New RCAF Flying Suit Defies Stratosphere Cold

Six miles above the earth, this airman is going to be comfortable and efficient at sub-zero temperatures in the new flying clothing developed by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Fully clad, he'll wear heavy underwear, wool socks, sheepskin lined boot fillers, the new 'E' flying suit, flying boots, a woollen bell-jar neck cover, emergency ration belt, helmet, goggles, oxygen, radio equipment, Mae West, parachute harness and three-in-one gloves. It sounds heavy, but the new suit is lighter and more comfortable than the leather garment it replaces, and is designed so as to give complete freedom of movement.

Ontario Cabinet?

TORONTO, Aug. 17 (Tuesday) - (CP) - The Globe and Mail in a front page story today published an "unofficial list" of members of the new Ontario cabinet who will be sworn in at Queen's Park this afternoon.
