

Health Run Down Housework A Burden

Nature intended women to be strong, healthy and happy instead of sick and miserable, but it is any wonder that when they are run down in health they become nervous and irritable, weak and worn-out, and the lightest household duties seem a drag and a burden?

Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills are a remedy that all nervous, tired-out, weary women should take to help them back to the blessing of good health, and when this is done their household duties will be a pleasure instead of a burden.

CHAPTER IV

OWNER OF THE PEPPERMINTS

The man who entered the lounge was short and tubby. He had red hair and a look of Irish abandon, and merry blue eyes twinkled in a round, jolly face. He was dressed in plus fours of a painful green hue, and a large green tie flapped untidily under his chin. They were just the sort of clothes Shane's artistic soul decided that the owner of the horribly striped pyjamas he had found in the suitcase would wear.

He was certainly not Shane's idea of a general. The title, he decided, must be an honorary one; or else this was not the man he was waiting for after all.

But the latter notion was swiftly dispelled. He had risen doubtfully, and the man strode swiftly towards him with a short, pert gait that reminded Shane irresistibly of a cheeky sparrow.

"Mr. Shane, is it?" he said, and his sharp, merry eyes played over Shane's face questioningly.

"General Mitchell?" "General Alan Carmichael Mitchell, if you must have it all," grinned the red haired man. "But just call me Mitchell. It's friendlier."

He dipped a hand in his pocket, and once and for all dispelled any doubts as to his identity. "Have a peppermint," he said. "They're good for the throat."

Shane gazed almost aghast at the paper bag that was held out to him. It contained about a quarter of striped sweets, some of them stuck hard together.

Then he pulled himself together with a jerk as he became aware that the blue eyes were regarding him with something more than merriment in their depths. He also became more aware of their sharpness.

On close scrutiny the red haired little man was not so young as Shane had at first thought. There were lines on his forehead and at the corners of his mouth that belied his peppy appearance of youth.

The man was in the fifties. And with this discovery Shane decided that he was not fool either. There was an unsleeping watchfulness behind his careless, half fellow well met manner. He might be a dangerous adversary.

The man suddenly realized that Shane was studying him. He relaxed, and laughed shortly.

"No? Well, you'll excuse me if I have one myself?" He dipped into the bag with a stubby forefinger and dug out a striped ball which he slipped into his mouth and rolled into his cheek.

"They're my favourite sweet," he said between sips. "I don't smoke and I don't drink, and it's appealingly bad for a man to have no vices at all."

His blue eyes beamed at Shane, and he grinned as widely as the sweet in his mouth would let him. "You're thinking I'm not exactly your idea of a general what?"

This was so exactly what Shane was thinking that he blinked in confusion.

His companion laughed again — a sound of sheer merriment. "Never mind," he said. "It takes all sorts to make a world. It is coming to that, you're not my idea of an artist."

"Now how on earth," said Shane blankly, "did you know that?"

General Mitchell chuckled slightly. He produced a scrap of paper — the back of an old envelope — from his pocket. Shane recognized one of his sketches. He had traced it idly while in the train.

"I found it in your case," said the general. "I knew it was no amateur's work. You're a shade man?"

Shane admitted it. "You can always tell the touch of the professional. I've a young nephew at the Slade myself. I think it's a crying shame — these places knock all the original fire out of a man. Not, added the general hastily, "that isn't a nice little bit of work to knock off in an idle moment."

"But we're getting off the rails," he went on. "It's my Irish tongue that's forever running away with me. I see you've got my case with you?"

Shane handed it over with apologies. "Nonsense!" said the other vigorously. "A mistake that might happen to anybody. It was very decent of you to come all the way into town to return it. I was in no hurry for it, and I'd have sent yours on to you with a note if you hadn't turned up so soon."

His blue eyes probed Shane. "They tell me here that you're staying at a place on the coast. Do you know the island at all?"

Shane explained that this was his first visit. It suddenly occurred to him that it was the general who was doing all the questioning, and he the answering. He resolved to exchange the roles.

"Are you on holiday yourself?" he inquired politely.

"Combining business with pleasure, as you might say," Mitchell replied. "I'm not a stranger to the place. I visited it once or twice during the war and I've been here since."

He was studying Shane's face curiously. "We're well met," he said with an easy grin. "They tell me I'm the perfect Irish redhead, and you must be the perfect Nordic type. Fair hair blue eyes — He gestured. "I wonder did our ancestors come from some common place of origin? It's a fascinating study, the study of races. You don't have any German or Italian or Bavarian connections?"

MAKE CLEANING EASY Round strips of meta may be inserted at the corners of the base-board to prevent the gathering of dust. For the new home, there are wood strips to fit tight to each corner, giving the base strip a rounded joint. Either the metal or wood strips may be painted to match the woodwork.

Bad Cold Developed Into Bronchitis

Many people have bronchitis and don't know it. Don't even know the danger of neglecting it.

Bronchitis is generally the result of a neglected cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

Those troubled with bronchitis will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy that will help stimulate the bronchial tubes, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts and loosen the phlegm.

Mrs. R. P. MacDONALD, Napan, N.S., writes: "Last winter I had a very bad cold which turned to bronchitis. I tried different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good."

A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, as she had used it for her children with great success. I purchased a bottle and before it was used I got great relief; the phlegm was brought up easily without any hard coughing, and after using three bottles I was completely relieved of the bronchitis."

Island Interests In Boston

Mr. James E. Compton, (Realtor) Cambridge, Mass. (formerly Belle River) expects to visit the Island this coming summer.

Mrs. Margaret Ostreich, Boston, (formerly Pleasant West) plans to spend her summer vacation on the Island.

Friends claim that Mr. Gordon Moleneau, Boston, (formerly P.E.I.) is now lined up with the married men. They further state that Mr. Moleneau's joy and delight was formerly a Miss McCabe of Nova Scotia.

The Canadian-American League, who still in its infancy is growing rapidly. The goal is set for 10,000 members. One year ago (May) there was 23 members, today there are over 800. A large percentage Islanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Lohnes, Dorchester, Mass. may visit Mrs. Lohnes' old home at Lorne Valley, during this coming summer. Mr. Lohnes formerly lived in Charlottetown, and operated a broom factory there.

April 19th, will find crowds lined along certain Boston streets to watch the famous marathon race. Many believe that Canada will produce another winner this year. There ought to be some Island boys who would like to make a try at this race. They have as much stamina and speed as others. Of course there's not much to gain, but it would be nice to see headlines; "P.E. Islander Wins Marathon."

Mrs. Wm. F. MacDonald Water-town, Mass. (formerly Lorne Valley) who was reported as recovering from a severe cold, is still confined to her home and has had to have the doctor's attention, but is feeling somewhat better.

Mr. James Campbell, Cambridge, Mass. (formerly of Montague) hopes to take his family on a trip to the Island this summer. Mr. Campbell who is in the painting business here, has not been to the Island for a number of years.

Their fine work. We wish the club every success, and success to you, Mac.
