The entertainment held Friday evening in Market Hall, in connection with the W. C. T. U. Convention was largely attended, and in every way thoroughly enjoyable. The Hall was tastefully decorated with bunting, pictures etc. neatly furnished and decorated with flowers. The president Mrs. C. W. Strong occupied the chair. After devotional exercises and a cordial greeting to the delegates by the Dominion Y. Superintendent, read by Mrs. W. A. CHANCES OF WAR.

Only One in Every Thousand Missiles Finds a Human Target.

It is certainly a crumb of comfort to a man about to fight for his country to know that in battle not more than one in every 1,000 projectiles of all descriptions and weight takes effect.

Competent authorities state that on the average it takes a ton of shot to kill one man. For instance, it has been estimated that in the Crimean war the British and French troops fired between them the enormous amount of 45,000,000 projectiles, resulting in the death of only 51,000 Russians while on the other side the Czar's adherents killed some 46,000 of the allies with an expenditure of over 50,000,000 projectiles, this representing a death for every 1,087 shots fired. The American Civil War returns, which were put out with very great care, showed that the loss to both the Federal and confederates was about 7 per cent of the forces engaged, to bring about which involved the expenditure of nearly twenty-two hundred weight of ammunition per man. At the siege of Mezieres, in the Franco-German war, the Prussians threw no fewer than 197,000 projectiles into the ill-fated town, but, strange to say, less than 400 persons were killed by them. Then at Trouville, two persons only were killed after some 20,000 odd shells had been discharged. At Seilan, however, the aim of both the German and the French showed a marked improvement, for after 240 projectiles had been fired nearly 9,000 French and Prussians were killed. For the Spanish-American war the returns showed a tremendous amount of shot and shell fired for very meagre results. Of course, in this case, although the mortality was not great, the damage to earthworks, fortifications and government buildings generally was enormous, and there can be little doubt that if the Spaniards had not made themselves scarce the deathroll would have been appalling. Again, when the American marines landed at Santiago, during a fusillade upon the enemy lasting two nights, the machine guns and rifles alone accounted for the consumption of over 25,000 rounds of ammunition. Sixty-eight dead Spaniards were found as a result of this enormous expenditure of ammunition. Our own experience in our "little wars," has been very little, if any, better than the results just recorded. Take for instance, the Chartered Company's expedition into Matabeleland. Everyone will remember how the warriors of Lobengula were mowed down by the maxim guns like skittles, but even in this instance, which, perhaps, is the most effective on record, as the impi advanced on the British lines in solid masses, it would have puzzled a blind man to have missed shooting some of them. The mortality was very small considering the vast number of cartridges expended, but this is accounted for by the fact that on examination some of the dead bodies contained more than fifty bullets each. On another occasion an attack on a leager some twenty miles south of Bulawayo, 14,000 rounds of ammunition were disposed of, with a result of 346 dead Matabeles. Military authorities now regard rapid fire as being more essential than range and precision, and content themselves with giving general orders to aim low, and this, perhaps, accounts for the fact that most wounds occur in the legs, 33 per cent, in the abdomen, 21 per cent, in the arms and chest, and only 1 per cent in the head. It will be interesting to learn how many Boer bullets it takes to kill a British soldier, and vice versa, if only for the sake of really ascertaining whether the Transvaal burghers' abilities as crack shots have not been considerably overrated.
