Ralston Outlines Formation Of Armored Units

OTTAWA, March 13—(CP) — Defence Minister Ralston outlined for the House of Commons today the formations of the army tank brigade and the Canadian armored division which, under the 1941 program, will proceed overseas this year.

The army tank brigade, "which should prove most valuable to the Canadian corps" will be equipped primarily with infantry tanks. The armored division will work on its own and will be equipped with cruiser tanks.

"That unit (the armored division) is regarded as most essential by our friends over there and they expressed them selves extremely gratified that we were able to make the arrangment which was made," said Col. Ralston.

Col. Ralston said the army tank brigade is often confused in the public mind with the armored corps and explained the tank brigade is a formation "which we hope will be working with the Canadian corps."

Arrangements had been made in the United Kingdom with regard to supplying any equipment which may be necessary in the event the army tank brigade crosses the sea before it is fully equipped.. This, he said, is the same arrangement which holds for the armored division which will consist of some 40 units and will have a personnel of about 13,-000."

Composition

The Minister outlined the tank brigade's composition as follows:—

One tank battalion will be made up of the Ontario regiment; another tank battalion will be made up of the Three Rivers regiment and another will be made up of the Calgary regiment. Then there are other detachments and formations. The first, 1st army tank brigade company, R.C.A.S.C. made up of reserve corps troops company R.C.A.S.C. second, No. 2 light field ambulance, R.C.A.S.C., made up from No. 2 field ambulance. Third, 1st army tank brigade workship, R.N.O.C., made up from No. 3 reserve army field workshop. Montreal. Fourth, 7st army tank brigade ordance field park. R.C.O.C., made up from reserve ordnance store company, Ottawa. Fifth, No. 59 light aid detachment, R.C.M.O.N., made up from No. 3 reserve army field workshop, R.C.O.C., Montreal.

Fifth, No. 60 light aid detachment, R.C.O.C., made up of No. 3 reserve army field workshop, Montreal. Seventh No. 61 light aid detachment, R.C.O.C., made up of No. 3 reserve army field workshop R.C.O.C., Montreal. Eghth, Intelligence section. Ninth, Signals section.

Regarding the armored division Col. Ralston recalled that last Autumn there was mention of forming an armored corps.

"There was actually organized an armored brigade, which was one unit of that corps," he added.

"We now are forming an armored division as a whole. This will consist of something like 40 units, including signals, engineers, ordance and all the rest. There will probably be about 13,000 of a personnel. The same arrangement exists with regard to equipment.

"We have in mind a very definite period during which that formation will be in Canada. There is a pretty good idea, as things stand now, as to when it is desired that it should go overseas."

Three Brigades

There were three brigade groups in the division, Col. Ralston said. In the First Brigade group, it was expected Lord Strathcona's Horse would be one of the armored regiments. And there would be the 1st Canadian Cavalry Regiment, and another the 3rd Armored Regiment, the Forth Garry Horse. Another unit would be the Motor Battalion, the Westminister Regiment.

"Just to give the locations," said Col. Ralston, Lord Strathcona's horse is at Listowel, Ont., the 1st Canadian Cavalry Regiment and the Fort Garry Horse are at Camp Borden, the Westminister Regiment is at Vancouver the 1st Canadian Motorcycle Regiment at Toronto, the 4th Canadian Motorcycle Regiment at Sussex, N.B., the 5th Canadian Motorcycle Regiment at Esquimalt, B.C.

In the third Armored Brigade group will be included The Cape Breton Regiment, now at Saint John, N. B., the Royal Canadian Artillery, at Petawawa; and another unit, the selection of which has not yet been made; the 41st Light Anti-Aircraft Battery, at Petawawa, the 47th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery at Kingston; and the 88th Light nti-Aircraft batery at Woodstock, N. B.
