FUNERAL SERVICE.—.— The funeral service of Mrs. Joseph Inman, who died Oct. 18th was conducted on the 19th at the home of her son Stewart, by Rev. A. A. Gates, ably and helpfully assisted by Rev. D. McLean of Charlotetown. The day of the service was clear and warm and thus a very large number paid their last respects to their neighbor and friend. During Mrs. Inman's illness when all knew that her disease of creeping paralysis was slowly bht surely doing its work, one of the most touching features was the close and careful attention given her by her son and daughter at home, and this continued to the time when together they stood by the grave and saw for the last time all that remained of their dear mother. Mrs. Inman was a member of the New Dominion Presbyterian Church. She leaves to mourn three children, Grace and Stewart at home, and Pearl in the West. The pall bearers were:— Messrs John McMillan, M. L. A., T. A. Stewart, Daniel McPhee, Gilford Lowther, Patrick Dowling, Allen Livingstone.

A NARROW ESCAPE. —Among the passengers crossing by the Empress last week was Mr. Patrick Murphy a native of Ireland who was a member of the Princess Patricias Regiment, which suffered so badly in the war. Mr. Murphy was bound for Sussex to visit his brother who resides there after visiting friends on P. E. Island. Besides himself Mr. Murphy had five brothers serving in the war, the brother in Sussex being the only one of seven who has not gone to the front. Mr. Murphy had a terrible experience in the fighting at Limbourg and has the marks to back up his statements, including a bullet wound on the arm, a bayonet cut over one eye and a portion of his leg gone from a shrapnel shot. He also suffered from gas, his tongue being discolored from the effects. He lay out in the field for 48 hours and but for "playing possum" would probably have lost his life. A German officer making the rounds came across the young Irishman and the latter gave up sign of life. To ascertain definitely if he was dead the German threw Murphy's prostrate body from him and the young Irishman struck the ground with terrible force but made no attempt to "save himself falling just as he would if he had no life in his body. This satisfied the German and some hours later Murphy was picked up by a British Red Cross worker and carried to the British lines. He was sent to the hospital in England and then came to Canada where he had been located for some years previous to the outbreak of war.

FOR BETTER STOCK.— A large number of the farmers on St. Mary's Road met in the Schoolhouse on Tuesday evening last to hear Mr. L. Lennant of the Department of Agriculture, who discussed with them the improvement of the live stock in the district. Several farmers spoke of the need for improving the stock and securing better bred sires. It was decided to hold another meeting next week when steps will be taken to form an association to secure pure bred sires.

PLEASANT PARTY.— Kingston village was well represented when on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 19th, forty-nine members visited the Baptist Parsonage, North River. In due time the happy crowd gathered, and joyfully did the host and hostess bring forth every available seat to accomodate the numbers. First, and especially among the ladies, there was a pleasant time spent in conversation. Then instrumental music became a treat, rendered by Miss Barrett, Mrs. W. Newson and Mrs. Gates. Then for a change, about half a dozen different parlour games were engaged in, and judging from the pearls of laughter, these surely were enjoyed; but just in the midst of these, the call for supper was given from the dining room, and a glance at the heavenly laden and dantily arranged table, was enough to break up the best game played. But at this time in the history, the number again gathered around the piano and heartily sang a goodily number of Patriotic airs, until Deacon Daniel Fraser called the meeting to order, and as Chairman expressed the reason for this gathering, namely to show their appreciation to the new Pastor and wife, and to meet them in their home. Deacon Fraser then called upon Deacon James Homes to speak a word. Deacon Homes said that it was not right for the Chairman to steal all a man's amunution and then expect him to fight. All the good things that he would have said, Deacon Fraser said before him. He, however, said he could voice the sentiment of the Chair. Mr. Stephen Ackland, Supt. of the S. School then was called upon to speak and he gave a review of the recent improvements in the Church, and the aims of the future. To these, addresses Mr. Gates replied. He said in part, that he was not only the large box of oats which the visitors had contributed which made him glad to have these people with him, but also that he could meet them in social friendly way; he spoke of the joy it always gave him to preach at Kingston, because of the close worshipful attention given him, not only by the older members of the community, but by the young ones as well: another praiseworthy factor was the fact that in the light of many calls, at the close of a service a fortnight ago, Deacon Fraser called the people together and collected altogether $24.00 for the Temperance Alliance. These and many other expressions would make a ministry to these people a pleasure, were among the last words of the Pastors reply. At 12.30 the party joined in singing, "God be With You Till We Meet Again."

MOORE & McLEOD

WILL SEE IT THROUGH

Dr. Mary Crawford, who has just returned to Brooklyn after almost a year's ambulance hospital service in France, is enthusiastic in her praise of the women of Paris and of all France in this time of trial. They are working everywhere, she says, always busy, always hopeful, hiding their personal trouble with a bit of their old-time gayety in public. Asked as to whether the women protested at all against their husbands and sons being taken from them for the war, perhaps to be killed, Dr. Crawford said: "The women are just as determined to see this thing to a finish as the men, and they are doing their part to the best of their ability. They realize that to stop now, to compromise, would only mean that their grandchildren would only have it to do all over again. Many of them, that is of the older women, were living during the Franco-Prussian War and they have seen the horror of that time repeated, and they are not going to let it happen again. They are going to fight till all danger of another such repetition is done away with, till the idea of military despotism, of might being right, is settled once for all. If this is not accomplished all the terrific loss of life and destruction of property has gone for naught. If it can be accomplished even at the loss of five million men, a great triumph for civilization will have been won. That is the way they feel and anyone who expects them to change will be greatly mistaken. Of course, it means suffering and hardship of a terrible kind, but they are prepared to meet it. Just now the women in Paris, particularly those of the poorer classes, are facing a grave crisis, for the prices of coal and some other necessities have gone up. However far they made what little they had go last winter, it can't go this. The little money they had put by is used up by now, and the little bit they can make will hardly support them. However, they are wonderful at turning their hand to anything."

The people of Paris, Dr. Crawford said, are remarkably calm and just keep working away with a grim determination which is more eloquent than the wildest demonstration. "A Frenchman's love for his country is a deep personal love, and he is going to make sure that the outrage against her will never be repeated. However, nothing is done to excite the people. There is no music when the troops march through the streets. They try not to be too enthusiastic when a victory has been gained, but that is hard for Paris. She loves to be frivolous and gay, and even at the slightest gain one can discern a visible lifting of the spirits; voices are a little brighter, there is more laughter, there is a happier expression on the faces of the people one meets. I can imagine how delighted they must be now at these last successes." Dr. Crawford left Paris just as they were beginning to make the drive.

WORLD'S TINIEST OIL PAINTING.

Marvels in miniature are somewhat common, but the record in oil paintings must surely be held by Samuel T. Schultz, the world's champion painter in miniature, who executed a painting on a grain of corn, which is now being exhibited in Camden, New Jersey. This painting, pefect in every detail, was done nearly fifty years ago and apart from its face value has had a remarkable career.

In the course of its journeys to the various European capitals it was lost A year ago the miniature was located through an advertisement, and was sent to America from Berlin.

The miniature presents a winter scene, executed with the great care and skill which made the artist famous. Schultz, who is nearly seventy years old, will never paint another picture so minute and yet so perfect, and since its return from Europe Schultz has received numerous offers for his painting.

Schultz got his inspiration while attending the funeral of Buchanan, at Wheatland, Penn., the home of the President, in 1868. On his return he plucked an ear of corn from a field on the President's estate. His first intention was to paint a miniature portrait of Mr. Buchanan on one of the grains of corn. After many unsuccessful attempts, he decided to substitute a landscape. The final result was a well-balanced snow scene, with a windmill on one hand, a chalet on the other, mountains in the distance, and a single figure to accentuate the effect of space and distance.

BY HOOK AND BY CROOK.

Often one hears people say that they will do a certain thing "by hook or by crook." This expression dates back to fehdal days, and refers to the old forest lows, which gave permission to poor people to gather wood on condition that they neither cut nor sawed timber. Those branches which they could be carried away were theirs, but this was all they were entitled to. To pull down dead branches, or remove sticks from the underbrush, certain hooks and crooked poles were brought into use. Those in time came to be called hooks and crooks. By their use the peasant's managed to procure all the wood needed. Hence the expression "by hook or by crok."— Scottish-American.
