able of a threat against Dudas voiced by an acquaintance whose name he did not know. "I will get even with Dudas if it takes me six months," he quoted the other man as saying the day before the blast.

Questioned

Plan Investigations

While police checked up on these angles, co-operating with Fire Marshal J. A. Rudland and his aides, plans were laid for two separate investigations. Magistrate J. L. Barnhill, on instructions from Dr. J. V. Woodbury, medical examiner, was to open an enquiry next week while the civic firewards committee was to institute its own probe.

Meanwhile, preparations were made for the burial of the explosion's victims—two young children, tomorrow Mrs. Daniel Dudas will be buried with Leslie "Sonny" Dudas, 4, and Peter, 1 1/2 years old. one of them resembled that of Egon Kramer, Kalem's companion. The girl's name, police said, was given as Marie Vjoudroch. She was said to be 34 years old, Czechoslovakian and of great beauty.

Meanwhile, dispatches from Belgrade said "precautions" were being taken along the Italo-Yugoslav frontier, particularly around Trieste, Ljubljana and Zara, to prevent incidents which might trouble relations between Italy and Yugoslavia.

Yugoslav officials, waiting to crown young Peter as king and bury Alexander in state, said the country was tranquil but Italian newspapers published reports of disquiet in Yugoslavia that caused concern.

Police sought still another suspect Sylvester Citalny, in the Fontainebleau forest and the greatest manhunt in Europe's recent years rounded up dozens of foreigners here and elsewhere, most of them promptly released, police revealed that Popschil, alias Yaroslav Novak, fled Yugoslavia to escape death for murder.

Police commissar Pettit, who was almost as worn out as the prisoner, said Popschil was saying "if I had received an order to execute the king I would execute the king at the risk of my own head because this order would come from a revolutionary organization of which I am a member."

Left Hungary and went to Munich. Commissary Pettit said, where he met two other men. The group continued to Zurich where it was joined by two others, among them Kalem.

After several days Kalem and Zilni left, presumably for Marseille, while Popschil and Rajlich waited at Paris. When they learned of the assassination, they decided to leave France and were nabbed near the border.

FERGUSON NOT RETURNING TO CANADA

Yesterday's Press Report Due to Misunderstanding.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—(C. P. Cable)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was on the ocean tonight bound for Canada, but Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who had been reported as travelling with him, was returning to London after bidding the Premier farewell at Liverpool.

The Canadian High Commissioner's plans to go to Liverpool in company with Premier Bennett led to an erroneous announcement last night that Mr. Ferguson also was returning to Canada, the announcement causing surprise here, and in Canada speculation on the possibility of an early general election, since Mr. Ferguson had just returned from a visit to the Dominion.

The announcement was widely carried by the Press Association, domestic news agency with which the Canadian Press is affiliated through Reuters, and was picked up by many newspapers. Ambiguity in the wording of a statement from the steamship office led to the mistake.

SPORT BRIEFS

We ran into an old friend of ours yesterday in the person of Gene Brodeur of Montreal. Gene is authority on every kind of sport, particularly boxing and hockey.

One youngster that took his eye particularly last winter was Joffre Deslauriers, so he and Newsay "looked him over" and came to the conclusion that he was the makings of a real one. Gene was much surprised when that Deslauriers in Charlottetown and still more so to find that he had as company Getliffe and Bremner.

"What do you think of Des Smith?" we asked. "Have you ever heard tell of him?" "Well, I guess Des is the makings of a star defenceman and next year we'll see him on one of the big pro teams sure. There are a lot of amateurs who play mightily well and to the public eye seem to be ready for pro company. Not so. They lack the necessary finish for the big stuff, but Smith has everything."

"You have another good man in Yvon Renaud. That boy is game. I saw him play in the finals for the Dominion lacrosse championship and as he was the best player on his team his opponents decided to put him out of business. He seemed smashed to a pulp, but kept on playing like a fiend. That is where he got that broken nose."

"I have heard considerable of Jerry McCabe and all to the good, but personally I have never seen him in action. Take it from me," said Gene, "his opposing forwards will have a healthy respect for Des Smith and Renaud. They were among the most colorful players in Ottawa last winter."

Dominion Will Be Guided By Provinces In Code Plan

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—In the course of discussions which are slated for the Dominion-Provincial conference on amendments to the constitution, to be held probably next month, it is anticipated that codes for business and industry will take a prominent place. No official announcement to this effect has been made but it is known that a group of experts have been engaged for some months in study of the evidence presented before the Stevens Committee on price spreads at the last parliamentary session, and formulation of a set of fair trade and industrial codes is believed to be their objective.

DOWN THE BACK STRETCH

Other drivers who have passed away who took part in that exhibition meet whom we readily recall to mind are—Mayor F. S. Brown and Ronnie Steele.
