Peeps

What are they?

Peeps are handy little tablets which provide the newest, surest and most scientific treatment for coughs, colds and throat and chest troubles. If you have a cough or a cold, why dose your stomach with liquid preparations? Your stomach is not ailing! Peeps provide a better way.

You put a "Peep" on your tongue and let it dissolve slowly. As it does so, certain healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you breathe this medicinal vapor direct to your lungs and air passages. On its way it bathes the delicate membranes thoroughly in its healing ingredients, kills the germs of disease, cures the irritation and inflammation which cause your cough and ends the trouble.

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breath-er" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peep" treatment for colds and throat and chest troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Another great advantage in Peeps is their entire freedom from opium, morphine or other poison, thus making Peeps the best and safest remedy for children's coughs and colds.

Peeps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc.

All druggists and stores sell Peeps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

FREE TRIAL

Cut out this article, write across it the name of this paper, and mail it to Peeps Co., 24 Depot Street, Toronto, enclosing 1 cent stamp for return postage. A free trial packet of Peeps will be mailed you by return.

DON'T WHIP!

Stop Lashing Your Bowels with Harsh Cathartics but take "Cascarets."

Everyone must occasionally give to the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics. What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can instantly be used without harm.

The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil, or Purgatives. Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.

SANDRA THE JEALOUS

By Jane Phelps

SANDRA IS ONCE AGAIN DISTURBED BY GOSSIP CHAPTER CXII.

I answered Rose's letter, comforting her as well as I could. Had it not reached me at a time when Everett was cross with me because of my attitude toward Miss Lane, I think I might perhaps have written differently. I remembered afterward that some things I said might be construed that I too was unhappy, that my husband wasn't all I wished he were. I had kept all my troubles to myself ever since I had married; I had no intention of telling any now, especially as my present troubles were so slight compared to what I had considered the others—when I first married. But one expression which I had used I regretted. I had said:

"Don't think you are the only person in the world who has trouble, and is unhappy; for you are not." Of course she might think it as a generalization, again, she might think I was writing of myself. I thought of something Everett had said to me when we were first married:

"Give your confidence to no one except your husband, Sandra. You will save yourself many regrets if you remember this advice. It may be a relief at the time to tell your troubles, either real or imaginary, but in the end it always brings regret, often embarrassment."

I really had followed his advice in that I had kept my own counsel in many ways. Often when tempted to tell of something which had disturbed me, or to write to Mother when I felt lonely and neglected, I remembered what Everett had said and waited. Invariably I had been glad I had gone to sleep.

I had not felt any happier about Miss Lane. She had adopted a manner of hurt silence toward me, never speaking unless I spoke to her unless it was unavoidable. I tried to ignore her as much as possible—as much as she did me. But it is hard to have your baby in the hands of someone with whom you cannot talk of his cunning ways, his beauty, etc. As often as possible, I took Hetty and we would go to the park with him. Then I was really and truly happy. Hetty and I would admire him to our heart's content, gloating over him like a couple of misers.

Hetty disliked Miss Lane even more than I did, I think, although I never had mentioned my feelings to her. "She thinks no one knows nothing about a baby but her, and she wants more waiting on than anyone else in the house," Hetty sputtered—common complaint of servants when a nurse is employed. I have since discovered.

"I guess she does know a lot, for the doctor would not have spoken so highly of her," was my reply.

"There is no reason why you should not go, if I would like to go to the theater, and I had demurred because of Baby." Miss Lane is perfectly capable of taking care of Junior.

"Very well, I can go if you wish it," I had not forgotten him for making me apologize to Miss Lane, and my answer was ungracious.

"I do wish," I said, "that you were as happy as I am." It seems as if I never was to have any joy in my life. Gossip had made my marriage almost an unhappy one, for years, by talking of Everett's first wife; and now gossip was trying to take away my joy in my darling boy.

"That the gossip of either sex yet to learn. I could not help attaching a certain meaning to what I heard. Once I heard Mrs. Gray say: 'There's never much smoke unless there's a little fire,' when she referred to something Hetty told her. Therefore when, during intermission, that fat Mr. Leveridge came over to speak to us, and he congratulated me on my baby, I turned to Everett to say in his oily manner something about the baby. I listened intently. He said: 'Well, Graham, I suppose you feel vindicated now because you married Mrs. Graham. I expect you are as proud as a peacock over the youngster.' Can't say I hope he will resemble you. He will be far better looking if he looks like his lovely young mother, instead of an old has-been like you." He chuckled at what he evidently considered a facetious remark. But Everett had flushed painfully, and I heard him mutter: "The d— fool!" As Everett never swore, I knew he had been very much annoyed. I had been made directly unhappy. It was the same old thing. Everett had not married me because he loved me.

Many of the satin dresses for autumn have a deep-facing of light wool material at least eighteen inches deep. This gives weight and a pretty line to the skirt and also does away with the petticoats.

PROFESSIONALS ARE BEING REINTEGRATED

VANCOUVER, Nov. 5.—Re-instatement of former professionals by amateur athletic unions of Alberta and Saskatchewan has deprived the Pacific Coast Hockey Association of another puck-chasing star, Dick Irvin, who prior to going overseas, proved a sensation with the Portland club. Word was received today that Irvin has been reinstated, and has accepted a lucrative position in Regina, in return for which he will lead an amateur club in that city. He is the third player to turn down the coast professional body for the amateur brand—MacKay and Stanley, for the past few seasons—with Vancouver, having been granted amateur cards to ply their trade to Alberta. Irvin, during his coast professional career, gave promise of developing into an even greater player than MacKay. Both boys had good offers from the coast clubs, but it is stated that the Amateur League of the middle west offered better inducements.

"We cannot hope to compete with the amateurs of Alberta and Saskatchewan when they better the price we offer for playing talent," declared President Frank Patrick today. "What it is going to lead to I am unable to say."

With regard to the above despatch it must be remembered that these professionals cannot compete in inter-provincial sport or in the Canadian championship. The A. A. U. of C. made trouble for itself, however,
