Prince Michael of Kent, a lively little boy who is the only Royal expert on bacon-slicing, celebrated his sixth birthday last Saturday. In his public appearances when he is away from the village of Iwer, Buckinghamshire, and therefore cannot be turning the handle of the grocer's bacon-slicing machine, he is often the main attraction although far more famous people are present.

For Michael, as a Royal page and train-bearer made Westminster Abbey gasp when he tottered and stumbled as Princess Elizabeth's wedding procession moved towards the altar; yawned a mighty yawn and rubbed his stomach before the film cameras when the Royal Family posed after the wedding; took his own bows on a Buckingham Palace balcony when other royalty went inside and can be guaranteed—like any other boy of his age—to do the unexpected.

He was born on the United States Independence Day and he is the first of the Royal Family to have an American for a godfather. The late President Roosevelt was invited to be one of his eight godfathers and willingly agreed. Hence the "Franklin" in his name.

His interest in bacon-slicing developed when he was three and almost daily visited Iwer village with his nurse and brother and sister. The children were taught to make little purchases for the Coppins household—and Michael, with single-minded zest, became the slave of the bacon-slicing machine. Thereafter he made a daily pilgrimage and the store employees began to hold back bacon-slicing until he arrived. "I'd rather do this than anything else in the world," said the boy, happily, watching the clean, thin slices fall from the machine.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Mother Love? Selfish Parents Sacrifice Children To Gratify Tyrannical Whims

We glorify Mother Love. Mother devotion has been the theme of countless novels and plays. Mother unselfishness and Mother sacrifices have been celebrated in thousands of pathetic poems. Mammy songs have always been tear-jerkers, and we have made Mother's Day almost a day of religious observance.

Which is as it should be if Mother is a good mother. No honor too great can be paid to the mother who puts her children's well-being above her own; who carries her babies in her arms as well as in her heart, and who makes of her children an altar upon which she lays the offering of her youth and beauty and the desire for pleasure that belong to her time of life.

But let it not be forgotten that while, thank God, most mothers are good mothers who are self-abnegating angels, there are many mothers who are so utterly heartless and cruel and self-centered that they do not hesitate to break their children's hearts and wreck their lives to gratify their desire to keep them enslaved to them.

These are the mothers who refuse to let their sons and daughters marry and set up homes of their own because they cannot bear to be parted from them. So John has to give up the fine girl he loves, who would have filled his house with happiness and splendid children.

GROWING A STOMACH OR INTESTINAL ULCER

An ambitious young man began to have a pain in his stomach regularly from two to three hours after eating food. He consulted a physician, who found that he had an ulcer.

The young man was put on a diet, which gave him considerable relief. In addition to following the special diet, he took alkaline powders to reduce the degree of acidity of the stomach (gastric) digestive juice.

He kept free of pain for nearly two years when an emotional disturbance occurred and his symptoms returned. As the X-ray showed the ulcer healed but blocking the passage of food from the stomach to the small intestine, allowing only fluids to pass, an operation was performed. As the patient was recovering from his operation, he told his physician that he would now be free of all his symptoms. He was greatly surprised when his physician told him that as he was an ulcer-bearing individual he might grow another ulcer.

What is the setup or makeup of the individual who is likely to grow an ulcer?

As a matter of fact, anybody may grow an ulcer of the stomach (gastric) or first part of small intestine (duodenal), should he eat rough foods or have an infection (ulcers, tonsils, gums, sinuses, gall bladder). However, the "usual" type of individual who grows an ulcer is thin, has a narrow body, is quick in his mental and physical actions, and ambitious beyond his physical strength.

It is known that ulcer is caused by too high a percentage of acid in the stomach juice, and that this acid actually bores a hole—ulcers—in the coats of the stomach. Should the hole go all the way through, it is called a perforated ulcer, which is a dangerous condition. It is this high-strung, nervous, emotional makeup that

MODERN METHODS

"Did you say I'll have to hire four electricians to help me rebuild this house?" asked the amazed owner.

"Yes," warned the boss carpenter. "Union rules, you know. One man to put in outlets upstairs, another man to put them in downstairs."

"But that's only two."

"Yes, I know, but the third man sees that the downstairs man doesn't put them in upstairs and the fourth man sees that the upstairs man doesn't put them in downstairs."

makes the stomach juices manufacture more acid glands than is manufactured by the calm or less emotional individual.

For the foregoing reasons it is recognized that despite medical, dietary and surgical treatment, the patient must acquire calmness to prevent development of ulcer.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

The cream can containing our initial sending was set in place by the mill for the cream-man in the dewy freshness of this morning by the two older ones at Alderlea. Younger folk would have been on the scene presently, and well in time for his coming, but we were well satisfied to officiate at this ceremony ourselves. Indeed, briskly we moved down the short-cut which led to the spring, I following James' footsteps along the wet and scented path through the hay. We said smugly, proud of our early rising "I don't believe they're up yet!" indicating the house on the hill "nor are they" of the one across the lane. But even as we spoke other smokes than ours, then boiling the kettle and cooking the breakfast-porridge for Jamie and us, rose darkly into the blue of (Continued on Page 3)

GLAZED STRAWBERRY TARTS

3 cups strawberries
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 cup cold water
Tart shells, baked

METHOD: Measure one cup of the less attractive berries and wash, hull, and crush them. Reserve the other berries and leave them whole. Add the sugar, 1/2-cup water and salt to the crushed berries and heat this slopily to the boiling point, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Then remove from the heat and strain the mixture. Return to the stove and add the cornstarch that has been mixed to a paste with the 1/4-cup cold water. Bring this to the boiling point and cook until the mixture is thickened. Cool slightly.

Wash and hull the remaining whole berries and divide them up in baked tart shells evenly. Pour the strawberry glaze over these and allow to cool so that the glaze will set before serving.

For Sunday, July 11

SUNDAY'S horoscope is an adverse one, with all affairs seemingly working in reverse gear. While there may be a gesture of help or understanding from those in influential places, even this could be forfeited or dissipated by rash, headlong and befuddled thinking, erratic conduct and nervous tension. A sudden decision to uproot the prevailing state of affairs, may only aggravate the situation, causing estrangements and other disasters. The only safe way to avert disaster and regret is firmly to preserve the Sabbath orthodox activities.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, are on the eve of a period calling for much serious thinking, based on sound and practical rationalization, and not by flying into tantrums, confusion and wild actions, with in temperate speech or writings. A sudden disruptive occurrence may upset the judgment, so beware of anger and excite, as to cause tumult and strife from many directions. Nervous tension, reckless moves, may alienate friendly understanding and scatter the forces and resources, with unhappy reactions on all hopes and desires. Maintain calm and amiability under all provocations.

If It Is Your Birthday

A child born on this day is likely to have a very temperamental and passionate nature, erratic and wayward. It should receive early discipline and direction.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast

is for a continuation of disintegrating and uprooting situations, with unpredictable and perplexing problems to be taken under calm and studied deliberation. It would be easy to move in the wrong direction under tension, high pressure and confused judgment. Consequently it may be the part of wisdom to postpone action especially since there may be an obscure or subtle development to further confuse the issue. Keep alert to
