ren for mother to have to nurse, and the money that was to have safeguarded father's and mother's old age has to go to feed the many mouths the children have brought in.

Certainly the young people are selfish and callous in their treatment of their parents when they rob them of their savings and make the tired old hands work for them, but, after all, it is the parents' fault. If you make a doormat of yourself, you can't expect your children not to walk over you.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I married with the one idea of raising a family and making a real home for my husband and children. This I have done. My husband has a position with possibilities. He realizes that he must study to meet its requirements and to make any advancement, yet he spends his evenings playing dominoes, cards, etc., wasting his time. How can I bring him to the realization that opportunity will not wait and that one must be prepared for it when it comes? His failure to do this forces me to realize that I must prepare myself to step out into the business world to make the money to give my children the advantages I am determined they must have. I must leave home and my chosen career to battle for dollars, and then I suppose it will be thrown in my face that a woman's place is in the home.

MRS. W. E. O.

Answer:

I think the greatest myth in the world is that a woman can "inspire" a man. We women have been raised on that hokum and we have grown up in a belief in the superstition that somehow, some way, we could bring some magic to bear on a man that would galvanize him into action and give him strength and purpose in life and the ability to achieve great things.

But none of us have ever seen this miracle take place. Nobody has ever seen a woman turn a weak man into a strong one, or an easy-going, self-indulgent man into a go-getter. No one has ever seen a woman develop a backbone in a spineless man, or light the fires of ambition in a purposeless man.

So I think your task of trying to make your husband realize that he must get up and hustle and deny himself present pleasure for future gain, if he takes advantage of the opportunities that his job affords him, is hopeless. He will always intend to begin to study and work, but he will never do it. He will stick to his card games and his dominoes.

When a woman perceives that she is married to a man who is too indolent and pleasure-loving ever to get along she is wise when she realizes, as you have done, that nothing is to be expected of him and that whatever advantages her children have she must give them, and so fit herself for the task of becoming a money-earner.

Of course, people will say that a woman's place is in the home. So it is, if she has a home and some one to support it. But when there is neither a home nor a support there is nothing she can do but go out and make one herself. Behind almost every woman's success is some man's failure.

Dear Miss Dix—At what age is a man considered a bachelor? At what age is a woman considered an old maid? ANXIOUS.

Answer:

There is no time limit on marriage in these days and the terms "old maid" and "old bachelor" have passed into the discard. If they are used at all, they would apply to a man who is past 50 and a woman who is past 40.

—SLIGHT FIRE—On Sunday afternoon the Summerside Fire Brigade were called out for a blaze, which broke out at the residence of Mr. F. J. E. Wright on Central Street. The firemen made a quick response, arriving on the scene within four minutes of the first call. The fire had started in the basement apparently in a pile of kindling. The ceiling had caught fire, but the blaze had not got through to the first floor. There was very little damage upstairs, except from smoke. It is not certain what caused the fire, but it is thought it was a short circuit in the electric wiring. The matter is being investigated.—S.

—GOLD MEDALIST FOR 1933—Alfred Linkletter of Northam, P. E. Island, is receiving the congratulations of his many friends for the distinction and high honors he obtained at the closing exercises of the Prince of Wales College. He not only led his class and received his diploma but he also won the Anderson Gold Medal, the most coveted prize of each student; as well as the George D. DeBlois prize for the student making the highest standing in mathematics. He also had the honour of presenting the Valedictory for 1933. This brilliant young student is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Linkletter of Northam and a grandson of Mrs. John G. Linkletter, so well and a favourably remembered by the older residents of Summerside where she resided for so many years. He is also a cousin of Miss Georgie and Blanche MacLean, teachers in the High School and Business College at Summerside and a namesake and nephew of A. E. MacLean, M.P.—S

—PURCHASES PRIZE STALLION—Mr. Frank Callbeck of Sherbrooke has purchased from R. M. Cowan, Sydney, N. S., the pure bred percheron stallion (Degas Jr.) which has a fine record at the principal shows. He is five years old and showed as a yearling and won second prize at the Royal Winter Fair and since then has always been first in Grand Champion and Reserve, and has won over twenty firsts. Eczema Caused Baby To Be Very Restless. Cuticura Healed.

"My baby had eczema very badly. It started on his face and went up into his hair. It broke out in little water blisters that itched and caused him to be very restless and cross. The trouble lasted six months. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them he got healed. I purchased more and in about two months he was completely healed, after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Minnie McMann, Box 133, Macoun, Sask.

Soap 25c, Ointment 25c and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address Canadian Depot: Lyman Agencies, Limited, 286 St. Paul Street, W., Montreal.

Lake Trout Are Bigger

MONTREAL, Que., May 30—The nature and amount of food affects the rate of growth, reproduction and feeding habits of trout in general as well as other fish, states the Fish and Game Department of the Canadian National Railways. In a study of Kamloops trout it was found that the lake trout fry grow twice as large as the stream fry due to the lake type having a more varied diet. Examination of the stomachs of stream trout fry showed the food consisted exclusively of aquatic insects while that of the lake type fry yielded a more varied diet, Cladocera and Copepoda constituting 68 per cent of the volume with aquatic and terrestrial insects making up the remaining 32 per cent. Ants were predominant in the food comprising terrestrial insects. It was also learned that fly fishing varied directly with the occurrence of insects. Trolling became effective as the number of insects decreased and as the fish fed more extensively on Amphipoda.

Crab Changes Shell Quickly

(Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Que., May 30—The edible crab, like the lobster, grows by moulting, states the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways, the growth in width ranging from 10 to 25 per cent at a single moulting. It takes about ten minutes for the crab to shed its old clothes and get into a new suit and during this period the crab is in a state of almost complete helplessness. Mating is considered to be related to moulting, the male apparently mating before moulting and the female soon after moulting and it seems extremely probable that the mating of the edible crab is a vernal event.

FAMOUS CUNARDER REPAINTED WHITE

SOUTHAMPTON, May 29.—(C.P.)—The Cunarder Mauretania, which has been undergoing her overhaul in Southampton, has had her entire hull painted white. Another color change will be on the overhead on the promenade deck, which will be green. Her mainmast will continue to be black, but the foremast will be white. The four big funnels will remain in the Cunard Line color, red with black top.

The change in color of the famous Cunarder has been made because after July 1, when she leaves Southampton for New York via Cherbourg, she will remain here for some months, engaged in West Indies and Bermuda cruising.
