

Nervous Debility.

A Sufferer From Weak Blood and Exhausted Nerves Tells of His Cure by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. A. T. P. Lalame, railway agent at Charlottetown, Que., writes:—"For twelve years I have been run down with nervous debility. I suffered much, and consulted doctors, and used medicines in vain. Some months ago I heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, used two boxes, and my health improved so rapidly that I ordered twelve more."

"I can say, frankly, that this treatment has no equal in the medical world. While using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I could feel my system being built up until now I am strong and healthy. I cannot recommend it too highly for weak, nervous people."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a tonic and restorative of inestimable worth. It makes the blood rich, the nerves strong, increases the weight, and cures all weaknesses and diseases of the nerves and blood. In pill form, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN.

"Before the United States required colonies," says the Boston Advertiser, "the cost of Government was about $500,000,000. Now it is $700,000,000. The $200,000,000 increase means 40 per cent more taxes on business, and it is a white man's burden that works quietly in the long run to check industry and commerce." While the above view of the case will not be universally accepted, it is true in part and serves to teach our neighbors the wholesome lesson that colonies beyond the seas are by no means a direct source of revenue to the nations possessing them. It is true of German colonies and of French colonies as well as of British colonies that in every case the direct outlay exceeds the direct income therefrom.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland derives not a dollar of income from India, Canada, the Australian or West Indian or South African colonies. It has cost the central Government many hundreds of thousands of lives and many millions of treasure to defend these possessions, and yet not one of them pays a dollar of tax or tribute to the Mother Country. A very different impression had long prevailed, even among intelligent persons across the international border, and down to the present day there are in leading American journals imputation of "British greed" in regard to the war now going on in South Africa. Here we all know that if as the result of the war Britain shall become possessed of the Transvaal and Orange State, as will doubtless be the case, Britain will receive no dollar of tax or tribute from her new territories, just as she now receives none from Cape Colony or Natal.

It is "the white man's burden" that has been taken up by Britain in all quarters of the globe until she has now more than three hundred millions of dusky subjects to care for. In less measure France in Algeria, Madagascar and Tonquin, and Germany in various parts of Africa have taken up the same burden. Our cousins across the border now begin to realize something of the same burden in the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico. There would be much better reasons for supposing that "greed" was at the bottom of these recent acquisitions of our neighbors than behind any territorial acquisitions that Britain has gained within half a century past. For we knew long before that what the "white man's burden" was and apparently our neighbors did not know. They had an impression that there was great gain in colonial possessions and now, as in the case of the Boston Advertiser, they shrink from the first light weight which has come with their first possessions beyond the seas. The lesson therefore promises to be not only instructive but useful. It must serve to broaden the minds which hitherto in regard to this matter have been afflicted with narrowness.

At the present moment the world affords no greater contrast than is seen in the attitude of the two great English-speaking nations toward each other's new acquisitions of territory. Not only within the United Kingdom, but throughout the entire British Empire the most broad and generous interpretation was put upon the United States acquisition of power and territory in the West Indies and the Philippines. British subjects everywhere rejoiced to see the Great Republic taking up a share of the "white man's burden," and assuming something of the onerous and costly duties of the civilized toward the uncivilized, the intelligent toward the unintelligent. There was no jealousy or carping criticism on our part. And now note the contrast when Britain has had war forced upon her in South Africa and is compelled in self defence to strike a blow! The enemies of Britain are accorded the warmest and most ostentatious welcome in the United States. The great men of the Republic unite to do them honor and present them with the freedom of their cities. There was no great admiration for the Boer in the United States before the war. His sole passport to American favor is that he has become the enemy of Britain.

We can well afford to smile at such narrowness and jealousy. It is the infirmity of a great people—noble, enlightened and generous in many ways, but self-centred, lacking in the instincts of international comity, and sadly needing the lesson which they are only beginning to learn by obtaining their first colonial possessions. "The white man's burden" will be of inestimable benefit to our neighbors in years to come, and we do not for a moment doubt that the yet adolescent Republic will grow to be heartily ashamed of many of its youthful follies when it has acquired that sense of proportion, that world wide experience and that regard for the rights of other peoples which can only come with years

Preparing for War's End.

Immense quantities of goods from Germany, more particularly machinery, are being prepared for shipment to South Africa, it is stated, in anticipation of the closing of the war," says Consul George Sawter at Glat haur in a recent despatch to the state department at Washington. The agents of leading German firms, says the consul, are proceeding to Cape Town in order to give their principals the earliest information as to affairs in the republic and their probable needs when the war is brought to a close. The general belief is that the end of the war will be followed by a boom the like of which the world has not seen since the days of the Australian gold discoveries.

According to official accounts, the imports of German goods into South Africa advanced from $845,262 in 1891 to $6,154,369 in 1896. In 1898 it amounted to $4,848,805. The importation of German textiles has grown annually, under even favorable conditions, from $429,875 in 1897 to $500,250 in 1898.

Consul Sawter says that it is unhesitatingly admitted by the competitors that goods from North America are given the preference in South Africa, and he believes it advisable for our exporters to direct their interest in the direction of the Transvaal.
