

Nervous Dyspepsia

Accompanied an Exhausted Condition of the Nervous System—Health Restored and Aged Mother Greatly Benefited by the Food Cure

Lequille, N. S., April 29.—Nervous trouble is not confined to any age, and often people would look well and be miserable on account of a feeble condition of the nerves.

When Mr. Morse had been cured of Nervous Dyspepsia by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food he prevailed upon his aged mother to try out this great restorative treatment. Her experience was equally happy, and so the good word is passed along to others to put this food cure to the test.

Mr. Judson H. Morse, Lequille, N. S., writes: "I am glad to be able to say a few words in recommendation of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because I have found it so very good for me and others. I came by my nervous trouble much by inheritance and through my work. In '86 I was a nervous wreck, but the doctor and time put me on my feet again, so I got along quite well until five years ago. I got a gripe and put through an awful winter and summer, but a friend offered me some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Pills to try, and I found them to help me at once, so I have taken a number of boxes since that time and still find them good. Mother is in her 90th year, and has suffered a lot with neuralgia of the stomach and bowels, and was in a very bad state last summer, but I prevailed upon her to try the Nerve Food and it helped her even in her advanced years. The doctor called my trouble Nervous Dyspepsia. I know of many who have taken the Nerve Food with good results. Mother thinks your Ointment excellent also."

THE DYING SOLDIER

A soldier boy lay dying
Was pitiful to see
His face so worn and wasted
From hours of agony
He beckons to a passing nurse
"Please come and sit by me
And will you write a letter
To my mother o'er the sea?"

Don't tell her that I suffered
Just say I fell asleep
And that my last thro'ts were of her
And my home across the deep
Don't tell her how that cruel shell
Burst right in front of me,
Or of my poor smashed body
And hours of agony.

Don't tell her how I suffered
I would not have her know,
She sent me forth—her only son
To fight against the foe
In wakeful hours I see her—
Her worn hands clasped in prayer
To God—"To bless the Allies,
And her dear son—"Over there."

I feel my hour is coming, nurse
Please stay awhile with me,
And read that last dear letter from
My home across the sea,
And when I'm gone you'll write her
And tell about her Joe
But do not say I suffered
For I would not have her know."

OUR HEROES.

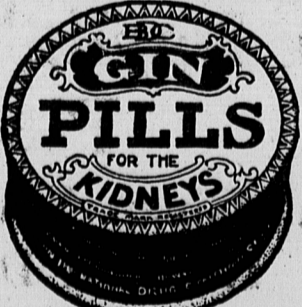

Our soldier lads to the war have gone,
To help old Britain carry on,
The cause 'gainst tyranny and might,
And to uphold the cause that's right.

They have trained and drilled and worked,
From their duty they have not shrunk,
And with a smile they're ready to go
To help to fight the cruel foe.

When in the trenches, they're brave lads too,
Every one ready their duty to do
For Canada and the dear old Motherland,
To whom they're willing to lend a helping hand.

When our lads return from fighting the Hun,
And putting the Kaiser on the run,
We will sing them a jolly song,
To cheer them as they march along.

A SENSATION IN CITY OF HULL

OTTAWA, April 27.—The city of Hull is humming like an angry bee, having over some promiscuous shooting which was indulged in on the main thoroughfare of the city one afternoon by a member of the military police from Lansdowne Park, who was engaged in rounding-up deserters. E. Meloche, 17 Levis street, Hull, was conscripted some time ago, and was attached to the 2nd Depot Battalion at Lansdowne Park. About three weeks ago he deserted.

Tuesday afternoon two military police officers who were in uniform, heard that Meloche was at the sub-station of the Hull Electric Railway Co., on Main street. When Meloche saw the officers he ran into the engine room, disregarding orders which were shouted to him to surrender, and he was just about to jump through a door leading to the rear of the building when one of the officers pulled his revolver and fired a shot, inflicting a minor flesh wound in the back of Meloche's neck, who at once surrendered.

Loud London Newsboys

Objections to Their Variety of "Wuxtry—Just Out" Cry.

The crying of exaggerated news by irresponsible news vendors has lately again assumed the dimensions of a public nuisance.

There was a flagrant instance of this kind recently, in various parts of London and the suburbs were to be heard newsboys calling out "Great Britain naval victory!" and in consequence they found a ready sale.

It was hoped that when posters were suppressed, in the interests of economy in paper, another valuable result would also be attained in preventing the nerves of the public being continually excited by "bills" bearing "scare" lines.

At the present time, when most persons are working at great tension, and so many have near relatives whose lives may be at stake in a particular action, it is considered most important in official quarters that every means should be employed to prevent the public being exploited and their nerves unnecessarily worked upon by the scaremongers of the street.

It may be recalled that early in the war the police authorities found means to suppress the nuisance created by the men and boys who made a sudden eruption at certain centres at night and continued yelling their news to the distraction of all the residents in the neighborhood.

Similar action was taken by the police when the thousands of workers in certain Government offices were seriously disturbed in the evening by the irresponsible newsboys, who played on the anxiety of the persons always to be found in the vicinity. It is hoped, therefore, that the recent recrudescence of the "catchpenny" nuisance may receive the attention of the police authorities with similarly successful results.

A high official at Scotland Yard pointed out that to cry false news is, of course, an indictable offence, and that is open to any member of the public to prosecute the offender. The difficulties in the way of doing so, however, are obvious, for by the time the purchaser of a paper has discovered the imposition of the newsboy has vanished. A constable has no power to detain a boy while he verifies the truth of his statement, so that he is in no better position to deal with an offender. The official suggested that something might be done in the matter by the newspaper proprietors themselves by having a conference and taking steps to discourage the bawling of news in the streets.

It is, however, obviously impossible for the management of newspapers to exercise control over the thousands of irresponsible men and boys, whose sole object is to sell out their stock of papers, and the public looks to the police themselves with some confidence for a redress of the evil.—London Globe.

LIQUOR STOLEN FROM TRANSPORTATION COMPANIES IN CAPE BRETON

The North Sydney Herald says a number of detectives in Cape Breton last week in connection with the wholesale theft of liquor from the Government railways. Not only were the liquors taken in considerable quantity from the ordinary freight shipments, but hundreds of dollars worth were stolen from the express trains. One rather gigantic theft was when a couple of barrels of rum, worth well in the neighborhood of a couple of thousand dollars, that was illegally shipped into the Province, was at the instance of the assizee thrown off at one of the rural stations. At this particular place there dwells a fellow who made considerable money in the illicit traffic, and who was supposed to be a friend of the consigne. He proved his friendship by commandeering the two puncheons the moment they were removed from the train, and after a good contribution of water, sold the entire lot and pocketed the coin of course the consigne dare not say anything about the theft, and nursed his feelings in silence.

But there must be big money in the business; because the same loser only a short time ago, was about eighty-five cases short of another shipment. And in this case he also nursed his remorse in silence. But what does he care? The same man is said to have just an even thousand dollars tied up in liquor!

There was a grand clean up day last Friday in the yard of the jail, when seven jars of rum, a cask of the same brand of fire-water, twenty-six bottles of whiskey, sixteen flasks of the same variety of rot gut, and a couple of bottles of some other kind of dangerous stuff were consigned to the sewer. The lot represented a seizure made on the premises of Joseph Andrea last January, for which the owner was found guilty of keeping for sale on Friday, after paying a fine

GERMAN FAIRY TALES ABOUT CONDITIONS IN PARIS

PARIS, April 28.—French newspapers are reproducing at length extraordinary accounts which have appeared in Germany of the situation said to have been produced in Paris by the long-range bombardment. The Cologne Gazette, the Tageblatt, of Berlin, the semi-official news agency and the German Government's news sheets and wireless despatches picture living in Paris as almost unbearable. The city is said to be almost without food and it is stated that business has been suspended.

The people of Paris are greatly amused at these accounts, because the city's life is going on as usual. The German tales are regarded as propaganda designed to keep up the spirits of the people during the battle now in progress by making them believe their adversaries are worse off than they.

WOMEN AS PAPERHANGERS

NEW YORK CITY, April 20.—A new field of labor was opened yesterday when it was found that the short age of labor, due to the loss of men by the draft, had caused various dealers in several parts of the country to open their shops to the employment of women paperhangers.

Never before have industrial opportunities been open to the gentler sex as in the past six months, and the entry of women in the paperhanging field lets down the bars, so to speak, of a trade which has long been considered a masculine occupation. But, with the shortage of labor in its present acute stage, due to drafts for the army, enlistments in the navy and marine corps, employment of countless thousands in the shipbuilding yards and other Government work, the paperhangers became fewer in number than ever before. This shortage became so acute in some localities that the dealers not only employed but welcomed women who desired to take up paperhanging as a trade.

Experiments were begun in several localities as to the adaptability of women for this line of work, and their employers were amazed with the success of their new proteges, for they were not only found to be more accurate and painstaking in what they did, but were found to be more rapid, and in some cases completed their tasks to one-third less time than their predecessors, the men. And one top of all this, they were much more clean while at work and would not allow scraps of paper to remain on the floors where it would be difficult to remove them. In fact the rooms were spotlessly clean, and but for the new paper on the walls and ceilings the housewife could not have told that the women paperhangers had been there.

But it was the accuracy and painstaking care with which they did their work that surprised their employers the most for the patterns on the side walls had to match without the semblance of a mismatched design, the borders had to fit perfectly against the moulding or ceiling, and the ceiling paper had to be hung exactly parallel with the sidewalls or they felt they were not giving the housewife that perfect harmony which is so essential in every home. Another thing which surprised their employers was their intuitive sense of color scheme that is so invaluable in producing that perfect blend of walls and furnishings that makes a home attractive.

The employment of women as paperhangers comes as a welcome relief to the Wall-Paper Industry this Spring for all dealers throughout the United States and Canada are entering into an international wall paper week during the week of April 22-27, and indications point to the fact that they will be greatly needed.
