No Clear Issue In Australia's General Election

By Anthony Whitlock

Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Australia's 18th Federal Parliament has ended without giving either members or the public any clear idea of what the issues will be in Australia's general elections Dec. 10.

The issue of whether Australia needs gasoline rationing is as important as any yet brought up. The Labor Government announced recently that gasoline will be rationed again, effective Nov. 15. It said that dollars are not available for greater imports and that existing supplies are insufficient to go round without rationing. The Opposition, on the other hand, claims that if elected it will get enough gas from France and other non-dollar sources to end rationing.

Whether nationalization of banks will become a major issue is not yet clear. Canberra observers say Attorney-General Herbert V. Ewart was over-hasty in saying that banking would not be an issue. They point out that he issued a statement to this effect without consulting the Cabinet and suggest that he fears the consequences if public banking is made an issue.

Queens Charlotte Islands

The Queen Charlottes lie off the mouth of the Skeena. The islands are mountainous with some hills, lowland, and muskeg east of Mosses Inlet. The climate is mild, the rainfall is heavy, and the vegetation is dense. The trees grow to a tremendous size, with tall, straight trunks. Spruce, red cedar, hemlock, and yellow cedar, or cypress are the principal forest trees.

On Queen Charlotte Islands are found gold, copper, iron, and anthracite coal.

They became the site for an exploratory oil-drilling campaign in September 1948. The Royallite Oil Co., which played an important role in the development of the Turner Valley, broke the ground.

Geologists claim there is a good prospect of striking a large oil pool on Graham Island, the most northerly and largest of the Queen Charlotte group. Royallite has been assigned 230,000 acres there by the British Columbia Government for exploration purposes.

The Atlantic Pact went into effect August 24. President Truman issued a proclamation making the pact effective when representatives of the French Republic brought in their country's instrument of ratification.

The treaty pledges participants to go to each other's defense in case of an attack. France was the last of the treaty-signers to submit its formal ratification.

The other original partners of the pact—Canada, Britain, the United States, Belgium, the Neth-
