Lightner Comic Genius Again Proved Here

Winnie Lightner is here again at the Prince Edward Theatre with all of her delightful roughneck tomfoolery and with rousing new songs—in a play which features her in a part similar to the one she created in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," only more amusing, and with many added comedy situations lacking in the former.

Miss Lightner is cast as Flo, a New York song plugger, who forms a partnership with one Dot, to leave New York for Havana to engage in the business of capturing unsuspecting sugar daddies.

How the two do this—how Flo rides a horse almost to victory, at damage to her own life, limbs and property—how she almost lands in jail—before she and her pal land two well healed gentlemen from the South—makes as merry an evening's entertainment as may well be imagined.

Arthur Caesar's peppy slangologue is diverting and the work of these Broadway funny-men, Butterworth, Judels and Hoyt is fine. Miss Lightner easily dominates the play with her hard-hitting but at the same time genial humor. It is worth missing a lot to see her as Flo in her latest and best talkie, "The Life of the Party."

"Dangerous Age" Begins At 45 Says Analysis

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—The frequent association of crime with biological or psychological abnormalities and the possibility of rectifying or modifying these through medical treatment, was pointed out by Dr. C. L. Huskins, professor of genetics at McGill University, in a lecture before the Montreal Branch of the McGill Graduates' Society on "Crime as Fate."

Recent studies of a number of pairs of twins and the findings that have been made concerning the influence of heredity on their criminal records were explained. While admitting the important part that environment must play in many cases, the lecturer showed how the definite influence of heredity can be shown through the study of identical twins who have been subjected to different surroundings and conditions during their lives.

Dr. Huskins treated in some detail the records of twins who had been studied in Bavaria by Dr. Johannes Lange. The criminal activities of each member of some of the pairs were extraordinarily similar, though in several cases the brothers had remained separated ever since their early years.

Of the 18 pairs of fraternal twins (those who are no more alike than brothers and sisters) in only two cases did both have criminal records. But out of 12 pairs of identical twins (those which are so much alike that they are very difficult to distinguish) in 10 cases both members had a criminal record, the criminal was criminal because of an injury received at birth.

"Are we then from this and earlier studies justified in concluding that crime is hereditary?" the speaker asked. "Certainly not in any strict sense of the term for crime depends on the laws of the country in which the individual happens to live and upon many facts quite external to him.

"If we consider hereditary constitution, the social and economic condition of the parents, the place and country of birth as fate, then I think the evidence is fairly strong that crime is fate. But it is not a fate which is beyond human power to control.

"Such rapid progress is being made today by endocrinologists amongst whom Prof. Colp holds so prominent a place, it is at least possible that many hereditary defects will be subject to modification by endocrinal extracts. A number are already, but like all remedial treatments this would leave unchanged the hereditary nature of the individual and if the race is to improve, society will very soon have to take more active measures to prevent the spread of undesirable germ plasma."

PART OF HEREDITY AND ENVIRONMENT IN DECREASING CRIME

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—George A. McNamee, secretary of the Montreal Tourist and Convention Bureau, believes in getting his tourists young. On his desk table were thirty five letters, written by pupils in a Brooklyn school; each one announced that the class is studying Canada and that Montreal is to play a large part in the lectures. Booklets were requested. There was no delay in granting the request.

Lincoln Rated As "Man Of Low Intelligence"

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Abraham Lincoln, enshrined in the hearts of most Americans, was "a man of low intelligence, with few scruples, a clumsy social climber and not a man of the people," Edgar Lee Masters, author of a new Lincoln biography, declared today.

Masters, noted as author of "Spoon River Anthology," has been a student of Lincoln lore for 20 years, and obtained most of the material for his "Lincoln, the Man," from current biographies.

"Lincoln's grandfather probably was a traitor and his father was a low character," Masters declared. "There is every reason to believe Lincoln was mortified by the supposed fact that his mother was a natural child."

"He was lazy. He was neither industrious nor honest." "If he had been a man of the people, he would have lined up behind Andrew Jackson instead of behind the forces of privilege in the Clay-Jackson and Adams-Jackson contests. "He set his sails when he thought the wind was coming up, but set them so he could pull 'em down quickly if need be.

"He was supposed to be a humble man, yet he went to Springfield for the purpose of marrying a rich woman and so furthering his career. "If both Lincoln and Douglas had died after their famous debates, Douglas, not Lincoln would be the more visible figure today.

Masters declared the greatest Americans were Jefferson, Whitman and Emerson and the praise bestowed on Lincoln is a robbery of them, his superiors.

Masters denied to Lincoln practically every virtue attributed to him by Americans, excepting his sense of humor. "That was the magnet," he said, "which drew people to Lincoln and held them."

"But," Masters declared, "Lincoln was a cold man in a ludicrous plug hat, mannerless, unkempt and one wonders if he was not unwashed."

Lincoln could have averted the Civil War, his biographer wrote, by allowing the Southern States to secede. "They would have been back in the Union within five years."

Rearrangement of Members In The N. B. Legislature

FREDERICTON, N. B., Feb. 11.—The House of Assembly of New Brunswick upon opening on Thursday will be rearranged according to the time honored division of government and its supporters upon the right of the throne and the opposition upon the left. In the last House it was necessary to place some of the government's supporters upon the Speaker's left but a change of six seats from one side to the other has made it possible to seat the two political divisions as groups. The opposition will have sixteen members upon the left of Hon. Mr. Speaker and the government will have thirty upon his right. The Speaker himself will be drawn from the ranks of supporters of the government. One vacant seat will exist, it being one of Gloucester made vacant by the death of John P. Lordon of Bathurst, a member of the last House.

One bye-election has been held since the general election last summer. Hon. Lewis Smith, Minister of Agriculture, being elected without opposition in Westmorland, Dr. M. A. Oulton of Shediac having resigned his seat upon accepting appointment in the provincial public health service.

New Foreign Demand For Canadian Wheat

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 11.—Improved foreign demand for Canadian wheat since the New Year is accompanied by fast declining supplies of visible wheat, according to a report of grain movement issued today by E. A. Ursell, statistician to the Dominion Board of Grain Commissioners. A total of 302,540,469 bushels of wheat is in store, compared with 218,565,020 bushels a year ago, the report states. Particularly during the last two weeks in January, exports have shown marked improvement. Clearances for the full month totalled 20,411,872 bushels and for the first week in February were 4,044,788 bushels. Exports last week included 1,991,634 bushels from Canadian Pacific ports.

A Tribute to the Hardest Worked Merchants in Our Country

Have you ever considered the important part played by the grocer in our daily life?

From early morning and often until late at night the grocer keeps open for our convenience.

Whether you want a cake of soap, a package of tea or a sack of potatoes he is there to serve you — and with a cheerful "thank you."

When sickness or unemployment occurs, it is the big-hearted grocer who supplies the home with the necessities of life and often waits a long time for his money.

For nearly 37 years, the T. H. Estabrooks Company has been distributing millions of pounds of Red Rose Tea and Red Rose Coffee through the grocers of Canada. Our relations with them have been very intimate and very friendly. We, therefore, know something of their difficulties and something of the services they are rendering, which we think deserve recognition and appreciation.

PANAMA CITY, Feb. 11.—Miss Eleanor Nichols, the American girl who Friday night danced with the Prince of Wales at an event given in his honor at the Union Club, thinks His Royal Highness "is one of the most charming men I have ever met," but considers Prince George a better dancer.

QUEBEC FURNITURE IS RICH HERITAGE

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—It is a great pity that the Quebec connoisseur and lover of old furniture should see carloads of valuable French-Canadian household goods shipped across the frontier each year at the close of the tourist season, declared Prof. Alphonse Desilets, director of the department of domestic science of the Province of Quebec, addressing students of the Ecole Provinciale. Many come to Quebec in quest of old French goods and souvenirs and they often find owners of priceless objects ready to dispose of them for a trifle.

Much of the furniture of the larger homes during the last period of the French Regime was imported directly from France by the government officials, members of the clergy, traders and above all by members of the "petite noblesse" who had received large concessions of land in this country. They brought with them furniture dating back many centuries and, continued Prof. Desilets, Canadian wood carvers and cabinet makers made a substantial contribution.

Speaking of some of the best known mansions and French-Canadian homes in the Quebec district, Prof. Desilets mentioned "le Moulin de Vincennes," at Beaumont, near Lévis, where the great intendant, Bigot, lavishly entertained his friends and guests. Under this room may be found furniture and other household goods of three periods, one hall furnished in the style of 1730, a second with furniture in use in 1780 and a third hall containing furniture in use in 1830, which gives one an idea of the interior of the bourgeois home during the last century.

Understands Spanish

"He speaks Spanish rather slowly," the girl continued, "but I can understand him much better than the people here who rattled it off so fast." "Then as to dancing."

"And he's an awfully nice dancer," she went on, "but I believe the Prince George is the better of the two. He doesn't have so much to say, though."

Miss Nichols was seated with her parents last night when one of the royal equerries came over and invited her to sit at the table occupied by the Princess. She was presented to Prince George, who danced with her. Hardly had she sat down again when the Prince of Wales walked over and asked for the next dance—"without sending a messenger or anything," was the way the delighted girl put it.
