected the name Prince Rupert, as all the world knows, but what the world did not know till recently was that before the name was recorded, one John Kane stepped in and had the name Prince Rupert officially recorded for a townsite of his own, situated fifteen miles away from the company's terminus, and the law of British Columbia will not allow the same name to be recorded for two townsites. So between the settlements with two Governments, the Indians, Mrs. Anderson, Houston and Kane, and the B. C. Government still owning one quarter of the lots, the company has learned something about townsites that will not be forgotten till Laurier has finished his work.

Some of the country members want the Legislature to finish its work. S. D. Scott has been chosen editor of The Standard newspaper, which ran for a time as a Conservative daily in St. John during the elections and is to be revived and put on a permanent basis.

OBITUARY.

At Alliston, Ont. Kings Co., on the afternoon of Wednesday February 3rd, there passed peacefully away to his rest and his reward, Alexander MacLeod, senior—A most worthy and venerable citizen and an esteemed father. Of him it might have been said in the expressive language of scripture, "He, after he served his own generation, by the will of God, fell asleep." The call came to him as it came to the patriarch Abraham "in a good old age;" for the days of the years of his life numbered four score and seven years. Then, "the silver cord was loosened." His work was done and like warrior olden he laid his armor down, and passed all silent through the portal golden where gleams the victor's crown. Mr. MacLeod, was born in the Highlands of Scotland, and emigrated with his parents to this Island in the year of 1839. The family located at Brookfield, Queens Co. He was then a young man seventeen years of age. A few years later saw him well married and settled at Darlington, Ont. There he dwelt long enough to see his family of three sons and three daughters grow up and go forth from the old home into the world and set up homes of their own. After which he disposed of his country home, to reside in the city of Charlottetown where he and his life companion lived until about four years ago, when they removed to Alliston to spend the closing years of life with their son Alexander. Being blessed with good health, and with the continuation of his faculties to a wonderful degree, those closing years of life were to the deceased among the happy years of his old age. Years of retirement from labor—freedom from care, fretfulness and worry—years of genuine contentment with his lot. His heart full of gratitude and thankfulness to God, and full of appreciation of the filial kindness and devotion shown by his dear family to "father and mother." A devotion almost proverbial. But dark cloud came over the bright setting sun of his life on the first of May, last, for the night of death came to his partner in life, and there with the rain of sorrow fell quietly but heavily upon him. Although he realized that the separation would be only for a little while, yet there was henceforth a constant loneliness in his heart and ever a vacant chair in his home. With the coming of winter he began to pine away, and the end came suddenly and soon. The deceased bequeathed many splendid qualities of head and heart. He was a man of intellectual vigor—of retentive memory—of strong will power of positive convictions—with a rich emotional nature—a lover of home and his family. His faith in Christ was marked by simplicity and trustfulness. For many years he was a loyal member of the Presbyterian church, devoted to her doctrines, her worship and interested in her growth and progress. When living in Charlottetown, he worshipped in Zion Church and was a member of it. In his closing years he was a great reader, the Bible was his boon companion and the word of God dwelt richly in heart and memory. Three sons and three daughters survive him to cherish the memory of a fond parent. His sons Murdoch and Neil then a young man prominent citizens of the city of Moncton, N. B., and Alexander, is well to do farmer at Alliston. His daughters are Mrs. John Gillis of Montreal, Mrs. M. Peckham of St. John, Nfld., and Mrs. A. D. McLeod of Saskatchewan. Mrs. McLeod visited Saskatchewan, Mrs. McLeod visited her father a few weeks before his death and was with him in his last illness. The funeral was largely attended. Rev. A. Gray officiated. The mortal remains were borne to Caltonia cemetery, and laid to rest by the side of his beloved companion, laid to rest—until the day breaks and the shadows flee away.

RHEUMATISM A very bad case that was cured by persevering with an old time remedy. "Were it not that I had great patience and perseverance," writes Mr. Fritz Keller, well known in London, "I would still be racked by chronic rheumatism, which was my unhappy lot for three years. I didn't have acute rheumatism as so many have—with me the pain and stiffness came on gradually. When I kept quiet, as on Sunday, I was free from pain, but being a working man I had to move about and the pain was simply awful, though after an hour's resting it would subside. I got the idea into my head that although the pain was in my joints, the rheumatic poison was in my blood. My druggist said 'Ferrozone' was a wonderful blood tonic and I began to use it. At first it didn't help at all, only change was a better appetite and more strength. Not being a doctor I didn't know that Ferrozone was all the while working at the root of the disease. I kept right on with Ferrozone and in three months was cured. There is no more stiffness, no pain, and I am as limber as forty years ago." Every kind of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nerve Pain and Blood Disorder is quickly cured by Ferrozone. Satisfaction guaranteed, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.
