There was no celebration this year owing to the illness of Mrs. Hyndman whom they recently visited here, and who has

All Hallows' Eve and Its Activities

When witches fly and the owlets cry, And the little dog howls "Ki yi, ki yi!"

When the black cat meows as the night grows old, And the snake through the dewy grass glides cold, It has come, I ween, all Hallowe'en "Hallowe'en, or All Hallo' Eve, is the name given to the 31st of October as the vigil of Hallowmas or All Saint's day. Thought now known as little else but the eve of the Christian festival, Hallowe'en and its formerly attendant ceremonies long antedate Christianity. The two chief characteristics of ancient Hallowe'en were the lighting of bonfire and the belief that of all nights in the year this is the one during which ghosts and witches are most likely to wander abroad. Now on or about the first of November the Druids (priests of early religion in England) held their great autumn festival and lighted fires in honor of the Sun God in Thanksgiving for the harvest. Further, it was a Druidic belief that on the eve of this festival, Saman, lord of death, called together the wicked souls that within the past twelve months had been condemned to inhabit the bodies of animals. On the Druidic ceremonies were grafted some of the characteristics of the Roman festival in honor of Pomona held about the first of November, in which nuts and apples, as representing the winter storm of fruits, played, an important part. Thus the roasting of nuts, and the sport known as "apple ducking" were once the universal occupation of the young folk in medieval England on the 31st of October.

The custom of lighting Hallowe'en fires survived until recently in the highlands of Scotland and Wales. In the dying embers it was usual to place as many small stones as there were persons around, and the next morning a search was made. If any of the pebbles were displaced it was regarded as certain that the person represented would die within the twelve months.

There was a time, long ago, when the people were really in earnest about a good many of the superstitions and stunts now common to Hallowe'en. When Christianity became a power in religion, the church had many saints it wished to honor. November first was chosen for honoring all together, and was called "All Saints' Day". This brought the harvest festival and the Saints Day together, and the evening of October 31 became known as "All Hallows' Eve" which had now been shortened to Hallowe'en. Thus the customs of the two days became confused and we have our Hallowe'en colors of yellow, the color of the ripened grain, and black that of magic and the unknown. Many of the customs have remained long after the superstitions have passed. We have the fun on this night now without the belief that the wicked rule. Although after seeing some of the things done in the name of Hallowe'en we are inclined to believe the "old fpp" is still lurking around in some of our natures looking for a means of escape.

Our present Hallowe'en parties are the real survival of the ancient merry-makings. Great secrecy is attendant upon their preparation. Guests are not to divulge the fact that they are invited. Often they come masked as ghosts or witches and many of the old customs are revived.

These old customs, fortunes, games, stunts and stories are best suited for the small group in the home or club. This is a very appropriate time for the boys and girls of church clubs to come together for an evening of wholesome fun.

If the weather is suitable hold at least a part of the evening program in the open where a large bonfire can be built. You can worry out many of the old customs around the fire.

The following suggestions are suitable in the main, for either outdoors or indoors.

Decorations Jack-O-Lanterns play an important part in the decoration scheme. From Ireland we have this story. "A stingy man named Jack was for his inhospitality barred from all hope of heaven, and because of practical jokes on the devil was locked out of hell. Until the judgment day he is condemned to walk the earth with a lantern to light his way."

Witches on broomsticks, cats, bats and owls should be in evidence along with Jack O'Lanterns. A cauldron on a tripod, presided over by a witch holds fortunes tied in nutshells. The prevailing colors are yellow and black; a deep yellow is the color of most ripe grain and fruit; black magic, and demoniac influence. Ghost and skulls and cross bones, symbols of death, are in evidence.

Refreshments. Time honored refreshments are doughnuts, gingerbread, cider, popcorn, pumpkin pie, apples and nuts. The Hallowe'en cake is also a heritage from the past. A ring, key, thimble, penny and button baked in it foretell respectively speedy marriage, a journey, spinsterhood, wealth, and bachelorhood.

Receiving Guests. A ghost meets guests at the usual entrance and points to a sign reading "Go to the door on the north side of the building and follow the rope". This rope leads up stairs, through doors, between rows of chairs, etc. Lights are very dim—Candles or Jack-O-Lanterns. A wet glove is hung so that it hits the face of each—ghosts are seen in dim

BOOKS / ART / MUSIC (By F. R. H.)

In London annual Book Fairs have been conducted for three years through the cooperation of the publishers of England and The London Sunday Times. This year, for the first time, both Americans and Canadians are to have their own Book Fairs.

From November 5th until November 19th the Book Fair sponsored by the New York Times and the National Association of Book Publishers is to be held at Rockefeller Center in New York. And from November 9th until November 14th, Canada's Book Fair and Exhibition, sponsored by the Association of Canadian Bookmen, is to be held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto.

The New York Book Fair is designed to appeal to the taste and interest of the general book lover, and many striking features have been arranged.

Some sixty publishers will have booths with unusual individual exhibits; the university presses will have one booth, and a group of religious book publishers another. Book manufacturers will show how a well-made modern book is set printed and bound; and the New York Times will have its own private museum exhibit—"The History of the Recorded Word"—tracing the progressive story of ancient tablet, papyrus, parchment and other pre-typographic forms, down to the paper and type of the present day. There will be a room for children's books, a model bookshop, a model home library, and a public library exhibit.

A row of the famous Paris book-stalls from the bank of the Seine is to be transported to America for the Fair and will house an exhibit of antique books. Across the way from them will be a display for book collectors. Many famous collectors are placing some of their special treasures at the disposal of the Book Fair.

And, besides, noted authors and literary figures are to give daily talks in one of the rooms included in the Fair.

It sounds like a most interesting and comprehensive exhibit.

And the Canadian Book Fair is on hardly less mammoth a scale than the American Fair. It is an Association of Canadian Bookmen enterprise and marks the close of the first year's activity of that organization. It has been arranged to coincide with Canadian Book Week and every conceivable attraction relating to Books and Bookmaking is to be included.

Canadian authors and rare Canadians are to have special space allotted to them throughout the entire week, and one whole day is to be given by the publishers of Canada to our native literature. (Continued on Page 14)

Girls and Boys, When They Marry, Are Likely to be Much Like Their Parents — So if You Want to Get a Picture of Your Future, Pay a Visit to Your Prospective In-laws

Dear Miss Dix—Girls are always asking you how to pick out a man who will make the kind of a husband they want. I give them a rule that never fails. Judge a man by his family. Every girl who is thinking of marrying should spend a week with the boy friend's people before she makes her final decision. If she can give them the O. K. it's all right, and she can go ahead without fear. But if their manners and their customs and the way they treat each other gets on her nerves, she will save herself a lot of grief by calling their affair off and giving him the air. You never find a canary in a crow's nest and while a girl may be so blinded by love that she cannot see a handsome youth's faults, she is not in love with his family and can plainly see their shortcomings. What they are, he will be. So I say to girls, get a line on Algernon's family and take the tip they hand you. EDNA.

There is much good hard horse sense in this advice. We are all who will make the kind of a husband they want. I give them a rule that never fails. Judge a man by his family. Every girl who is thinking of marrying should spend a week with the boy friend's people before she makes her final decision. If she can give them the O. What they are, he will be. So I say to girls, get a line on Algernon's family and take the tip they hand you. EDNA.

The old saying, "like mother, like daughter, like father, like son," holds true in a great majority of cases. What mother is at middle age Marjorie is mighty likely to be also. If mother has let herself get fat and sovenly in appearance; if she is a slopply housekeeper and a poor cook; if she is wasteful and extravagant, don't marry Marjorie unless you are willing to look at a frump the remainder of your life and risk your digestion, and see half of your salary going to the garbage can. For Marjorie has not only probably inherited mother's lack of energy, but also she has been brought up in the ways of untidiness and doesn't know what good cooking and thrift are.

If, on the other hand, Marjorie's mother is a notable housekeeper and manager; if at 40 she is still good looking and takes an interest in combing her hair and fixing herself up, and particularly if she is tolerant, broadminded, interesting and well informed, then you will be safe in marrying Marjorie and the chances are a thousand to one that she will make you not only a real helpmate, but also a companion of whom you will never tire.

Specially note well how a girl's mother treats her husband, for that is the way her daughter is pretty sure to treat her husband. If Marjorie's father is a poor, cowed, hen-pecked creature who jumps when his wife speaks to him and who dare not call his soul his own, beware. You, too, will have to jump through the hoops if you marry Marjorie. But if Marjorie's father is petted and honored and made much of, grab Marjorie and rush her to the parson, for she will be a husband spoiler and lucky will be the man who gets her.

Boys are likely also to make the same kind of husbands that their fathers are, because a son takes his cue from the way he has always seen his father treat his mother. If John has always seen his father put his mother on a pedestal and treat her like a ladylove that's the attitude John will assume toward his wife. But if John's father has been miserly and tyrannical to his wife and if he has made a slave of her, John will walk roughshod over whatever girl is unfortunate to marry him, and make a doormat out of her.

To every rule, however, there is an exception. While it is generally true that girls make the sort of wives their mothers are, and boys make the kind of husbands their fathers are, now and then there are girls and boys who are so horrified at the way their parents do that they go to the other extreme in the way they treat their wives and husbands. I have known men who had stingy fathers, but who were prodigally generous to their wives. One of the tenderest and most considerate husbands I know is a man whose youth was spent in aching pity for his gentle mother because of his father's harshness and coldness to her. "I have gained in weight and have more color in my face!"

NORMAL WEIGHT and a good complexion are very closely related to health. Loss of weight usually leads to loss of weight and a poor complexion. All health specialists agree on this point and many women have learned by experience how important health is to beauty and weight. Miss May W. of Toronto, for instance, writes:

"Four months ago I was pale and underweight. I started taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they have done me a world of good. Now I have gained in weight and have more color in my face. Friends tell me how much healthier I am looking."

One of the chief causes of a pale face and thin body is improper nourishment. The blood, glands and vital organs of your body must be nourished with mineral iron and cannot function properly without it. If you are underweight, pale or sallow and rarely feel rested or really well, strike at the root of your trouble. Build up your health and vitality with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They will supply the iron you need and thereby help you back to normal weight, better health and improved complexion. Price 50c.

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills regularly for a while, and if you don't feel better, stronger and healthier, your money will be returned to you.

Mrs. James Harris entertained at afternoon tea Wednesday for her sister, Miss Helen Ha zard.

Among the bridge hostesses this week was Mrs. J. R. Hunter, who had two tables on Wednesday evening, at her home on Maple Avenue, Summerside.

While Buckingham Palace was being turned out before she moved to Marlborough House, Queen Mary discovered a set of white-painted regency chairs. As they bear a Crown and an "A", Her Majesty supposed they once belonged to Princess Amelia, a daughter of George III. Their chintz covers are much worn and the Queen has just arranged to embroider new chair seats for them this winter in shades of pink and blue on a white ground. The work is being prepared for her by Lady Smith-Dorrien at the Royal School of Needlework. When they are finished, which Queen Mary hopes will be by the end of the winter, they will be placed in one of the guest suites at Buckingham Palace for the use of visitors in the coronation month. At the needlework school, also, a set of chair seats made by the Queen for some painted Sheraton chairs at Windsor are being mounted.

A Morning Smile

In an exciting match between two English amateurs over a well-known Scottish course, one of the players, after studying a tricky shot for some seconds, finally called for his No. 1 iron.

"Nothing of the kind, sir," said the caddie, flatly, taking another club out of the bag. "You play your brassie I've got a Bob on you to win, and you're gaun to win."

THE COOK'S CORNER

STEAMED CRANBERRIES

Cranberries, steamed in a pudding, make a fine autumnal dessert. Cream together half cup butter and 3-4 cup sugar. Beat two eggs, then stir into the butter mixture. Add 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg. Measure 2 1-2 cups flour and 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder. Sift together into the butter mixture, a little at a time alternately with 1-3 cup milk. Turn in 1 cup of cleaned and picked over cranberries. Pour into greased steaming mold or ordinary lard can. Cover securely. Steam 3 or 3 hours, and serve with a light foamy sauce.
