

The Old Order Is Passing

In the past people who have accumulated savings have been content to give their money to corporations, firms and individuals for 3 to 6 p. c. who have used it to make for themselves, ten, fifteen and even twenty-five per cent.

THE PEOPLE NOW DEMAND

Their proportionate share of the profits both present and future from any business in which they invest their savings.

MY POLICY

It is to see and insist that the firms I raise money for pay the investors fair dividends also give them a Common Stock Bonus that they may share in additional future earnings.

I can offer you reliable investments in concerns who believe as I do.

KING GEORGE'S VALET.

His Majesty has three valets—a chief and two assistant valets. The chief valet has been with his Majesty for the past twelve years. His duties are to superintend the care of the Royal wardrobes, to attend on the King in the Royal dressing-room, and to take all instructions concerning the King's clothes which may be given him either by his Majesty or by one of the private secretaries.

His Majesty's clothes are kept in a large room adjoining the dressing-room. The walls of the room are lined with wardrobes, which are divided into two sections—one section contains the King's uniforms, and the other his Majesty's ordinary morning, walking, and evening suit of clothes. Overnight, the chief valet is instructed regarding the uniforms. If any, and the suits of clothes which the King will require for wear the following day, and these are placed by the assistant valets in the Royal dressing-room. Before a suit or uniform is sent into the Royal dressing room it is inspected by the chief valet to see that it is properly brushed, ironed, and ready for wear.

Every morning the suits which the SCOTT'S EMULSION drives out colds and corrects bronchial troubles. It soothes and heals the affected membranes. It makes healthy flesh, rich blood and strengthens weak lungs. Nothing is so good as Scott's Emulsion for stubborn coughs and colds.

King has worn the day previously are brushed and ironed by the assistant valet.

The King, it may be noted, never wears the same suit two days running. As a rule, his Majesty would not wear the same suit, oftener than once in the week, and when it had been worn about two dozen times it would be put out of the Royal wardrobes.

The present King keeps earlier hours than did his late Majesty, King George, who customarily rises at seven o'clock, when he takes a cup of light coffee, which the chief valet brings him directly the King enters his dressing room. His Majesty then has his bath, which is always a cold one; whilst the King is in his bathroom, the chief valet puts the links and studs into his Majesty's shirt, puts out an assortment of ties on the dressing table, and places the boots or shoes the King intends to wear on a mahogany boot stand, and then retires.

The King dresses himself without the aid of a valet, except when putting on a uniform, when the chief valet is generally in attendance. When the King travels, the chief valet superintends the packing of his Majesty's luggage, which is done by the assistant valets. A list of everything that is to be packed is made out by the chief valet, and on the arrival of the luggage at the King's destination the list is checked over by the chief valet whilst the portmanteaus are being unpacked.

"Trying-On," Made Easy.

The King's chief valet is a well-educated and very well-informed man. He is a first-rate linguist, speaking French, German and Italian, in addition to his native tongue, perfectly. He has travelled all over the world with the King, and is known and held in high esteem by all the great European monarchs from whom he has received during their visits to England many tokens of their esteem. King George rarely or never tries on a suit of clothes, and seldom is seen by the tailors who have the honor of his Majesty's custom. When the King decides to order any new clothes, he informs the chief valet of the fact, who gets patterns for the King's inspection. When his Majesty has selected the patterns, the chief valet gives the order to the tailor, and the clothes, when ready for trying on, are fitted on a dummy figure of the King. The chief valet inspects the suit when it is fitted on the model, and gives the tailor all the necessary directions concerning it. A suit is generally fitted on the model three times.

THE JACKET LINING.

Many women clever with their needle who think it is difficult to re-line a jacket will find that in reality it is quite a simple affair. Rip out one half of the jacket lining for a pattern and cut a complete lining by this, leaving the other half attached to the jacket for a guide. Sew the lining together, leaving the under-arm seams open. Now tack in one half, fitting it smoothly along the fronts and base of the jacket, then cut out the other half of the old lining and tack it in the sameway.
