now, however, was on deck, and out of the window Peggy saw him giving the visitor tea under the big copper hood on the lawn...

Even now Peggy had no knowledge as to whether Mrs. Jardine had recognized her or not. She had never spoken to the woman since that day when she had brought Toto out of the mine.

Peggy watched for a long time. Mrs. Jardine was wearing a pale green summer frock and was, as usual, perfectly turned out. Edgar hung on every word the woman said. Clearly, he was just as much under her spell as ever he had been.

"I know you dislike her," she said to Peggy, "and I don't think I shall like her myself. Still she is a neighbour and tenant of Edgar's and one must be civil. I shall just leave cards."

So that afternoon they set off. Peggy as usual driving. Peggy hoped devoutly that Mrs. Jardine would be out, but in that she was unlucky. Mrs. Jardine was in the garden, bare-armed, picking roses, with the dog at her heels.

PEG-TOP SLIMNESS STYLE-RIGHT The betwixt and between of narrow skirt width and ease of action that is insistently demanded, is definitely accepted by most stylists. It is the silhouette that interprets the ease of the gathered skirt in terms of the new slimmest still eliminating the complete slimmest that a great many women still considered "extreme" to wear. Sometimes the skirt for the accurately "peg-top" look is tapered at the hemline, but the moderate gathering below the waistline is sufficient for the effect. Pockets are enormously important as a characteristic of the peg-top skirt. With this easy almost "floating" factor in skirt silhouettes, the use of softer features for bodices is coming in, chiefly in the form of big rippled collars and revers. When brauning sausage in a pan, to prevent excessive greasiness pour off the fat as soon as it collects.
