The coroner severely reprimanded two jurors who did not appear until after the inspection was made.

The police today advanced the theory that the woman was not fleeing from her husband and knew nothing about his intention to shoot her. DESERTED BOAT TELLS TRAGEDY.

EDMONTON, Sept. 18.—Word was received by the mounted police this morning from Percy Cross of Athabasca Landing that a large boat which is thought to have been occupied by Ralph Heath and a man named McGold, prospectors, was found 12 miles above the mouth of the Pembina river last week. The boat contained shotguns, supplies and clothing, and it is thought to have been tied to the shore on the spot where it was found for several months, but the owners were nowhere to be found.

The mounted police have investigated the case and find that McGold and Heath left Wolf Creek on April 20 to go to the Macleod river and drop down to the river to the Landing. They expected to return to Wolf Creek about June 20. They have not been seen since April 20, and it is thought that they have either been drowned, or have wandered away and lost themselves.

SIX SAILORS DIED.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 20.—On the Pacific liner Oropesa, which arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday, there came Captain Robert Thomas, his wife, and child, and three sailors of the sailing ship Cricketh Castle, of London, which was abandoned off Cape Horn on July 15.

When it was decided to abandon the vessel, which was hopelessly waterlogged the captain, his wife, and their four-year-old son, the second officer, and thirteen of the crew left the ship in the large lifeboat, while the first and third officers and five of the crew left in a smaller boat.

The experience of the former party during the first night in the open boat, says the South Wales Argus, was terrible, the captain describing it as the worst he had known during the twenty-two years of his seafaring life. That night the Captain thinks the second boat must have been swamped, as nothing was seen of it afterwards.

Captain Thomas was himself washed out of the lifeboat, but was saved by his wife, who caught him by his clothing, enabling two of the men to pull him aboard again. Three of the men died, during the night, and they were followed by three others before the survivors reached land seven days later.

GOOD RECITAL LAST NIGHT

The recital in St. Paul's School-room last night was attended by a large and appreciative audience.

The ability of the performers, Miss Penelope Davies of Edmonton and Prof. Watkins of Charlottetown, is such that a rare musical treat was provided.

The range and quality of Miss Davies' vocal powers were such as enthralled her hearers, who most enthusiastically encored her.

Prof. Watkins, the master pianist, played a number of classical selections to the great pleasure of all. His excellent technique and expression were well exemplified in Moszkowski's "Cradle Song," and Sternberg's "Carppe Hippique."

The recital was held under the auspices of the W. A. of St. Paul's Church.

Hall, of Connecticut, assistant curator in the Mediterranean section of the museum, who has just returned to this country.

The expedition found the means for fixing a date of the declining years of the great Minoan Kingdom that flourished two millenniums B.C., according to Miss Hall. She told of the finding of the ruins of an ancient Minoan town on the eastern side of Crete, and said:

"We found bronze tripods, swords and ornaments, and of a special interest a number of Egyptian scarabs which furnished the means of fixing the date of this ancient town, for the scarabs are dated 950 to 850 B. C."
