Big Elephant Doused The Music

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Sept. 28.—"Poetree", a 12-year old Asiatic elephant at the Philadelphia Zoo, blew a trunkful of water over an orchestra which had come to play for her in behalf of science the other day. The act was done during the playing of a rag-time piece. "Poetree", chained 10 yards from the orchestra, stretched forward until her trunk dipped in the water of the pool in which the elephants bath each afternoon.

aimed at the musicians who upset their chairs in a scramble to escape. That was "Poetree's" reaction to music.

The orchestra played for the animals at the Zoo so that Emerson Brown, director of the Zoological garden, could record their actions.

Classical music achieved a victory over jazz in the monkey house.

The first rumbles, squeaks, chirps and bleats from the instruments as they were tuned up in the monkey house brought consternation to the occupants. Big and little monkeys, chimpanzees, orang-outangs, mandrills, marmosets and all the others betrayed the most lively curiosity, mingled with other emotions.

Noticing the diverse reactions, the musicians tried each instrument separately. So the drummer tapped a rat-a-tat-tat on his drum and the monkeys covered in corners of their cages in evident fear.

Then the violinist swung his bow over the strings and instantly the monkeys became quiet. Some crawled forward to the bars of their cages and gave evidence of finding the sound soothing. But the saxophone and the trumpet, each in turn, sent shivers of fear once more over the audience and the moment the musical instruments were stilled the monkeys set up an angry chatter.

But when the bass violin grunted out a few notes, the monkeys gazed at each other and at the instrument in seeming amazement. They crowded to the bars and blinked their eyes as if trying solemnly and with all the power at their command to understand.

Try Magnesia For Indigestion

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried papain, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and get little more than slight temporary relief—sometimes not even that. But before giving up to chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little hydrated Magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate or milk, but pure hydrated Magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment, and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.

—GOOD YIELD.—Mr. Freeman Campbell who has been in the employ of Mr. James Gillespie, Long River, has been in the Prince County Hospital for some time under treatment. Recently he underwent an operation for appendicitis and he is progressing favorably, and expects soon to return to Mr. Gillespie's fully recovered. Mr. Gillespie reports a bumper crop of potatoes especially from those he sprayed regularly. This proves that, if potato growers want results, they must protect the safety of the staff until it has performed its work. Mr. Gillespie modestly says that with a small lot of help he gathered about 1,000 bushels in one day and a half. The potatoes were of Irish cobbler variety and the quality is excellent.

GAS MASKS IN PARLIAMENT

The other day, in the British House of Commons, Commander Kentworthy, World War veteran, asked the Government to supply gas masks to the whole British population south of the River Tweed, arguing that in the next war the civilians will need them more than the soldiers.

He added: "I have mine. I have the one I used during the war—" "Put it on!" yelled several members.

"Not here," said Kenworthy suavely. "It would be quite useless for the kind of gas we get here."

"Listen," remarked the exasperated driver over his shoulder. "Lindbergh got to Paris without any advice from the back seat."—Detroit News.

The large offering received is part of the school's annual contribution
