Malaria Affects On Civilization

LONDON, May 29.—"When we come to consider the pathological causes which lead to a racial decline, we find that it is less through severe forms of epidemic disease sweeping over a country and decimating it than of widespread disease which, lingering in a country, causes a high death rate of its young people, and undermines the health of the adults so that they fail to reproduce physically strong descendants."

AFRAID SHE WOULD NEVER BE WELL

London at the instigation of Harry Price, of the National Laboratory for Psychological Research, to conduct a series of seances. Describing M. Schneider's powers, Mr. Price said that he had often witnessed phenomena produced with him which was not only completely baffling, but defied every known test.

"The most striking," he said, "was the production, seemingly from nowhere, of a little white hand like that of a baby. This hand once picked up my handkerchief from the table and then vanished as mysteriously as it had come.

"On other occasions an inexplicable paw-like stump appeared and, picking up a handkerchief, waved it about. A friend of mine had a tug of war with this strange power. He was holding a handkerchief, the other end of which lay loosely on the table. Suddenly it was grasped by the force and pulled vigorously. My friend held on, but it took all his strength."

Rudie Schneider always conducts his seances clad in a black, close-fitting garment.

Mrs. Omé Monette had tried so many remedies in her efforts to get rid of serious Stomach Troubles that she was almost afraid to try "Fruit-a-tives," fearing that this famous medicine would not help her. But, as she writes from Montreal, "I finally decided to do so. The first few tablets helped me and after taking three boxes I noticed a great change for the better. Now, I enjoy and digest everything I eat, and am happy to recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all my friends."

"Fruit-a-tives" is a combination of concentrated and transformed fruit juices and the most scientific medicinal ingredients. It acts directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and skin; and brings these vital organs back to normal, healthy action. If your stomach bothers you, try "Fruit-a-tives." 25c and 50c. a box—at dealers everywhere.

which was broadcast over all stations of the British broadcasting companies. Vigorously defending the principle, the Labor Leader cited the Canadian National Railways and Ontario Hydro Electric Commission as among outstanding successful examples of public ownership, and asserted that Premier Stanley Baldwin was ill advised when he denounced nationalization, at the outset of the campaign.

BRITAIN'S POLITICAL PARTIES

The British elections are creating unusual interest because of the unusual situation of the parties. For two hundred years Great Britain was under a two party system, in this election there are three parties, all very active and each with its quota of very able men at its head. Many forecast that when the election is over no one party will be able to carry on, that either of two results may happen, a coalition between Liberals and Conservatives against Labor, or a coalition of Liberals and Labor against the Conservatives.

It is interesting to note the different governments which have been in control since the Reform Bill of 1832:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Party. 1832-Liberal with majority of 370. 1835-Liberal 370. 1837-Liberal 118. 1841-Conservative 76. 1847-Liberal 18. 1852-Conservative 20. 1857-Liberal 80. 1859-Liberal 50. 1865-Liberal 73. 1868-Liberal 116. 1874-Conservative 88. 1880-Liberal 85. 1885-Liberal 114. 1892-Liberal 40. 1895-Conservative 132. 1900-Conservative 134. 1906-Liberal 355. 1910-(Jan.) Tracing Hostile Airplanes

(By British United Press) LONDON, May 29.—According to the technical correspondent of one of the London newspapers, a secret battle of wits is being waged between designers of aircraft and constructors of sensitive sound-locating machines. The former, by means of silenced engines and propellers, are seeking to reduce the noise made by large raiding aeroplanes as they steal through the sky. The latter, by furthering their perfection of almost human pieces of apparatus, are enabling listening posts to detect the faintest and most distant sounds.

One of the most remarkable recent developments concerns the reduction of the high-pitched, screaming noise made by fast-running airscrews. New multi-bladed propellers are being experimented with. Not only are a larger number of smaller blades being employed, but those blades are being shaped in ingenious ways to reduce noise.

During recent experiments at a lonely aerodrome in France a big bomber with silenced motors and screws crept high through the air with an uncanny absence of sound. But, though the ears of those on the ground did not detect much, an electrical sound-locator printed on sensitized paper a clear record of that ghost-like craft's stealthy progress across the sky.

Not only does one of these perfected sound machines, installed at some strategic point, furnish a warning of the approach of a high-flying aeroplane, even when such a craft is still far away; it indicates also, by the tell-tale record which it prints,

Earrings For Greyhounds

LONDON, May 29 — (British United Press) — Since the sport of chasing an electric hare by greyhounds — commonly called "grading" — became popular in England, the National Greyhound Racing Club has been seeking an effective device to defeat the crooks who make a practice of substituting one dog for another.

This protection seems at last to have been secured. It takes the form of a small silver identity disc or button, each with its specific marking which is permanently fixed in the dog's ear.

As the dogs are presented for each race, the track manager, who is provided with a master gauge, fits this to the keyways on the button, and if this registers accurately the animal is passed for the race. Owing to the fact that keyways are gauged to the ten thousandth part of an inch, it is impossible to gauge them without the master tools.

The disc is the invention of a man named Hall, and it has already been sanctioned by the R. S. P. C. A. and been provisionally approved by the stewards of the National Greyhound Racing Club. The device does not affect the animals in any way and causes no pain.

(British United Press) LONDON, May 29.—A shy, retiring young man, who, it is claimed, is one of the most remarkable spiritualistic mediums in the world, is now in London undergoing a series of tests of his powers.

His name is Rudie Schneider. In private life he is a motor mechanic in Braunau, Austria. When he gives a seance, eminent scientists and spiritualists from all parts of the world flock to witness the startling results he obtains. He has come to

Malaria Affects On Civilization

(By British United Press) LONDON, May 29.—"When we come to consider the pathological causes which lead to a racial decline, we find that it is less through severe forms of epidemic disease sweeping over a country and decimating it than of widespread disease which, lingering in a country, causes a high death rate of its young people, and undermines the health of the adults so that they fail to reproduce physically strong descendants."

It was in those words that Sir Thomas Oliver, vice-chancellor of Durham University, who delivered his presidential address to the Institute of Hygiene on "Some factors which have made for the decline of nations," analyzed the cause of the decline of ancient civilizations.

In the fourth century, B. C., he said, a change had taken place in Greek character; patriotism had declined, and the people had lost their manly vigor and intellectual strength. It was about this time that malaria became prevalent in Greece — even today forty per cent of the people in Greece were said to be suffering from the disease.

Malaria, however, was not the only cause of the decline.

"The Greek," said the speaker "had lost not only his religion but also his faith, and without faith in something higher than itself, no nation can long survive."

Sir Thomas also had some interesting remarks to make with regard to the effect of climatic conditions on a nation.

"If we look at the civilized world today," he said, "I think it will be admitted that those nations are certainly the most virile where the seasons vary and the temperature is moderate. Men are stimulated or depressed by climatic conditions."
