ROSEBERY AS FARMER.

What He Was Doing When He Was in the Lonely Furrow. At last we have a true, full and particular account from Lord Rosebery of what he did in his "lonely furrow."

"Well, what am I going to say about the successes which I have achieved to-day? Only this, that it is by personal, careful, and daily attention to the beasts on my part, by wakeful nights devoted to the corpulence of a particular animal, by handing to every beast his appointed oil cake from my own hand; it is only by these means I have been enabled to obtain success.

"And when I walked in to the show and saw these prize animals, which have increased at the rate of three and one-half to four pounds per day for many weeks past, looking at me with proud eyes, and I also thought, a languid and bilious eye, I felt my time had not been spent in vain and that though others might prefer the field of politics or letters, I myself had been more usefully employed.

Kipling and Fore, It is not a strange thing, when one thinks of it, that Kipling's verse should be oftener praised or condemned for its political content than for its more strictly poetical qualities.

The Lansdowne family is immensely rich. The land owned by the Marquis is as follows: Wilts, 11,145 acres; Hants, 4 acres; County Kerry, 94,983 acres; County Meath, 12,995 acres; Queen's County, 8,980 acres; Dublin, 2,132 acres; Limerick, 1,642 acres; King's County, 617 acres; Perth, 9,070 acres; and Kinross, 1,318 acres.
