Where Large Crowd Sees Cardinals

Low Cardinals Receive the Red Hat Medieval Note

This photo, from a previous consistory, shows the Pope conferring the traditional red hat on new cardinals. From their benches at the side, one by one, the cardinals approach the throne, kneel before the pontiff, who holds out the hat. The hat is never worn.

Symbolizing centuries of service to the Church is the colorful garb of the Middle Ages, worn by the cardinal. Only cardinals may belong to this group, which numbers 10 officers and 110 men.
