By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND

MODERN women with the business world to face, and a more tense social life to lead, demanded greater protection in meeting their greatest hygienic handicap. As a result, the old-time sanitary "pad" is fast disappearing.

300-Year-Old "Ghost"

(British United Press.)
LONDON, Sept. 27.—"It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you."

After three centuries of hiding a ghost has made its appearance in Trafalgar Square in the very heart of London. It is a very remote cousin of the Shakespearean ghost with marrowless bones, because it has no bones; it has emerged as a daub of paint on a canvas in the National Gallery.

Technically, the ghost is a pentimento—a painter's freak, created in the years of the First Civil War by the Dutch painter Pieter de Hooch. He was then at work on his picture "Interior of a Dutch House," part of the Peel collection bought by the nation in 1871, and experts who have inspected the ghost surmise it is that of a man whom the artist had intended to include in the painting, but afterwards obliterated by superimposing another arrangement.

With age the substance of the paint has thinned almost into transparency, and the ghost has stepped out at a fireplace, in the picture, from his seclusion in the texture of the canvas. Art connoisseurs and students are already quarrelling about the identity of the wraith, but the majority accept it as the outline of a Dutch burgher, dressed in sombre black, with a high-crowned hat, grizzled moustache, and well-trimmed beard.

The right arm is extended, and only one leg is visible—a shapely limb encased in trunk hose. The discovery of the Dutchman has focussed attention on two other instances of pentimenti in the National Gallery. Both occur in works by Titian. In one, "The Trinity receiving Charles V." ("La Gloria") he has painted an orb on the knees of Christ twice, and the obliterated first orb has now reappeared much darker than the other. The artist has also repainted the extended hand of Mary Magdalene in the picture, and with part of the original version now obtruding itself, the hand appears to have six fingers.

In his "Venus and Adonis" Titian had also introduced and afterwards erased a spreading tree, but the foliage has reproduced itself against the sky.

Death of Britain's Oldest V. C.

(British United Press.)

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Britain's oldest V.C. Colonel Sir Edward Talbot Thackeray, has died at Borden, in his ninety-first year. He was an Indian Mutiny veteran and a cousin of the novelist Thackeray. He won the Victoria Cross at the Siege of Delhi in 1857, the incident being described in the "London Gazette" of April 29, 1862, as follows:

"Edward Talbot Thackeray, 2nd Lt., Bengal Engineers. For cool integrity and characteristic daring in extinguishing a fire in the Delhi magazine enclosure on September 16, 1857, under a close and heavy musketry fire from the enemy, at the imminent risk of his life from the explosion of combustible stores in the shed in which the fire occurred."

Tryon Tid-Bits

Messrs. Eldon Large, Albany, and Roy McKeen, North Tryon, motored to Cape Traverse and Borden Thursday evening and visited friends.

Mr. J. Albert Callbeck was a recent visitor to Cape Traverse.

Friends of Mr. James Arnett Albany, will regret to hear that Mr. Arnett recently met with an accident resulting in a broken rib. It seems that he was endeavoring to set up his threshing outfit, and while doing so the cleaner slipped from its stand, and struck him over the ribs with result as stated above. After treatment by Dr. Bell he is, however, on the high road to recovery.

Radio fans of Tryon and vicinity were able on Thursday night, to listen in on the Tunney-Dempsey fight, and the thanks of many who are not at present owners is hereby extended to Mr. W. H. Chisholm, Merchant, North Tryon, whose Radio Dept was open that evening until 12 p. m. thus allowing any one who wished to hear the fight, an opportunity of doing so. The reception was fine and everyone enjoyed the entertainment.

The Ladies Social Circle of the North Tryon Presbyterian congregation, held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Lang on Thursday afternoon. The attendance was good, and a very successful meeting held. At 5 p. m. they all sat down to a very dainty tea served by their hostess.

A motor party from the United States, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weeks and Mr. Roland McKendrick, Mexico, Maine and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Thomson, Brookline, Mass., motored to North Tryon, where they visited Mr. Thomson's sister, Mrs. D.J. Thomson. On Friday they left for Oacumpec where they will visit Mrs. Weeks and Mrs. Thomson's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Minor S. Bridges, who are respectively 85 and 80 years of age, and still hale and hearty, and exceedingly active in the various activities pertaining to life on a farm.

Mr. McKendrick, who is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Bridges, will visit his parents H. P. and Mrs. McKendrick, Birch Hill, P. E. I., leaving Mexico, Maine, on Wednesday morning the party crossed the line at Woodstock, N. B., and following No. 2 route passed through Fredericton, while the fair was in full swing. The city was crowded and was evinced by the impossibility of securing hotel accommodation there, and they were forced to drive some twelve miles farther before securing lodging. Mr. Weeks is representative for New England at Mount Lison Mineral Springs, Inc., and Mr. Thomson is interested in the plumbing and heating business in Brookline, Mass., where he has resided for upwards of thirty years. They are driving a Paige Six touring car, and state the road performance to be all one could desire.

On the evening of Friday, Sept. 23, the members and adherents of the North Tryon Presbyterian congregation assembled at the home of Mrs. Sarah McKenzie to bid farewell to Mr. K. H. Howse, who for the past four months has been their pastor. The evening passed pleasantly, and was marred only by the fact that it was to say farewell and God-speed to the pastor that had brought them there.

The programme consisted of music, singing and games, pleasing solos being rendered by Messrs. Howse and Chisholm, also duets by these gentlemen. Lunch was served by the ladies of the congregation and soon afterward the chairman Mr. A. Waddell called the assembly to order and the following address was read by Mr. Jas. A. Chisholm:

Dear Mr. Howse:—
In the natural course of events the times is near at hand when you shall take your departure from our midst. Some four months ago you came as a total stranger to labor among us the members and adherents of the congregation of North Tryon Kingdom. By your kindly and genial manner coupled with your strong and noble character you have found a deep place in our hearts. It was our delight to assemble from week to week on the Sabbath Day and listen to your thoughtful and helpful sermon. We would have you know that you have won the admiration and esteem of both old and young, and we wish to assure you that we will miss you when you shall have gone with us. Before saying farewell we would ask you to kindly accept a small gift as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by us. We trust you will value this not as much because of its intrinsic worth, but rather because of the expression of admiration and goodwill conveyed by the giving of it from us to you. And now farewell. May God's richest blessings rest upon you in the future in what ever part of His Vineyard you may be called upon to toil and should it be that at any time in the near or in the far distant future you should decide to come back again, that among the friends of Tryon a hearty welcome will be found awaiting you.

Signed on behalf of the Presbyterian Congregation North Tryon, P. E. I., Miss Jennie Waddell thereupon presented Mr. Howse, on behalf of the congregation, with a well filled purse. Taken by surprise with no thought of a speech Mr. Howse rose ably to the occasion and thanked his friends in a fitting manner. Then followed short speeches of appreciation by Messrs. Nate Atkins; Jas. A. Chisholm and A. Waddell. Then with Miss Minerva Gillis at the organ those assembled, almost forty in number, broke into "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow," followed by "Should Auld Acquaintance be forgot. Bless be the tie that binds, God be with you till we meet again and Good night Ladies, and finally bidding Mr. Howse, all retired to their respective homes.

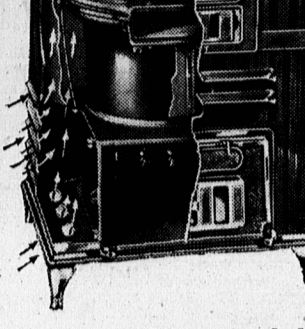

Sunday, Sept. 25th was Rally Day and also Mr. Howse's last Sunday with the congregation, for on Monday he left for Sackville to resume his studies. The Rally Day programme was as follows—Doxology followed by prayer by Pastor Chorus—by choir—"Carry the Light"; Recitation By Jessie Lord; Responsive Reading—Part I; Hymn—553; Recitation—By Eulalia McInnis; Chorus—By Choir—"Open the door for the children"; Solo—Major Waddell; Responsive Reading—Part II; Solo—By Mary Gillis—"Busy for Jesus"; Recitation—"Leap, Lord"; Hymn—494; Prayer—By school in unison; Solo—By Helen Chisholm—"We are lit Sunshines"; Recitation—By Jean Muirhead; Responsive Reading—Part III; Recitation—By Helen Lord; Offering—Duet by Della and Jennie Dawson; Exercise—By 4 Girls; Address—By the Pastor; Solo—Penzie Chisholm; Hymn—595; Lord's Prayer in Unison; God be with you till we meet again.

Among visitors to Tryon on Sunday were noted Geo. and Mrs. Hennessey and family, Ch'town, who spent the day with Mrs. Hennessey's mother, Mrs. Thomas Merritt and Mrs. Dawson and Master Lester, Summerside.

Thursday afternoon a motor party consisting of the Misses Green, and Mrs. Holden Mills, Summerside and Mrs. Jas. Auld, Sydney, C.B., were guests of Amos and Mrs. McWilliams, Tryon Cross Roads.

Dear Sirs—In reply to your letter of Jan. 6th, I may say that I have purchased one of your "Furnacettes" through The Rogers Hardware Co., of Charlottetown. I have given it a fair try-out and find it just as good a heater as any furnace, as it heats the house all through, both upstairs and down, with a lot less fuel. I think it is one of the best heaters on the market for the money. Yours very truly,

GLEANINGS FROM TRYON AND VICINITY

Local radio fans took considerable interest in the Dempsey-Tunney fight, which took place in Chicago on Thursday evening, Sept. 22nd. Many were disappointed that the popular hero "Tiger Jack" should lose the title of world champion, but one and all declared it to be "one of the best fights in years." The announcer said that the crowd in their excitement ate up eighteen carloads of peanuts and chewed miles and miles of gum. Reception was good.

A motor party, the Misses Katy Carr and Margaret Callbeck and the Messrs. Lorne Mabey and William Lea, despite the adverse weather, took a joy ride to Chataouqua last week, and no doubt enjoyed themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cameron, Albany, are receiving the congratulations of their numerous friends on the arrival of a fine new baby girl on September 20th.

Mrs. McDonald and son, Mr. Wm. McDonald, of Rose Valley, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bell, of Tryon, on Sunday.

Miss Adelaide Ives of Winnipeg, who enjoyed a pleasant holiday in Tryon this summer, has undertaken the duties of a pedagogue in the province for the ensuing term.

Mr. Kenneth Best, of Crapaud, was a recent visitor to North Tryon.

Mrs. Vernon McLeod and charming little daughter Elizabeth Jean, of Albany, spent last week the guests of Mrs. McLeod's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Howatt, of Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Reid, of Sonerville, Mass., are spending their holidays in Victoria, the guests of her mother, Mrs. Cameron.

The sale of Mrs. Margaret Arsenault's household effects, postponed to Tuesday, Wednesday, due to inclement weather, proved a fine success. Mrs. Arsenault, who had been confined to the hospital for 9 weeks in Amherst, N.S., previous to coming home, is now almost as well as ever. She intends going to Winnipeg very shortly, where she will reside with her son, who is a very successful lawyer of that city.

Mrs. James McInnis, of Amherst, N.S., has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Arsenault, of North Tryon.

KNOWING OUR FOLLY

Much of one's success and happiness in life depends on the search for wisdom and knowing it when we see it. A good guide is the common opinion of mankind which is not far in the wrong, especially when we gather it from long stretches of time and from many lands, as we can in our libraries. But an infinitely better guide is God's written Word and the Holy Spirit in our hearts. The wisdom thus pointed out is divine wisdom, and we may be sure of it. What the
