CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

RASHID ALI

April, has returned in the wake of the British drive, and now is at Fallujah, British-held town just west of Baghdad.

The Middle East command reported that its troops managed to cross a damaged iron bridge eight miles west of Baghdad, and although impeded by flood waters loosed by the Iraqis in the narrow depression between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, had occupied Al Kadhimain, five miles northwest of Baghdad.

Another British column, following the Euphrates north from the port of Basra, reported it had reached and occupied Ur, the Biblical Ur of the Chaldees which was Abraham's birthplace.

Ur now is a junction point on the Basra-Baghdad railroad.

While the British land forces thus progressed, it was acknowledged here that the German air force had gained control of the Mosul oil fields of Eastern Iraq without getting any oil from them.

The British Middle East forces have stored huge quantities of oil and gasoline, so they are not likely to feel the lack of Mosul oil for many months.

BIRTHDAY CONGRATULATIONS—Mr. Leyton Milligan of Sherbrooke is receiving congratulations on his birthday and was tendered a birthday party by his family and friends on this auspicious occasion.

Dr. Bonnell, born in Prince Edward Island, is minister of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, where he went from the Westminster United Church of Canada in Winnipeg.

Tomorrow Dr. Bonnell will represent the American churches at an international service of Christian witness in Westminster Abbey.

He also has preaching engagements in Central Hall (Methodist), Westminster and in Westminster Chapel.

During his stay in England, which will last another month, he plans to visit the Canadian Red Cross Hospital and a number of Canadian army units.

He spent last night touring air raid shelters where he said the spirit of the shelters "cheered me."

Colour Combinations

In addition, there are stunning navy and white, black, white, and brown and white checks in rayon crepe, faille and silk.

Among the monotonous, it's possible to find silk and sheer wool crepe coat dresses as well as some which look like coat dresses but aren't.

There are suave two-piece models with the new, longer bodices and beautiful, knitted skirts.

One of these, in navy blue rayon crepe has a huge, flattering collar of crisp white organza with peaked edges.

For excellent value, a beige wool redingote over a brown, beige and cream print dress just can't be beat.

He wanted To go home

Strange things happen when November comes in May, but none stranger than an occurrence at the Police Court yesterday morning.

It was cold and wet. Thursday night, and Henry had just left home, so with nowhere else to go, he sought refuge in the cross-roads, disinfectant-smelling cages of the City Police Station.

In the morning they took him up before the Magistrate. After bating the evidence backwards and forwards from Vagran, Henry to Magistrate to Police and back again, they sent Henry back home for ten days.

Henry lodged at the red brick building on Longworth Ave. this winter for three months, and was mighty grateful for the food and shelter there.

"But, don't you work?" he was asked. "Yes, work I can get it. There was nothing doing in the winter and nothing now, so I asked Mr. Martin to send me back for ten days. Its nice here."

"Do you know the Magistrate well?" "Yes, I've been up before. But nothing serious. I try to keep away from the tough gangs."

"Will you get work after ten days?" "Yes, I think so. There'll be a job on the road and other summer jobs. I'm not lazy."

"What about the army?" "Well, I tried there, and they said they would let me 'now'."

"How do you feel about the people who drive around in big cars?" Henry was asked.

"Well, suppose they were lucky, or someone left them money or something," he replied.

"So, that's all there is to it?" "So, they're educated. I bet they folks have better chance. I can't read or write. I never went to school. My parents were hard up."

"Are you happy here?" "Sure, I like it. Its home—home's where a fellow hangs out."

"You don't mind me telling the people about this?" "No, go ahead. Say something good about me."

So, Henry is at home now in the red brick building and he hopes that everyone is as happy as he is.

The UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PLAN

To the Employer...

Contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Fund become payable as from July 1st, 1941.

Contributions are made by the employer and the employee, and are paid by the purchase of Unemployment Insurance stamps by the employer from the Post Offices.

The employee's contributions are deducted from his wages by the employer.

Stamps will be affixed to a special book, called the Insurance Book, by the employer. The book is the employee's record of contributions, and when he becomes unemployed it forms the record from which insurance benefits may be paid.

Full details will be sent to you when you have returned the postcard attached to a form which is now in the mails.

The plan of procedure has been adopted after consultation with employer and employee associations and is one which has been based upon thirty years' experience in Great Britain.

The Dominion Government adds 20% to the combined employee-employer contribution.

Says Bismarck Was Not Fitted With Life Rafts

One British Naval Officer says ship was probably 50,000 tonner.

AN ENGLISH PORT, May 30 (CP)—Hundreds of German seamen floundered helplessly in the sea with no life rafts to cling to after 40 British sailors and three "Steel fish" sent the 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck, pride of the German Navy, to the bottom last Tuesday, the chief petty officer of a British warship said today.

The warship arrived here with approximately 100 German officers and men who survived the Bismarck.

In the words of the petty officer, Rodney and another British battleship "Banged hell out of her," and two torpedoes lifted her bodily out of the water before the sink sent the new dreadnought to the bottom in revenge for the destruction of Britain's 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood.

One naval officer estimated that the Bismarck's tonnage was in excess of 35,000 and perhaps 50,000. Official registers carry only the lower tonnage.

"The Bismarck was undoubtedly far above anything we had thought of," the officer said.

Such tonnage would have made the Bismarck the world's largest warship.

Describes Battle

The tension of waiting for the battle to begin became acute.

The "open fire" order was given by signal.

Almost simultaneously, orange-gold flame burst with a roar from the Hood's forward guns.

The Hood's forward guns opened fire.

The Prince of Wales' guns then began firing. Dense clouds of velocity cordite smoke enveloped her bridge. She was to the left of the Hood, two or three hundred yards away, and still surging forward on a starboard course.

Fountains of water shot up in her wake—first about 100 yards behind her and then only 50 yards astern.

The Hood continued to fire and still raced forward.

What happened next was a strangling, sickening sight. There was a terrific explosion and the whole of the vast ship was enveloped in a flash of flame and smoke which rose high into the air in the shape of a giant mushroom.

Sections of funnels, masts and other parts of the ship hurled hundreds of feet into the air and some of them fell on our ship.

The Hood's bow tilted vertically into the air and within three or four minutes she was gone entirely.

A destroyer was diverted to rescue work and managed to pick up three of the ship's company—two seamen and a midshipman.

At this time the Prince of Wales continued pouring shells at the Bismarck. More than once sprays of water showed she was straddled.

Again shells from the Bismarck crashed near the Prince of Wales, but she came out of the battle with little damage.

When the Bismarck turned away to be pursued all that day and night and the next day over the Atlantic at top speed.
