TEETH

The best way to do a difficult thing is to divide it into parts and put a specialist on each part. That is the way we practice dentistry.

Painlessness

In addition to specialists for each branch we offer patients another great advantage not found elsewhere, namely "The Berlin System" for filling, crowning, or extracting teeth without pain. Unlike most methods it does not depend on one or two ways of killing pain, but embraces ten enough to overcome all the pain caused by work on the teeth.

Advantage in Magnitude

The great advantage in a large practice like ours is that there is enough work in each department to keep specialists constantly employed. "Practice makes perfect"

Teeth Extracted Without Pain

We simply put a little medicine around the tooth and lift it out painlessly, any number of teeth can be extracted at one sitting without any bad after effects. Skilled experience combined with modern appliances now make this operation one of pleasantness and satisfaction combined.

For persons of over nervous or timid dispositions, who desire unconsciousness during the operation we have "nitrous oxide gas."

Artificial Teeth properly made restore the natural expression of the mouth and preserve the youthful contour of the face.

STORIES OF THE CZAR OF RUSSIA

The Young Ruler is an Interesting Personality.

HE IS UNLIKE HIS FATHER

The Peasants Will Travel Hundreds of Miles to Bring Their Petitions to Him.

Talk of the Czar's abdication is renewed by the unfortunate occurrence in the Russian imperial household which has now again dashed the wish of Nicholas for an heir. The young ruler of all the Russias is a perennially interesting personality. He is a curious contrast to his father. In disposition, as well as in bodily presence, he differs strangely from his parent. Alexander was not a highly educated man. His elder brother Nicholas had been carefully taught and trained for the responsibilities he was to bear, but his death, at the age of twenty-two, placed Alexander in the position of heir to the throne, and he was then too old to learn, nor could he afford the necessary time. Before he succeeded to the throne, a very fortunate incident occurred which proved how cruel he could be. An officer of Swedish origin had been sent to the United States to order rifles for the Russian army. On his return he had to report to the Czar, who was appointed to superintend the re-arming of the troops. During the interview the Prince lost his temper and began to scold sharply. The officer replied with dignity, whereupon Alexander fell into a fit of fury, and loaded the man with insult. The man bowed himself out of the royal presence, went home and wrote a letter to the heir-apparent, asking him to apologize within twenty-four hours, adding that if the apology did not come he would shoot himself. The Czar took no notice, sending neither excuse nor apology, and the officer kept his word. The Czar heard the story and was very angry with his son, and ordered him to follow the hearse of the officer to the grave. But even this terrible lesson failed to cure Alexander of his haughtiness. The gentle ways of the present Czar, and his unwillingness to hurt the feelings of anyone, are in sharp contrast to the cruelty of the father.

Unlike his father, he makes a point, whenever it is possible, of driving out alone with the Empress and with a small attendance. He does not give notice of his drives and walks abroad, and is often quite unnoticed. The late Czar, when he drove out, had the streets lined with troops, and always drove in a splendid equipage surrounded by his guards and attendants, while the police never seldom know in what direction their Emperor means to drive. The etiquette of the Russian court also has become much less strict since the accession of Nicholas II, and all his subjects are allowed admission to his presence. The peasants will travel hundreds of miles to bring their petitions to him, for they know that the Czar will personally receive them and will himself read what they have written. He is grave in public, but in private he is full of fun, and very fond of chaffing the members of his intimate circle. The Czarina exactly suits her husband and a happier family life cannot be imagined. Her Majesty is almost always with the Czar, even when he is at work.

More than one good story is told of the Czar's sarcasms and repartee. On one notable occasion he reduced a Russian general to a frightful state of consternation. It happened soon after his accession, and before the coronation, that he was cycling in the park at Gatchina wearing, as was his wont, the uniform of a colonel. Something having gone wrong with his chain he got off to adjust it, and, just at that moment, a pompous general from a distant province passed. Not receiving the salute due to him, the officer stepped up to the supposed colonel and peremptorily requested an explanation of the seeming discourtesy. "I am so sorry," said the Czar, sweetly, "I have not yet had the honor of becoming acquainted with you, owing to the shortness of my reign, or I should, of course, have done so."

A prominent Russian statesman is such a perfect double of the Czar that he is often taken for his imperial ruler. "Count" said the considerate ruler of Russia, to his double, "why don't you alter your appearance somewhat—shave off your beard, for instance? You, knocking about as you do, and so resembling your unfortunate Emperor, run terrible risks—frightful risks." "What!" exclaimed the faithful count. "What! I resembling Your Imperial Majesty as I do, alter my face? Never, sir, never!" "Ah, well, Count," replied the Czar, smiling and shrugging his shoulders, "as you will not alter your face yourself, some of my Nihilist subjects will alter it for you, I fear."

A characteristic story of the Czar's love of simplicity has been going the rounds of St. Petersburg lately. A certain lieutenant who was in a perpetual state of impecuniosity was one day seen riding in a street car. The other officers of the regiment were furious at what they called an insult to the uniform and intimated to the culprit that he had the option of sending in his papers or being cashiered, and the unlucky subaltern took the former alternative. Before he had time to do so, however, the Czar heard of the affair, and without a moment's delay donned a colonel's uniform of the regiment in question, and sauntering out of his palace hailed a car, entered it and sat calmly down until it stopped in front of the barracks. He desired the officers to be called, and addressed them thus: "Gentlemen, I have just ridden from the palace in a street car, and I wish to know if you desire me to send in my papers? I presume I have disgraced my uniform." "Sir," replied the major, nervously, "Your Majesty could never do that." "Then," replied the Czar with an amused smile, "as I have not disgraced the uniform, Lieutenant cannot have done so, and will thus retain his commission in this regiment, even if he, like me, dares to ride in a public conveyance."

The Czarina is as fond of a joke and a prank as is her lord. During last summer's visit to Kiel she and her sister, Princess Heinrich, were paying a visit on Sunday morning to an art shop in the Danische Strasse. A crowd of inquisitive citizens waited outside to see the ladies come out, and it was a crowd which increased every minute. Half an hour, and an hour went by, and still the expectant ones waited in vain, until a whisper went round that the Czarina and the Princess were back at the Schloss. On perceiving the denseness of the crowd Her Imperial Majesty asked the manager if he had not a back exit to his house. She was told the way was barred by a low wooden fence. "Oh, we can manage that," laughed the Russian Empress, "if you can lend us a ladder." That useful article was found and placed against the boarding, and over sprang the royal ladies, thoroughly enjoying the fun. They went through the court, reached the street on the other side, and regained the Schloss, not far away, in a few minutes.

Dreadful Case

Of Itching Piles

Doctor Wanted to Burn the Skin With a Red-hot Iron—Patient Was Cured by

Dr. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Mr. Alex McLean, Tarbot Vale, N. S. writes:—"For two years I worked as sectionman on the Dominion Coal Company's Railroad between Sydney and Glace Bay, N. S. and during that time time was exposed to all sorts of weather. Gradually my health failed, and I became a victim of protruding piles. At first I did not know what my ailment was, but consulted a doctor, and though he treated me for piles, they only grew worse. "I was forced to give up work and return to my home. My suffering could scarcely be described. I could not walk or lie down, but while the rest of the family was sleeping, I would be groaning and aching from the excruciating pains. "Again I decided to consult a doctor. This one stripped me and said the piles would have to be burned with a red-hot iron. I shivered at the thought of burning the flesh, and told him I could not think of undergoing such an operation, so he gave me some salve, for which he charged me two dollars, but it did not do me any good. "I was in a desperate condition and had about given up hope of ever being freed from this dreadful suffering when a friend told me about Dr. Chase's Ointment. He said that he had seen so many cases that it had cured that he would pay for it himself if it failed to cure. "My experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment is that the first application did me more good than did the two doctors and it has made me as well and as free from piles as any man. Since being cured I worked during the winter in the lumber woods and experienced no return of my old trouble. I am not putting it to strong when I say that Dr. Chase's Ointment was worth $100 a box to me. You are free to use my testimonial for the benefit of others, as I feel it my duty to make known this great ointment."

The Montreal Star

Speaking of Pianos shown at the Colonial and Indian exhibition said, "There is no necessity of telling Canadians who Messrs. Heintzman, the well-known piano manufacturers of Toronto, arr. Their instruments are well known and appreciated at home, especially in Montreal. In Canada they have little to compete with, but in England, where they throw down the gauntlet to such men as Brad Broadwood, and Collard, it is a bold venture. And yet many of the leading musicians who have given them a trial at the Exhibition pronounced their instruments unequalled in tone and elasticity of touch. Messrs. Heintzman exhibit two Grand and five Upright pianos, all of which are in cases specially prepared for the Exhibition. There can be no better proof of the value set upon the exhibits of Messrs. Heintzman than the fact that they have sold duplicates of their pianos here over and over again, one of the Grands having been purchased by one of the wealthiest men in the west of England. In the latter case the purchaser sent experts to thoroughly examine the instrument, and they pronounced it superior to any they could buy in England. Messrs. Heintzman have a certificate to that effect. Both the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Beatrice, the Duke of Connaught and the Princess Louise, have each visited Messrs. Heintzman's and congratulated the exhibitors on their manufactures."
