LAST SAYINGS OF ENGLISH KINGS

William I., the Conqueror—"To my Lady, the Holy Mary, I commend myself, that she, by her prayers, may reconcile her beloved son to me."

William II., "Rufus"—"Shoot, Walter, in the devil's name!" (Walter Tyrrell did shoot, but killed the king.)

Henry II.—"Now let the world go as it will; I care for nothing more." (This he said when told that his favorite son, John, was conspiring against him.)

Richard I., Coeur de Lion—"Youth, I forgive thee!" (This was said to Bertrand de Gordon, who shot him with an arrow at Chalus.) Then to his attendant he added: "Take off his chains, give him 100 shillings, and let him go."

Richard III.—"Treason! Treason!" (Said at Bosworth, where his best men deserted him and joined the army of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII.)

Henry VII.—"We heartily desire our executors to consider how behoofful it is to be prayed for."

Henry VIII.—"All is lost! Monks, monks! monks!"

Elizabeth I.—"All my possessions for a moment of time."

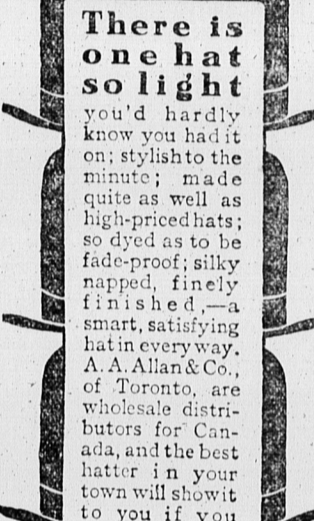

Charles I., just before he laid his head on the block, said to the Archbishop of Canterbury: "Remember."

Charles II.—"Don't let poor Nellie starve." (Referring to Nell Gwynn, mother of the first Duke of St. Albans.)

William III.—"Can this last long?" (Said to his physician. He suffered from a broken collar bone.)

George IV.—"Watty, what is this? It is death, my boy. They have deceived me." (Said to his page, Sir Watty Walker.)

Edward VII.—"Well, it is all over, but I think I have done my duty."

There is one hat so light you'd hardly know you had it on; stylish to the minute; made quite as well as high-priced hats; so dyed as to be fade-proof; silky napped, finely finished,—a smart, satisfying hat in every way.

Clothing that Denotes Quality in Every Inch

STYLE is the keynote of our showing—the sounding board of satisfaction, but there's something behind style—that's the whole secret of our ever increasing clothing business—that's where we give you the points others lack.

We give you style—yes, the very latest; but when you get a suit here the style is bound to be there—and then there's the materials and workmanship behind the style. Our suits mean to the fashionable young man the same as our hats—they have all the distinctive style and superior workmanship to the square inch that could possibly be packed in them.

Our suits from $12 to $25 are revelation to the fashionables. Then we have suits from $6. up.

APPETITE OF BIRDS.

The wood pigeon has, all along its history in association with man, been characterized as a bird of voracious appetite, but it has not more voracious appetite than many other woodland companions. It certainly, however, is a voracious bird in the crop of its crop. It will eat 70 grains of wheat, while the bill of a crow will eat only 10. It is said that one bird was found to have swallowed two trout weighing 2 lb. and 1 lb. each. Another had dined on seven small trout, a mouse, and a snake.
