SAYS GEORGES SHOULD RETIRE AS PROMISED

NEW YORK, July 31.—By Frank Getty, United Press Staff Correspondent.)—It is time to write an end to useless discussion over what happened to Georges Carpentier in the 14th round of his losing fight with Gene Tunney Thursday night. I also would be as well if Georges and Francois Descamps would realize that the Frenchman, despite the gallantry of spirit he displayed in the memorable 10th round, is no longer a potential champion at any weight and might gracefully retire, as he promised.

Carpentier has confused the issue by a statement in which he says he was struck in the groin by Tunney's knee (a different version from that first given out by his camp, which attributed his collapse to a low punch. If the Frenchman gave it was Gene's knee that did the damage, then he lays himself open wide to suspicion. For this reason:

Those who were at the reporters table on the East Side of the ring were well able to see what happened. Carpentier had forced Tunney to the ropes in the North-East corner and had missed a right and a left to the head. His body was wide open, and the American, coming off the ropes drove a teriffic blow to the Frenchman's middle. It seemed to land a little too low.

But of one thing there is no doubt; it was this blow which drew from Georges an involuntary "Oh" of agony, which caused him to turn away and grimace and moan with pain and sink to the floor. The cry that burst from his lips did not come before the blow, the only time when Tunney's knee could have come into contact with Carpentier's body.

Gene says it was a right smash which did the work. Those of us at the ringside saw it the same way. If Georges had stuck to his original story the only dispute would have been as to whether the blow was fair or accidentally foul.

There was talk of leaving it to the slow movies to show what really happened in that corner, but when the film was shown last night, someone had blue pencilled a lot of action and all that shows is the blow, Tunney's left, ripping in the general direction of Georges stomach. A lot had been cut out, but there is no reason to suppose the films, aimed, from the opposite side of the ring, could have shown a blow from Tunney's knee which was not apparent to anyone within three feet of the finish.

British Cabinet Summoned For Special Session

LONDON, July 31.— The Irish boundary problem has suddenly become acute again in consequence of the unanimous decision of the Privy Council's Judicial Committee to the effect that the only way to constitute the boundary commission provided for the Anglo Irish treaty is to amend the treaty by new legislaion in the Imperial parliament, binding both northern and southern Irish governments. The British Cabinet was summoned to a special meeting last evening to consider the position which according to several parliamentary correspondents is causing the ministers considerable anxiety.

A fortnight ago Mr. Fleischmann, the yeast king, admitted that his wife was suing for divorce in the Paris court. While the terms of the divorce wre not made known and while Mr. Fleischmann refused to discuss them, it is understood they included the settlement of $5,000,000 on Mrs. Fleischmann. Mr. and Mrs. Fleischmann were married in 1920. Both had been married previously and divorced.

LATER

Gerald Meilke, Halifax, C. E. Jones, Woodstock; F. R. Riston, Fredericton and rank Meilke, Halifax, emerged from a fog which blanketed the Yarmouth Golf course this afternoon, as semi-finalists for the Maritime Golf Championships. The feature match of the day was easily that between H. M. Wylie and Gerald Meilke; Wylie had his opponent two up at the end of the first nine holes and in spite of fact the breaks were all against him throughout the second round, carried the former champion to the seventeenth hole before the latter could register a win. If he plays in the same form as played today he will experience considerable difficulty in defeating C. J. Jones of Woodstock, his opponent in the semi finals tomorrow. Frank Meilke on the other hand played creditable golf throughout, his thirty-six for the first nine holes, one below par, being the best score turned in since the tournament started.

The consensus of opinion is that the championship is not likely to change hands this year. Other close matches were those between C. J. Jones, of Woodstock and J. H. Malcom of Yarmouth and F. R. Risten of Woodstock and George Mahon of Halifax. Mahon had won a twenty hole match in the morning and was only defeated this afternoon on the eighteenth hole. Tonight the participants in the tournament were the guests of Hon. E. K .Spinny, President of the Yarmouth Club.

YARMOUTH, N. S., Aug. 1.—The Meikle Brothers of Halifax will fight it out between themselves in the finals for amateur golf championship ofthe Maritime Provinces to be played today. Inthe semi-finals of the event this morning Gerald defeated C. J. Jones, of Woodstock, seven up and six to go and Frank defeated F. R. Risteen of Fredericton seven and five. Both Gerald Meikle and Jones were off their games, handing in cards of 44 and 51 respectively for the first nine rounds. Frank Meikle on the other hand played brilliant golf doing the first round in 38, one above par.

Smarting under their recent lose to the All Stars In Summerside the locals are determined to show the way tonight from the first inning, therefore with the "Westerners" playing snappy ball a first-class exhibition is expected.

It is rumored that "Wackey" McEachern will oppose "Spud" Noonan on the mound this evening and much interest is manifested as to the outcome of the battle.

GREATER THAN "BABE" RUTH?

"I am a little tired of hearing how far Babe Ruth can hit a baseball," said Mr. Tierney O'Rourke, as he sat sunning himself on the roof of the New York Athletic Club. "If the crool Saxons had not suppressed Irish history, every schoolboy would know just how far the great Irish hurley player, Cuchullian, could hit a hurley ball.

"You'v never heard tell of him? That's because you have been kept in ignorance of Irish history. How far did he hit the ball? I'll tell you, now that the foot of the crool Saxon is off our necks, now that it can be told.

"'Twas at the Tailtean, where all the kings and the lords and the ladies were sitting around with their gold crowns on their heads, and the harpers and the pipers were playing some wonderful tunes.

"The chief king turned to Cuchillan, and he said to him, he said: 'How high can you hit the hurley ball, Cuchullan.'

"To the chief king Cuchuillan said nevr a word, but he tossed up the ball and he struck it with his hurley. And then Cuchuillan left the field and went to his tent. He poured himself out a good drink of poth een and h edrank down, and 'twas no thimbleful that he drank. Then he came out to the field again and he reached out his hurley and caught the ball as it came down. Cuchullan was a man of few words and that was his answer to the chief king and all of the kings and the lords and the ladies of Ireland sitting at the Tailtean with golden crowns on their heads and theharpers and the pipers playing a tune.

"Of course this lad, Babe Ruth is well enough for these times, but Cuchuillan—ah, there was the boy that could really drive the ball."

How To Keep The C.N. Out of Politics

VANCOUVER, July 31. —Speaking here at a luncheon tendered in his honor by the Canadian Club adn the Board of Trade, Sir Henry Thornton, president of the C. N. R. declared it was a comparatively easy matter to keep politics out of the purchasing and other departments of the railway, but it was most difficult to meet unfair criticism made for political prestige.

"The time should come," he continued, "when all political parties should feel that they have a direct interest in the railway. The railway belongs to no political party and one way to keep the railway from being used in politics is to give proper representation to all political parties, with men of outstanding business ability representing each political group."

THE GAME OF CROWDS

(By Bystander)

The Game of Crowds is the great gathering of the day, especially in the United States and Canada. East and West, North and South the game is being played, and the figures of attendance given by the press almost makes one dizzy. Naturally the Canadian figures cannot touch those for the United States. In this adding machine age, it is comparatively easy to come within measurable distance of the total number of people in a crowd and the gross receipts for paid tickets of admission to the various public gatherings reminds one of the loans to some of the debilitated European nations.

All records for crowds were badly shattered in 1923, and by the time the records are completed for 1924 they will be still further broken. But the Game of Crowds is not a new one. Ancient Rome had no Boyles Thirty Acres or Yale Bowl or Leland Stanford stadium, but it had its colosseum which is still a synonym for size and from ten to fifteen similar stadiums with a capacity of forty-five odd thousand. These stadiums of the gladiators however, pale before the modern plants but then the population of ancient Rome was not so large as that of the modern congested American city.

Neither is the modern Game of Crowds peculiar to the United States. The returns from the Olympic sports are yet filtering in and the Wembley stadium, with seats for 126,000, has also had no complete returns. Nevertheless the world is playing the Game of Crowds as never before, and it is expected that the limit to the attendance will be the facilities for the accommodation of patrons. It is only in terms of such data that the future of the Crowd Game can be visualized.

Baseball is, of course, the great national game of the United States, and a world's series always draws a big gate. After one of these games last fall 60,000 persons jammed their way into the Yankee stadium, and between 40,000 and 50,000 were denied admission and many others were not even allowed to get within range of the ball grounds, plans were formulated for enlarging the stadium by increasing the seating accommodation by about 20,000 seats!

And with non-professional sports college football chiefly—the results are about the same. On one day fully 65,000 saw the Army and Navy game in New York, while in Cambridge over 55,000 watched Yale beat Harvard and both crowds sat it out in cold pelting rains so disagreeable that one newspaper correspondent date-lined his story the First Stages of Pneumonia! But the appeal of sports and crowds, is not centralized. It comes from all sections, and places and many jokes on the vaudeville stage figure in it. But colleges and universities lead in the race to provide places for crowds to sit or stand in.

In making these arrangements nothing is left to chance. The seating capacity is not left to haphazard. There is a place for every one and every-one is in his place when he is wanted. The whole thing is mapped out in advance, and when all the paid admissions are taken up no one else is allowed to see the show.

The Game of Crowds has been augmented by the boxing game. Tex Rickard is the chief promoter of that branch of sport which by the way is not so lady-like a game as bridge, and he is reported to have made a barrel of money out of it. And he is still playing the game. Tex exhibits great generalship in his handling of the hordes of people whom he attracts to the bills of fare which he presents. But he knows his people and always gets them back. He always plays fair with his audiences and that is where he gets his crowds. Millions of dollars are handled yearly by Mr. Rickard's staff of officials and there is very little complaint heard as to his manner of handling the people with whom he does business. Mr. Rickard's success is merely another instance of getting the proper people to do certain classes of work. A round hole is no place for a square peg. If you wish publicity work, done, for instance, be sure to have this work done by one who knows all about publicity and who will not seek to mislead the people whom he is paid to instruct and enlighten. Barnum was a great advertiser and he cautions us about deceiving the public. The same way in other things. If you want anything done well you must get a competent man to do that thing. Amateurs will queer any thing.

There has been a good deal of money spent of late for special work by heaven-born experts engineered by other heaven-born experts, and all the while there were people walking the streets idle who were much more competent than those who were entrusted to do the spending. But the thing for which the money was spent turned out to be a fiasco and no good resulted. The case of Tex Rickard is one in point. Don't try to fit a round man in a square hole or vice versa. It doesn't pay.

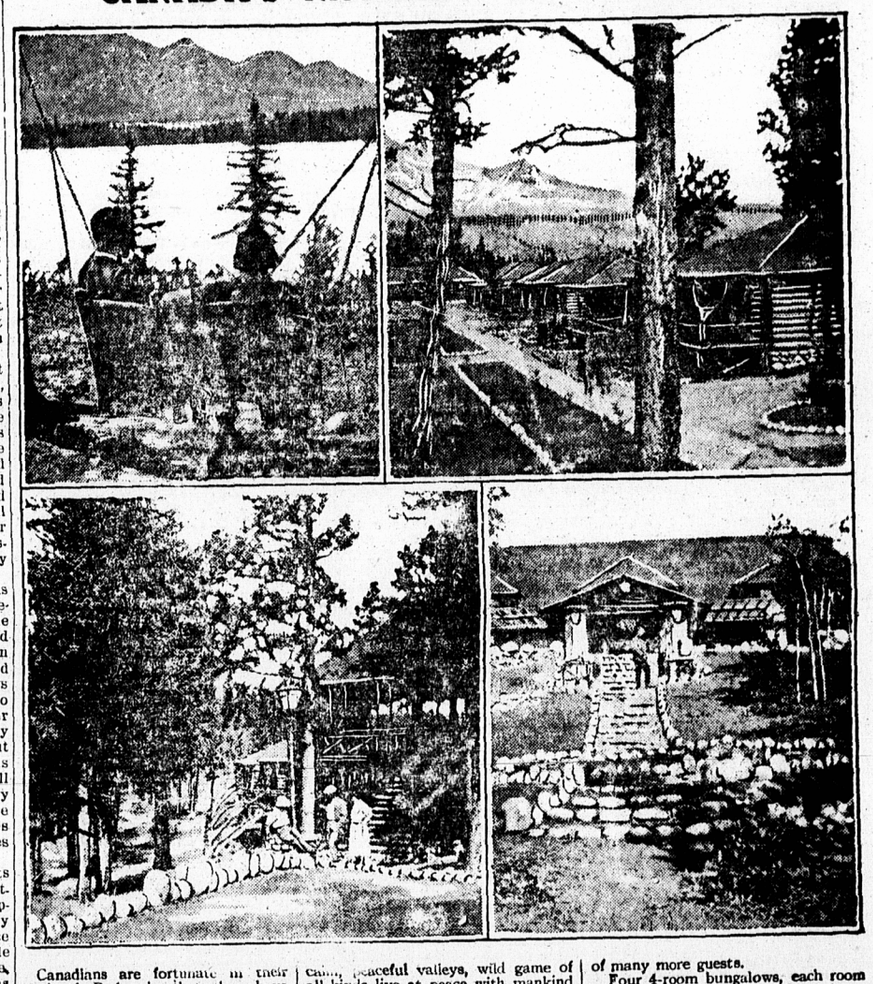
CANADA'S NATIONAL PLAYGROUND



Canadians are fortunate in their National Parks, in that they have within their borders Alpine scenery which is not equalled anywhere on the continent, and more and more they are realizing that holidays in Canada hold for the lover of out-of-doors all the thrills that could be found anywhere in the world. Jasper National Park contains many high peaks, eternally snowcapped, and on the sides of the mountains are glaciers which have stood the test of ages. Millions of tons of ice, stretching, in some instances, almost as far as the eye can see, lure the adventurous climber to new attempts, while in the calm, peaceful valleys, wild game of all kinds live at peace with mankind and the world.

Additional bungalows for the accommodation of guests are to be erected at Jasper Park Lodge, the log-cabin hostelry of the Canadian National Railways at Jasper National Park, in time for the opening of the 1924 season, it is announced by officials of the Hotel Department, Canadian National Railways. During last season the popularity of Jasper National Park was so great that the capacity of Jasper Park Lodge was taxed, and the additional bungalows being provided this year will take care of many more guests.

Four 4-room bungalows, each room with bath, and two 12-room bungalows, each room also having private bath, are being erected. In addition, a double-deck boathouse, with the upper floor for conventions, etc., is being constructed, and an octagonal curio building is being built near the main Lodge. Four new buildings are being erected to serve as employees' quarters, the kitchens are being extended and the main lounge is being enlarged to provide for a ladies' reception room and for a men's billiard and card room.

The lodge is one of the finest summer resorts on the Continent.
