Reynaud Gov't

attacks in that struggle, named General Maximilien Weygand Minister of National Defence.

(Gen. Weygand who was called to head the French armies after the Sedan in May, presumably would remain as director of the armed forces from his new position.)

Petain chose former Premier Camille Chautemps as Vice Premier; Paul Baudouin, Reynaud's assistant; Jean Luchaire, as Minister of Foreign Affairs; General Louis Colson as War Minister; Admiral Jean Darlan, as Navy Minister; and General Bertrand Pujos as Air Minister. All are newcomers to the cabinet, but several of Reynaud's ministers were retained in other positions.

Meanwhile, the military situation in France grew constantly more threatening.

A communiqué said the Germans had pushed south of the plateau of Langres into the region north of Dijon and the Saône above Gray.

It said Nazi advanced elements had passed Auxerre, deep in Central France, heading toward Clamecy and Avallon.

It reported French movements "in accordance with orders" in Alsace and Lorraine.

Indicative of the great depth of German penetration, at least by advance units, Dijon is 175 miles southeast of Paris, it and Gray being near the French border, and Auxerre is 100 miles from Paris in a more southerly direction.

A French military spokesman said the Germans had broken through in the Champagne country, to the rear of the Maginot line, and were exploiting these advances with determined pushes toward the south.

Fresh Nazi reserves.

The high command's communiqués said the Nazis were throwing fresh reserves into the battle and making violent attacks over the Langres plateau which extends through the Côte d'Or, north from Dijon toward Châumont.

The Nazis, the communiqué said, had pushed armored reconnaissance elements beyond Châumont in the advance from the northwest and had reached the region of Gray, which lies about 30 miles northeast of Dijon, and is within 40 miles of the Swiss frontier.

The direction of this troop movement indicated a German reconnaissance design to cut off the Maginot Line from the rest of France.

The military spokesmen said there were no important developments on the west front between Evreux and Chartres, south of the Seine, apparently where a new offensive was expected. This was not because of French reserves, he said, but because the Germans had weakened their lines there by leaving units behind in Paris.

Finland's War Debt Payment Postponed

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP)—The House of Representatives today passed legislation authorizing postponement of Finland's semi-annual $100,000 war debt payment which is due tomorrow.

The action sent the resolution to the White House, since the Senate had approved it unanimously earlier in the day.

House Committees

Committees of the House will get into operation this week. Gray Tupper (Lib. Carleton) is mentioned as a likely chairman for the special committee on relations to the special law which has been passed by the Defence of Canada Regulations.

The committee will probably organize itself this week, and members of all the standing committees—agriculture, banking, railways and other matters, meet tomorrow to elect chairman.

The special committee on regulations will probably hear a lot about subversive elements in Canada and the possibility of "fifth column" activity. Some of its sessions may be held in secret if police and other officials are called upon for confidential information relating to enforcement of the regulations.

Actually this tax has produced no revenue yet, a though it was enacted last September and became effective last April. A trial period, fixed for the submission of reports upon which to base the levy has not yet expired.

Possible amendments may be made with a view to equalizing the incidence of the tax on businesses with varying capital structures and varying degrees of profitability in the pre-war period.

As it stands corporations have a choice of two methods of taxation. They may be taxed on their entire profits in excess of an exemption of five per cent on their capital or a sliding scale depending on the amount of the profits or they may elect to pay a tax of 50 per cent of the excess of their profits under war conditions over average profit of a period of years prior to the war.

stock, but possibly large sums invested in them in other ways, and which would bear a heavy burden as compared with companies with large capital structures if all were allowed simply an exemption on a five per cent. on capital.

On the other hand some such companies had very few years. In some cases had no profits at all prior to the war. Thus, to tax them 50 per cent. of the excess of the profits made under war conditions as compared with pre-war profits would put them in an unfavorable position as compared with businesses which had substantial profits in pre-war years.

Minister Howie assured the House last week there was little prospect of enormous profits being reaped on war industrial activity, and he said the enactment of a bill to give himself sweeping powers over industry he said he thought no concern would earn more than five per cent. on government war contracts.

NO QUESTION AUSTRALIAN FRENCH PARLIAMENT IS SUMMONED

every foot of soil contested.

2. Britain is pouring men and materials into the battle zone in a steady stream, a new army with new equipment, a fresh army ready to relieve the steady tired French troops, while President Roosevelt has promised to redouble American efforts to help the Allies in production of war supplies.

3. The resolute determination of this country to keep lighting a determination forged in the full knowledge that Adolf Hitler must start at any hour what he believes will be the final campaign in this war—invasion of Britain.

Roosevelt's promise to France has had a most reassuring effect on the general public here, but everyone realizes that the time factor is a vital one, perhaps the only one. American shipments of planes, guns, ammunition, tanks, and other equipment, which may not win the present battle of France but they will win the war.

No one has the least doubt of that, providing the United States acts quickly. It is stated here, with a realization that her own existence as a free nation is threatened just as Britain, France and Canada are threatened.

Germany's Chances Grow Slim

"Germany has used up her resources on a reckless scale in the present offensive," said the British statement, "and though even these resources may not yet be exhausted, unless she can defeat the British empire and its allies within the next few months her chance of defeating them at all will have vanished."

The statement, as clear-cut as Prime Minister Churchill's declaration in the House on June 4, said that "even if France's resistance on land were to last for several months, the French still have the second most powerful navy in Europe."

The tremendous resources of the British and French empires, together with those which the United States have paced at the disposal of the Allies will play a mighty part in the final struggle, said the statement, "and as week succeeds week, the manpower of Britain takes its place in the struggle with ever-increasing momentum."

"Unlike the enemy whose only hope of victory rests in defeating the Allies within a few weeks or months, we are prepared to continue the war just so long as it may be necessary to give himself sweeping powers over industry he said he thought no concern would earn more than five per cent. on government war contracts."

2nd Division Units Train At Petawawa

By Ross Munro
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PETAWAWA, Ont., June 16—(CP)—Swinging into their field training now and keen to move into action, artillerymen and engineers of the 2nd division, Canadian Active Service Force, paraded 5000 strong today at this military camp amid the pines and sand dunes of the Upper Ottawa valley.

It was the most imposing demonstration of strength the 2nd division Royal Canadian Engineers and Royal Canadian Artillery have staged since they took over Petawawa's sprawling tented city three weeks ago for outdoor manoeuvres to fit them for overseas service.

This camp has the most expansive artillery range in the British Empire. It is crowded with 6000 troops under canvas, turning the whole area into the bustling military district it was during the first great war when thousands of artillerymen trained here.

Every day the various units and companies operate as units but today's parade brought most of the camp together in a march of two religious ceremonies—the Protestant service held on a knoll in a vast area and the Roman Catholic service at the inauguration of a new Knights of Columbus army hut.

From their tents scattered over two square miles, the officers and men of the R. C. A. and the R. C. E., in battle dress and sun helmets, marched smartly along the twisting camp roads to the open air services.

Husky and healthy, the tanned fighters, who will play all-important roles in this mechanized warfare, already look hardy enough to stand the rigors of active service.

From all over Canada, they have been concentrated here. Apart from the 2nd division units, several hundred officers from other branches of the army are taking instructional courses at Petawawa.
