Large Auction Sale At Marshfield

Owing to the small attendance due to the busy season this sale was postponed and will take place on Wednesday, November 14th at 12 o'clock noon.

We have entered into partnership for the purpose of growing seed potatoes and as the attendance is liable to be small again, this stock, crop and implements will likely go at a sacrificing price. All that is advertised has got to be sold and will go at any bid.

For complete list of stock, crop and implements see handbills.

Terms 12 months on all sums 8% off for cash.

If very stormy on Wednesday sale will take place first fine day following.

REGARDING MARKETING LIVE HOGS

We wish to inform the farmers at points where live hogs have been sold, that the majority of the live hogs are not sufficiently fattened, are altogether too THIN and will seriously injure the Island Hog business if this is continued.

We further advise that we will pay top prices for live hogs up to 240 pounds, so farmers need not be afraid to lose by extra feeding. The market at present looks reasonably firm.

Chapter 26

For several days after that, Mrs. Talbot was kept in bed, and fed a variety of delicate things that seemed to be mostly liquid. Jane, perhaps, rather revealed in her mother's collapse, for it gave her opportunity to head the house and run things without contradiction.

"It's my heart," Mrs. Talbot said. "It used to be strong, but it's been weakening since I'm old."

"Nonsense, you've a splendid heart," Jane answered vigorously. "I've used the stethoscope on you, and now I know more about your heart than you do. It's your digestion."

It must be confessed that Mrs. Talbot felt a little disappointed in this. Not that she wanted to have a weak heart, not that she even knew what a weak heart implied! Only everyone of her friends had some sort of trouble or ailment, which drew to them sympathy and which supplied them with a great deal of conversation.

"Morbidity self-interest," was the unfeeling way Jane dismissed this subject. "Most of them need nothing but scientific exercise to stimulate the circulation."

Mrs. Talbot had changed from a gorgeously healthy girl to a wiry but rather worn-out woman. Organically she was sound, according to Jane. But Mrs. Talbot had chronic rheumatism. Mrs. Jones once had an appendix removed. Mrs. Webster had a mysterious complaint which seemed to trouble every part of her at various times, and which compelled her over-worked husband to hire a housekeeper for her. It gave her great prestige among her friends, it puzzled the doctor, it appeared every time anyone wanted her to work, and as Jane remarked caustically, it troubled all of her but her conscience!

When Mrs. Talbot was allowed downstairs a week later, feeling better than she had for years, she found a large placard pinned up in the kitchen. On it were three lists—all the foods that were allowed for breakfast, all for lunch, all for dinner.

"A hot meal in the middle of the day is all wrong," Jane explained. "You're tired from work, and you begin hard work all over again, when the strength should be going into the digestion. You have no energy to digest food. Have a light substantial lunch, and the heavy meal when the day is cooling and there's a chance to relax afterwards."

The mother meekly examined the list—horried that her cakes and pies and hot breads and buns and biscuits were gone, and that corned beef—and boiled dinners and fried foods were off. She was sure nothing was left to eat.

"I've found recipes for all these new dishes," Jane announced, and overcame that objection before it was voiced.

"I'm not a bird, I'm a hard working man, and I want food, not bird seed," Jordan expressed himself when the new regime went into effect.

"Very well, you may have a separate diet," Jane conceded with great dignity. "I can't order for you until you get ill, as Mother did."

She seemed to expect he would get ill soon. But this he obstinately refused to do. In fact, he seemed to take what Jane told Luther was a "fishish joy" in sitting at the midday meal, hot from his field work, and eating great amounts of ham or corned beef, and beans and hot cakes and other things that

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

A Letter from Mrs. Smith Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Trenton, Ont.—"I am writing to you in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not be without it. I have taken it before each of my children were born and afterwards, and find it a great help. Before my first baby was born I had shortness of breath and ringing in my ears. I felt as if I would never pull through. One day a friend of my husband told me what the Vegetable Compound had done for his wife and advised him to take a bottle home for me. After the fourth bottle I was a different woman. I have four children now, and I always find the Vegetable Compound a great help as it seems to make connection easier. I recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. FRED H. SMITH, John St., Trenton, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system, so that it may work in every respect effectually as nature intended. Thousands of women testify to this fact.

Clavering walked rapidly toward Mr. Dinwiddie's club. He was in no haste to be alone with himself, although he should have been at his desk an hour ago. But it was time Dinwiddie had some news for him.

The club was deserted as far as he was concerned and he went on to Mr. Dinwiddie's rooms in Forty-eighth Street. There he found his friend in dressing-gown and slippers, one bandaged foot on a stool.

"Gout?" he asked with the callousness of youth. "Wondered why I hadn't heard from you."

"I've tried to get you no less than four times on the telephone."

"When I'm at work I leave or look the family up when he went down stairs to let my telephone over. Has Madame Zattiany ever alone, and I've been walking a said anything about brothers and sisters?"

"Well, sit down and smoke. "Not a word."

"Clavering stood up suddenly and looked down on Mr. Dinwiddie. "Well?" he asked sharply.

Standing round makes me nervous. You look nervous yourself. Been working too hard?"

"Yes. Thinking of taking a run down to Florida."

"Perhaps I'll go with you. But I've something to tell you. That's the reason I called you up—"

"Well?"

"Don't snap my head off! Got a touch of dyspepsia!"

"No, I haven't. If you had to turn out a column a day you'd be nervous, too."

"Well, take a vacation!"

"What have you found out?"

"Probably married and settled in Europe somewhere, or wiped out. You might ask her."

"I'll ask her no more questions. "Been snubbing you?"

"On the contrary, she's been uncommonly decent. I got rather strung up the last time I was there and asked her so many leading questions that she'd have been justified in showing me out of the house."

"You impertinent young scamp. But manners have changed since my day. What did she tell you?"

"Nothing. I'm as much in the dark as ever. What have you found out about Josef Zattiany?"

"Something, but not quite enough. I met an Austrian, Countess Loyos, at dinner the other night and asked her about the Zattianys. She said the family was a large one with many branches, but she had a vague idea that a Josef Zattiany was killed in the war. Whether he was married or not, she had no idea."

Clavering stood up suddenly and looked down on Mr. Dinwiddie, who was smiling less triumphantly than questionfully. "Well?" he asked sharply.

"I see you've caught it. It's rather odd, isn't it, that this Austrian lady, who has lived her life in Vienna Society, knows nothing apparently of any young and beautiful Countess Zattiany? I didn't give her a hint of the truth, for I certainly shall not be the one to loose the blood hounds on this charming young woman, whoever she may be. Told her that I recalled having met a very young and handsome countess of that name in Europe before the war and wondered what had become of her. . . . But somebody else may let them loose any moment. A good many people are interested in her already."

"Well, they can't do anything to her. She's a right to call herself whatever she likes, and she asks no favors. But I'd like to hypnotize Judge Trent and get the truth out of him. He knows, damn him!"

"He's laying up trouble for himself if he's passing off an impostor—letting her get possession of

All Fat People Should Know This

Fat people owe a debt of gratitude to the author of the new famous Marmola Prescription and are still more indebted for the reduction of this harmless, effective, obesity remedy to tablet form. Marmola Prescription Tablets can be obtained at all drug stores the world over at the reasonable price of one dollar for a box, or you can secure them direct on receipt of price from the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. This new leaves no excuse for dieting or violent exercise for the reduction of the over-fat body to normal.

Jane said should have killed him. He had definitely eaten even more than his ordinary amount, he would get up from the table—elegant as always—and stalk about, to do five or six hours field work.

"I'd get a sunstroke if I heated my blood to that extent with such food," Luther said. Jane and Luther consoled each other for the shortcomings of their parents. The mother, they agreed was easier to manage—though apt to slide back into her old ways when the new influence was removed. The father was "hopeless."

"But something still might be done about Mother," Jane said. "After all, she's only 48. Forty-eight can be progressive. One of the most enlightened women I know is 55. But poor dear mother has never had her brain opened at all. It's such a shame. Of course, Father's quite too old to bother with—but Mother—"

"I'll tell you," Luther said. "Mother's very meek, she has the duty-complex. She'll do what she's told to do, if it's nicely put. You see how I got Amy away—I didn't ask. I just calmly said I was sending her off with Claire. We'll be very nice, but we'll more or less tell Mother she must do certain things."

"It's for her own good," said Jane.

"Yes, it's certainly for her good," echoed Luther.

How Much Silverware?

To have too much may be an extravagance. But to have too little is certain to lead to annoyance and inconvenience.

The sensible thing is to have enough 1847 Rogers Bros. Silverplate for your every-day use and for entertaining. Then you won't have to make serving pieces do a double duty, or to wash knives and forks and spoons before another course can be served.

In "1847 Rogers Bros." you can purchase most reasonably the things you need. A set of six tea spoons, for instance, in the classic Anniversary or any other 1847 Rogers Bros. pattern costs only $3.75. Other pieces—salad forks, dessert spoons, ice cream forks and serving pieces—are priced as sensibly. Yet it will be a lasting satisfaction to own silverware like "1847 Rogers Bros." In beauty, durability and guarantee it leaves nothing to be desired.

Buy to-day these pieces you need to-day. Add to them on a future occasion. Your dealer will be glad to show you the newest 1847 Rogers Bros. patterns, which he always has in stock.

Send for "How Much Silverware," a new booklet which is a faithful guide to reasonable silverware purchases for families large and small.
