no young man today but wants a few dollars in his pocket, and sometimes I wonder how those farmers really supply the money to those boys, to go to moving picture, buy cigarettes and so forth." For the past two or three years he had felt it was a shame that the Government was not doing something to place these young men on vacant farms.

He recalled conditions thirty-five years ago, when you would never see a farmer with a bill of two or three hundred dollars. Prices were much lower then, but the farmers didn't go on relief; they paid their bills.

Mr. Cox said that when he, Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Shaw were in Ottawa they called on the Minister of Agriculture and placed his scheme of farm rehabilitation before him. The Minister thought it was a good thing.

Mr. Cox suggested taking ten farms in each county, and putting "good smart boys" on them who were assisted to work.

Mr. Cox praised the system of mixed farming under which, with a few hogs, lambs, milk cows, and a flock of hens, a farmer didn't have to worry all through the depression. The trouble is that so many farmers went into the seed potato business, lured by the prospect of high prices, and the result, Mr. Cox declared, "farming has gone behind ever since. I don't know how it is going to get back if we don't get more mixed farming."

He cited his own experience as a farm owner, showing that mixed farming was the safest and best system in this Province.

Mr. P. A. McIsaac, First Kings, said he believed this was one of the most important resolutions coming before the House. He stressed the necessity of maintaining livestock on the farm. Some of the members had recommended an application of ammonia, but he would advise those persons to use more "household ammonia" and they would have no need to worry about depression or paying taxes.

While in favor of the principle of the resolution, he was not very much in favour of some of the suggestions made with regard to administering the scheme. It will need supervision, but why suggest a college graduate? People who apply for these positions are usually people who have made a failure of their own business.

"I would suggest that in every school district where those young farmers may be located, there are enough good farmers to supervise those people, and it would be at little or no cost to the Government," Mr. McIsaac said. "I am not in favor of paying a good salary to a college graduate to supervise a few farmers. We want to be very careful about administering this, for it means at least $200,000 if you are going to rehabilitate at least fifty farmers."

The present situation, he continued, was anything but satisfactory. "We are building good roads, it is true; but if they keep at the rate they are going on the land, they will need good roads for they will be 'on the road' anyway; the going will need to be good!"

Mr. D. N. MacKay

The trouble with our young people is that they seem to want to get away from twelve to fourteen hours work on the farm, said Mr. D. N. MacKay, First District of Queens. He agreed with Mr. Cox that the seed potato business was responsible to some extent for creating a gambling spirit in our farmers. It was all right when times were flourishing and some money was being made; but there was also a lot of money lost. Farmers went into purchasing expensive machinery, getting themselves into debt; then when prices slumped they found themselves facing bankruptcy. There are very few in this potato business who are worth much today," he added. "That is one reason why conditions are as they are today. Another reason is that the farmer has been exploited, like the fishermen, by the manufacturers in Ontario."

Mr. MacKay believed that farm rehabilitation would be an expensive scheme, which ever way it was operated. The cost to rehabilitate a young man on a run-down farm would be $2,000 or $2,500. He doubted whether there were many young men in the city who would undertake the work required. He liked the tone of the remarks of the member from Morell (Mr. Cox) with regard to the importance of hard, steady work on the farm. You have got to start at daylight, and when sundown comes you can't go away and leave it."

Hon. Mr. LeFage: "Harry doesn't do the work on his farm; he just gives the employment."

Continuing, Mr. MacKay cited Falconwood farm, which went "in the hole" last year. He hoped there would be a different report this year.

Mr. MacKinnon

Mr. Dougald MacKinnon (Fourth Queens) said the scheme might prove the solution of two problems, that of unemployment and of abandoned farms. It is a question which will have to be given very serious consideration. He could see where the Government would be led into expenditures which the people in general would not put up with. He was against any rapid advancement of the policy. The Government, in conjunction with the Dominion Government, had been able to make grants in aid of the fishery industry, and a similar scheme for farm rehabilitation might be worked out. In that case it could be proceeded with as rapidly and extensively as was advisable in all these schemes, however, both for fishermen and farmers, one can see that we are applying the principles of Communism, and their tendency is to destroy the self-confidence of the individual.

In some cases, he suggested, aid to the fathers might be given, for the purpose of establishing young men on vacant farms.

Mr. MacKinnon said the Government is now spending money taking young men off the farms and training them in Charlottetown for other occupations. If they remain in this Province, these young men will have to go back on the farms.

On Mr. MacKinnon's motion, the debate was adjourned.
